At 31 May, £3.47 billion had been raised by the Lottery for the good causes and this was matched by awards totalling £3.46 billion. The funds in the NLDF are therefore committed to projects that will be developed over the next few years. The majority of these projects will be completed before 2000–2001, but a few will require funding beyond that date.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be publishing a White Paper next month setting out the Government's proposals to deliver our commitments to widen access to the benefits of Lottery, introduce a more strategic and co-ordinated approach to distribution of proceeds and ensure that as much money as possible goes to the good causes.

Football

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what support is available for smaller professional football clubs which secure promotion to higher divisions to improve and increase their seating capacity to cope with higher attendances. [5178]

Mr. Banks: Financial assistance is available to football clubs for ground improvement and redevelopment work through the Football Trust. I recently announced a £55 million cash injection to the Trust for clubs at all levels of the game. I am very grateful to the English Sports Council for their contribution to this work and to the Football Association and the FA Premier League for agreeing to match Lottery funds pound for pound.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals he has to encourage smaller professional football clubs to develop closer links with their local communities. [5177]

Mr. Banks: I am aware that many clubs have already done a lot of good work in developing links with their communities, which I welcome. This is also an area that I have in mind for the proposed Football Task Force, to see what more might be done.

Lottery Grants (Torbay)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many Lottery grants have been awarded to organisations and groups in the Torbay constituency; and what are the values of those grants. [5585]

Mr. Banks: At 22 June, 7 grants totalling £310,215 had been made to organisations and groups in Torbay. The details are as follows:

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Llanelli, (Mr. Davies) of 2 June, Official Report, column 85, what other personal appointees are working in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; what is their status; and if he will make a statement. [5575]

Mr. Robin Cook: I have appointed Dr. David Mathieson as my adviser with special responsibilities for media matters involving party political issues. This appointment is not remunerable from public funds.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will name the Ministers, officials and political advisers in his Department who will be involved directly in the Strategic Defence Review. [5610]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is closely involved in the Government's Strategic Defence Review, as it is foreign policy led. He involves other Ministers, officials and special advisers as necessary.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it remains the Government's assessment that there is no evidence for the involvement of any nation other than Libya in the Lockerbie bombing. [4566]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The independent criminal investigation concluded that there was evidence to support charges against the two Libyans accused. The investigation has not established evidence of involvement of the nationals of any other country in the bombing.

Amsterdam European Council

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the subject areas under (a) the existing Treaty provisions and (b) the proposed new Treaty provisions in respect of which it was agreed at the Amsterdam European Council that co-decision procedure should be extended. [5625]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Copies of the relevant extracts from the provisional version of the draft Treaty of Amsterdam circulated by the Netherlands Presidency have been placed in the Libraries of the House. The Presidency is reviewing its contents in consultation with Member States to ensure that it accurately reflects what was agreed at Amsterdam.

WPC Yvonne Fletcher

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the Adjournment debate of 11 June, Official Report, columns 1253–60, if he will review his approach to the United Nations policy on sanctions against Libya, on the basis of the film which has been sent to him relating to the death of WPC Yvonne Fletcher. [5854]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The United Nations Security Council resolutions set out the requirements which Libya must meet before sanctions are lifted. These requirements do not relate to the murder of WPC Fletcher.

Gibraltar

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives he plans to include Gibraltar airport in EC air liberalisation measures. [6121]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We are prepared to consider any practicable proposal for developing Gibraltar airport which is acceptable to all parties. This would open the way for EC air liberalisation measures to apply to Gibraltar.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy on the enfranchisement of Gibraltarians in elections to the European Parliament. [6122]

Mr. Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 5 June, Official Report, column 216.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements have been made at the Amsterdam summit for Gibraltar to be able to enter the Schengen area if it decides it is in its interests to do so. [6120]

Mr. Henderson: It is for the United Kingdom as the Member State to decide whether or not to apply to join in any, or all, of the Schengen arrangements.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Katse Dam, Lesotho

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contribution her Department is making to seismology research in respect of the Katse Dam in Lesotho. [4503]

Mr. Foulkes: DFID provides no direct support for seismological research in respect of this Dam. Seismic activity associated with the project is however being continuously monitored by the Government of Lesotho (Lesotho Highlands Water Authority) and a panel of experts.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the projects supported by Britain in Sierra Leone in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement on aid to Sierra Leone. [5018]

Claire Short: I have placed in the Library of the House a list of projects supported under the bilateral aid programme to Sierra Leone between 1992–93 and 1996–97.

We have suspended all current aid activities in Sierra Leone following the coup and made clear that existing plans will not be continued under a military régime.

Ghana

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the projects supported by Britain in Ghana in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement on aid to Ghana. [5017]

Clare Short: I have placed in the Library of the House a list of the projects supported under the bilateral aid programme for Ghana between 1992–93 and 1996–97.

We are working in close partnership with the Ghanian Government and people to support their efforts to achieve sustainable growth and reduce poverty.

Tropical Deforestation

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what research her Department has evaluated into the links between land clearance for cattle farming and tropical deforestation. [5849]

Clare Short: My Department has evaluated substantial research carried out by US and Brazilian institutions, some of which has been commissioned by the Inter-American Development Bank and by the World Bank into links between land clearance from cattle farming and tropical deforestation. Staff in my Department use this information when they appraise project proposals.

WALES

Welsh Office Overseas Trade Services

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of operation of the Welsh Office Overseas Trade Services section; and if he will make a statement. [5696]

Mr. Hain [holding answer 27 June 1997]: I have recently reviewed the services and work of the Overseas Trade Services in the Welsh Office. My officials are also ensuring that they keep in close touch with the review being carried out by the national export forum. The recently formed International Business Services in Wales Steering Group will keep under the review the services provided in Wales to firms wishing to enter the export market.

Health Bodies (Funding)

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total amount of the borrowings from his Department of (i) the Dyfed-Powys health authority and (ii) the Morriston Hospital Trust, at the latest available date. [5644]

Mr. Win Griffiths [holding answer 27 June 1997]: To date, Dyfed Powys Health Authority has received loans totalling £2.510 million from the Department.

Since Morriston NHS Trust was established on 1 April 1994 it has borrowed some £21 million. The balance of principal outstanding is £16.5 million.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5345]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have appointed John Adams and Huw Roberts as my Special Advisers. The terms and conditions of each appointment are set out in the draft model contract, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Both advise me on a full range of subjects under my responsibility in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the Model Contract.

During the year 1996–97 there was one Special Adviser.

Farmers

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each of the unitary authorities and for Wales for (a) 1980, (b) 1990 and (c) the last two available years (i) the estimated number of farmers and (ii) the estimated number of organic farmers, indicating (ii) as a percentage of (i). [4858]

Mr. Win Griffiths: As at June 1997, there are 86 farms held on the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards (0.3 per cent. of the total number of Welsh main holdings). No figures are available for earlier dates, or for unitary authorities.

Figures are available for Wales of the area of land registered as organically farmed. These are given as follows:

Year	Organically farmed land (hectares)[1]	Total agricultural land area (hectares)[2]	Organically farmed land as percentage of total land
1996	3,287	1,509,061	0.2

[1] Figures supplied by the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards, land in conversion and converted.
[2] Excludes Common rough grazing land.

Beef

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which health trusts in Wales purchase beef from Wales or elsewhere in the United Kingdom for consumption by hospital patients. [5987]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The information requested is not held centrally. Decisions on the purchase of food lie with each NHS Trust in Wales.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many local education authorities allow beef to be included on school menus; and what is the policy of each local education authority in Wales on the purchase of British beef for school meals. [5988]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is not held centrally, but I am, of course, keen to see the highest nutritional standards in school meals. Local education authorities and schools will wish to take into account parents' views and to offer a choice of dishes whenever possible.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Drugs

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list by type of drug the number of persons for each police authority in England and Wales (a) cautioned, (b) proceeded against in a Magistrate's Court and (c) tried at the Crown Court for possession of a proscribed drug in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) the last 12-month period for which figures are available. [4795]

Mr. Ingram: The information is not available in the format requested and would incur disproportionate cost to provide.

However, the number of persons who were cautioned for the possession of controlled drugs in 1994 and 1995 was 363 and 286 respectively. Figures will not be available for 1996 until the end of July 1997.

The following table sets out the number of persons proceeded against for possession of a controlled drug in a Magistrate's Court and in a Crown Court between 1994 and 1996.

Persons proceeded against for possession of a controlled drug in a Magistrate's Court or in a Crown Court 1994–96

Unemployment

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if she will make a statement on the costs of implementing her Department's proposals to deal with long-term unemployment assuming a scheme to cover 40,000 persons; [5141]

(2) if she will list the measures available for unemployed people to seek (a) training and (b) retraining. [5139]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

PARLIAMENTARY QUESTION NO. 5141

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency to reply to your question regarding the costs of implementing proposals to deal with long-term unemployment.

In the current financial year the Agency will be spending over £37 million to assist people unemployed for at least a year, back to work through the Action for Community Employment programme, the pilot Community Work Programme and Enterprise Ulster. These three measures provide over 6,700 places for the long-term unemployed.

In order to ensure the most effective and efficient use of existing resources the Agency is currently engaged in a review of its measures. The results of the initial stages of the review, which involved a public consultation process, are currently being assessed. Our work is continuing within the wider context of the Government's Welfare to Work proposals and the priority attached to them.

With regard to projected costs, we are of course currently committed to plan within the limits set by the 1996 Public Expenditure Survey.

I hope that you find this reply useful.

PARLIAMENTARY QUESTION NO. 5139

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about the measures available for unemployed people seeking training and retraining.

The Agency administers a broad range of programmes to assist the unemployed who are seeking training or retraining. These are:

Jobskills Programme

Jobskills is an integrated programme which provides high quality NVQ based training to unemployed persons aged between 16 and 59. There are approximately 15,000 places available during 1997/98.

Young people aged 16 and 17 are guaranteed a Jobskills training place. Places are available also for adults seeking training or retraining.

Training Centre Network

The Agency's network of Training Centres provides for young people and adults full-time training and re-training leading to NVQ level 2 in a chosen skill or trade. On completion of the training, which usually lasts for 12 months, trainees are normally placed with employers to continue their training towards the achievement of NVQ level 3 under the guidance of Training Centre staff. The Centre also provides tailored pre-employment training in connection with new inward investment projects, usually for a period of 6–10 weeks, to enable unemployed people to improve their prospects of getting a job.

Open Learning Centres

The Agency also supports the work of 12 Open Learning Access Centres which provide flexible job-related training for those for whom traditional forms of education and training are inappropriate. The main client groups for these Centres are the unemployed, women returning to the labour market and those with disabilities.

Enterprise Ulster

Enterprise Ulster is a statutory organisation which provides employment, training and work experience for adults, particularly 18–25 year olds, who have been unemployed for more than three months. Its programmes include training in projects of an environmental and amenity nature. Enterprise Ulster provides an average of 1,260 places each year.

Community Work Programme

The Community Work Programme offers long-term unemployed adults employment and training placements of up to three years duration in worthwhile and meaningful work of community benefit. It has been operated on a pilot basis since 1995 and provides 1,000 places which have been filled.

Action for Community Employment

The Action for Community Employment (ACE) programme provides temporary employment, with training, of up to one year's duration for long-term unemployed adults in projects of community benefit. The essential purpose of the scheme is to enable participants to complete more effectively for available jobs. ACE employees differ from participants on other Agency programmes in that they are treated as being in paid employment and receive a wage based on the local rate for the job. ACE is providing an average of 5,200 places during 1997/98.

Bridge to Employment Pilot

The Agency, with support from the EU Special Programme for Peace and Reconciliation, is piloting a Bridge to Employment programme under which long-term unemployed adults and those in danger of becoming long-term unemployed, can obtain the minimum skills necessary to enable them to compete for known job opportunities on equal terms with other applicants. Typical training would be for a period of up to 13 weeks to a specification agreed with participating employers.

Management Development

The Agency provides programmes aimed at developing management skills and competencies in recently qualified graduates. Almost 400 places are available in 1997/98.

New Horizons

New Horizons provides retraining for experienced managers who have been made redundant. The programme provides 36 places.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Special Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the special advisers in her Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in her Department in the year up to 1 May. [5371]

Marjorie Mowlam: I have appointed Nigel Warner and Anna Healy as my special advisers. They are employed under terms and conditions based on the model contract for special advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Mr. Warner and Ms Healy are advising me in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the Model Contract. The previous Secretary of State for Northern Ireland employed one special adviser between 26 February and 20 December 1996.

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of adult (a) men and (b) women in Northern Ireland are cigarette smokers in each 10 year age band; and if he will make a statement. [4760]

Mr. Worthington [holding answer 24 June 1997]: Estimates of the number and percentage of adult men and women cigarette smokers in Northern Ireland in 1995 are shown in the table.

Cigarette smoking among adults, by age and gender, Northern Ireland 1995

Per cent./numbers

	Males		Females
Age	Percentage of smokers	Estimated number of cigarette smokers	Percentage of smokers	Estimated number of cigarette smokers

Notes:

1. The percentages have been calculated from the NISRA (Central Survey Unit) Continuous Household Survey 1994–95.

2. The number of smokers has been estimated using NISRA (Demography and Methodology Branch) mid-year population estimates, and the percentages of smokers.

3. Percentages have been rounded to the nearest whole figure.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary asked for information on the testing of (a) the weapons used to fire plastic baton rounds and (b) plastic baton rounds during his inspection in 1996. [6114]

Mr. Ingram: Her Majesty's Inspector was asked to examine the RUC's use of plastic baton rounds, not the baton rounds themselves and the weapons used to fire them. Nevertheless, during the course of his inspection he satisfied himself that all weapons are tested prior to being taken into use and in the event of a complaint being received as a result of an incident involving the use of a baton gun, the weapon is tested to assess the accuracy of its sighting system and to assess that it functions correctly.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary was informed of the results of tests carried out in 1995 on plastic baton rounds when he discussed the subject with officers at all levels during 1996. [6112]

Mr. Ingram: At the time Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary carried out his inspection it would have been impossible for the RUC to inform him of the results of tests carried out in 1995 on plastic baton rounds, since they were not aware of them.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Crown Immunity

Ms Walley: To ask the Right hon. Member representing the House of Commons Commission if she will make a statement on Crown immunity in the Palace of Westminster. [4833]

Mrs. Ann Taylor [holding answer 27 June 1997]: Legislation affecting Crown immunity in the Palace of Westminster is a matter for HM Government.

However, it is the policy of the Commission, notwithstanding immunities and exemptions provided for in legislation, to apply relevant statutory provisions throughout the parliamentary estate. These include building and asbestos regulations, planning regulations, standards under the Fire Precautions Act 1971 (the Palace and outbuildings have now been issued with individual fire certificates) and requirements under the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Housing Conditions

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what proposals he has for consultation with interested bodies following publication of the report of the 1996 English House Condition Survey; [5144]

(2) what evaluation of the risks to the health and safety of occupants of living in unfit and otherwise inadequate dwellings will be included in the 1996 English House Condition Survey; [5145]

(3) what assessment of the costs to the NHS of people living in unfit houses will be included in the 1996 English House Condition Survey; [5146]

(4) what account the 1996 English House Condition Survey will take of the impact of proposals for amending the housing fitness standard. [5189]

Mr. Raynsford: The results of the 1996 EHCS will be widely disseminated. We shall consider arrangements for consultation with those bodies which have an interest in housing conditions when these results are published.

The first report of the 1996 EHCS, to be published later this year, will show the number of dwellings that were, at the time of the survey, unfit under the current housing fitness standard, and those that were in other respects inadequate. The report will also identify the occupants of poor housing, in terms of their age, income, and other characteristics. Some information on the health of occupants was recorded during the course of the survey and the analysis of this information will be included in future reports.

There are no plans to include an estimate of the cost to the NHS of people living in unfit dwellings in any report of the 1996 EHCS. Further research is required to identify specific costs to the health service which might be directly attributable to people living in unfit homes.

The 1996 EHCS will report housing conditions in terms of the fitness standard as it is now defined. However, 1996 EHCS data will be helpful in assessing the effect of any changes to the standard proposed in the current review.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what research has been undertaken to ascertain the costs to the NHS of people living in dwellings which are unsatisfactory on grounds of (a) dampness, (b) inadequate fire precautions, (c) poor indoor air quality, with particular reference to radon, (d) hazardous internal design features and (e) homes energy rating (SAP) of 30 or less; [5149]

(2) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effects on demand on the national health service from increased investment in improving housing conditions; and to what extent health and safety issues are taken into account when local authorities devise their housing strategies. [5150]

Mr. Raynsford: The reviews conducted by the Building Research Establishment of Building regulation and health and Building regulation and safety, published in 1995, and Building regulation and fire safety, to be published later this year, give an indication of the relative risks to health and safety of dampness, inadequate fire precautions, poor indoor air quality and radon, hazardous internal design features and cold homes.

The Department has also contributed recently to the fifth sweep of the National Child Development Study which includes housing and health data and we are currently considering options of the analysis of this material. We have also seen studies made by others in London, Sheffield and elsewhere.

A common feature of all this research is the lack of reliable evidence of changes in health which follow from changes in housing conditions. However, the Department has recently published a research report Housing and Health Research: measuring the health benefits of housing improvements which explores the feasibility of researching the links between health and housing conditions and we are considering with the Department of Health ways in which these could be established.

In developing their housing strategies it is for local authorities to take account of the needs of all people in their areas and decide on priorities accordingly.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the current definition of fitness used in the review of the housing fitness standard; [5148]

(2) when he expects to publish the outcome of the review of the housing fitness standard which was announced by the previous Government; and what plans he has for subsequent consultation. [5147]

Mr. Raynsford: We are looking at the definition of fitness as part of the current review of the housing fitness standard. We plan to publish a consultation paper in the autumn setting out our proposals in the light of the review.

Special Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5349]

Mr. Prescott: There are three special advisers in my Department. They are employed under terms and conditions based on the model contract for special advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House of Commons. Joe Irvin currently advises me on all areas which are my responsibility, David Taylor advises me chiefly on Regional and Regeneration issues, and Kate Davies advises Gavin Strang on Transport Issues.

There were four advisers in the Department of the Environment in the year to 1 May (Keith Adams, who started in June 1993, Tom Burke, who started in March 1991, Gavin Barewell, who started in May 1993 and Liam O'Connor, who started in March 1994) and one in the Department of Transport (Lucy Miller, who started in July 1995).

Planning Policy Guidance

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review planning policy guidance to give greater preference to the regeneration of town centre and district centre shops and retail outlets, as against out-of-town and greenfield retail developments; and if he will make a statement. [5456]

Mr. Raynsford: PPG6 already gives strong preference to the regeneration of existing centres and sets tough tests for out-of-centre developments, including retail, office and leisure. My Department is closely monitoring the way in which this guidance is being followed. We have no plans to revise it at this moment.

Recycled Paper

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what has been the price per tonne of recycled newsprint in (a) January and (b) June for each year since 1987; and what steps he proposes to facilitate a stable market for recycled paper collected within the United Kingdom. [5454]

Angela Eagle: The Government does not collect these statistics. However, the Paper Federation of Great Britain has collected information on the average prices, paid by British mills, for old newspapers for recycling into newsprint and other paper grades since 1989. These are as follows:

Year	January	June
1989	39.93	38.89
1990	34.41	29.44
1991	28.77	28.16
1992	28.25	26.38
1993	24.50	22.98
1994	20.93	21.44
1995	46.72	116.76
1996	55.05	47.40
1997	28.53	[1]—

[1] Not yet available.

Average prices for newsprint made from recycled fibres are not available, and are based on private contracts. The Government will consider whether any measures are required to improve the market for recycled paper.

Local Government Planning

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards the practice of some local authorities of seeking planning gain. [5607]

Mr. Raynsford: Current policy on planning gain is set out in DoE Circular 1/97. If or when my right hon. Friend proposes a new policy we shall issue a consultation paper for public comment.

Climate Change Convention, Kyoto

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which Ministers will represent the United Kingdom at the Climate Change Convention in Kyoto in December; and what submissions the United Kingdom is making for the Conference Agenda. [4499]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. Friend, the Deputy Prime Minister, intends to go to the Kyoto Conference, but the full UK Ministerial representation will be decided nearer the time. The Conference will focus primarily on negotiation of an agreement on post-2000 commitments to mitigate climate change, in the form of a protocol to the Convention or other legal instrument. A copy of a draft protocol submitted by the European Union has been placed in the Library. We expect the UK and the EU to play a leading role in those negotiations.

Cadmium Disposal

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to deal with the disposal of cadmium after the 1998 ban on the disposal of sludge at sea. [4501]

Angela Eagle: Those responsible for disposing of sewage sludge containing cadmium will have to comply with the existing requirements applying to incineration, spreading on land or other lawful means of disposal.

Algal Blooms

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what initiatives he is taking to deal with the problems associated with eutrophication, with particular reference to the spread of algal blooms. [4502]

Angela Eagle: Localised adverse effects from eutrophication in inland waters are being addressed by requiring the installation of phosphorus removal at 41 sewage treatment works discharging into 29 designated eutrophic Sensitive Areas in England and Wales, as part of the implementation of the EC Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive.

The Environment Agency is currently monitoring some 150 additional potentially sensitive inland waters for the first review in 1997 of Sensitive Area designations under the Directive. As a result of this review, additional water bodies may be designated resulting in new requirements for phosphorus removal at sewage treatment works.

This year we shall also review the position regarding eutrophication problems in coastal waters as part of the implementation of this Directive and the Nitrate Directive. The Environment Agency is currently monitoring 40 potentially eutrophic sites in coastal waters for this purpose.

Mahogany

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to the Under-Secretary of State's oral statement of 11 June, Official Report, column 1099, if he will make a statement on efforts to reach agreement to prevent the wanton destruction of mahogany. [4563]

Angela Eagle: At the recent CITES conference in Harare, the UK and other EU Member States voted in support of a proposal by the USA and Bolivia to list Swietenia macrophylla (Big Leaf Mahogany) on Appendix II of the Convention. The countries present voted in favour of the proposal by 67 to 45, but as at the 1994 conference, this was not sufficient to reach the two thirds majority required to add a new species to CITES. Instead, the conference agreed to set up a working group to protect mahogany from unsustainable logging.

Earlier this week, at the UN General Assembly Special Session, the Prime Minister argued for an early start to negotiations on a Forest Convention as a means of progressing effective international action towards achieving sustainable forestry management.

Housing Benefit (War Pensioners)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend the formulae for determining local authority standard spending assessments to reflect the costs of granting disregards to war pensioners eligible for housing benefit; and if he will make a statement. [5588]

Mr. Raynsford: We have no plans to do so.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Professor Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the decision not to extend the moratorium on CCT for recently formed English unitary authorities. [5880]

Mr. Raynsford: An urgent review of the current CCT framework is already underway in consultation with the Local Government Association. This is considering how the existing CCT legislation and guidance might be brought more into line with the principles of Best Value which we made available to this House on 2 June. Amongst the issues being considered are the timetables for recently formed English unitary authorities. We expect to consult on proposals in mid July with a view to laying new regulations and issuing new guidance in the autumn.

Housing (London)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each London borough for each year since 1993 the average rent levels of (a) local authority tenants, (b) housing association tenants, (c) housing co-operatives, (d) private sector in receipt of housing benefit, (e) other private sector and (f) housing companies in which the local authority is involved. [4412]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 23 June 1997]: The available information on average rents in London boroughs for local authority tenants, housing association tenants (including tenants of housing co-operatives) and private sector tenants in receipt of housing benefit is set out below.

Information on overall average private sector rents and rents for tenants who are not on housing benefit is available only from sample surveys which are not large enough to produce reliable figures for individual local authorities. Data from the 1995–96 Survey of English Housing and Family Resources Survey show that, in overall terms, the average rent in London for households renting in the private sector who are not in receipt of housing benefit was little different from the average rent for households receiving housing benefit. Like all estimates for surveys, the average rent figures are subject to sampling variability.

No data are available on average rents for housing companies, as none has yet been registered with the Housing Corporation.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what targets he intends to set for the revised Home Energy Efficiency Scheme. [6159]

Angela Eagle: Major changes to the scheme come into force on 1 July and I want to monitor their performance. Accordingly, I have set two targets for the current year: the payment of 400,000 grants, and, for each grant, the achievement of an average energy efficiency improvement of 5 points as measured by the mean Standard Assessment Procedure (SAP). The changes were made by the previous administration, and it is now not practicable to stop their coming into effect on 1 July. But I shall take an early opportunity to review the scheme in order to check that it is meeting the needs of customers.

Bus Route Tenders (London)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable), of 19 June, Official Report, column 278, whether the invitation to tender documents for London bus routes are regarded as commercially confidential. [6119]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is a matter for London Transport Buses, which advises me that it does regard invitation to tender documents as commercially confidential.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Twickenham of 19 June, Official Report, column 278, whether standards of service in respect of London bus routes form part of the consideration in the tendering process. [6118]

Ms Jackson: I understand from London Transport Buses that it does.

Roads Programme Review

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to complete the Roads Programme Review. [5961]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We hope to announce the conclusions of the Review next Spring.

Cycling

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will meet local government representatives to discuss the contribution of local authorities towards the Government's target of a four-fold increase in cycling by 2012; and if he will make a statement. [5805]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The National Cycling Strategy is not the Government's, though we have given it our early endorsement. We intend to work with other to implement it. The Strategy has a common ownership, having been established by consensus involving a wide range of interested bodies.

I shall be meeting representatives of local government when I chair the national Cycling Forum on 16 July. We shall be discussing a range of the issues involved in taking the National Cycling Strategy forward. That will inevitably focus on progress to implement the targets identified in the Strategy for increasing cycle use.

Channel Tunnel (Safety)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of incidents involving Channel Tunnel trains colliding with obstacles on the track and the cause of each incident in (i) 1995–96 and (ii) 1996–97. [5678]

Ms Glenda Jackson: It is the responsibility of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority to ensure the safe operation of the Channel Tunnel. To assist in its task the Authority receives reports on incidents and accidents from the operator—Eurotunnel.

During the periods 1995–96 and 1996–97 only one report was received involving an obstacle on the track. Details of this incident are given in paragraphs 70–72 of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority Annual Report for 1995–96.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the areas of concern expressed by the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority over the proposals from Eurotunnel regarding the immobilisation of coaches in single deck shuttles as referred to in paragraph 50 of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority Annual Report 1995–96. [5675]

Ms Jackson: The principal concern of the Safety Authority was to ensure that coaches were immobilised during travel on single deck Tourist Shuttles. Eurotunnel's proposal for the use of chocks, in addition to the application of the coach parking brake, was accepted by the Safety Authority following tests carried out by Eurotunnel and witnessed by the Safety Authority on 1 June 1995 and a special meeting of the Safety Authority to consider this issue on 7 June 1995.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number and cause of incidents involving drivers of channel tunnel trains passing closed markers or signals at danger in (i) 1995–96 and (ii) 1996–97. [5677]

Ms Jackson: During the period 1995–96 there were seven incident reports concerning drivers passing closed markers. Details of these and the way in which the Safety Authority dealt with these are given in paragraphs 67–69 of the Safety Authority Annual Report for 1995–96.

Nine further incidents were reported during 1996–97 and will be included in the Safety Authority Annual Report for that period.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of incidents which occurred in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97 where coaches carried through the channel tunnel have rolled into the fire barrier at the front of a wagon as referred to in paragraph 56 of the channel tunnel safety authority report 1995–96. [5676]

Ms Jackson: The Safety Authority's Annual Report for 1995–96 gives details in paragraph 56 of two incidents which occurred during the two month period immediately following the decision to accept Eurotunnel's proposal to cease chocking coaches on single deck tourist shuttles. In one of these incidents the coach rolled into the fire barrier.

No other incidents have been reported since Eurotunnel resumed the chocking of coaches.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the dates of emergency exercises undertaken in the channel tunnel during 1996–97. [5687]

Ms Jackson: There were three emergency exercises in the Channel Tunnel during this period.

TABLEX III was a table-top exercise held on 9 May 1996 in Folkestone. The exercise scenario was of a fire in a heavy goods vehicle on board an HGV shuttle travelling from the UK to France.

BINAT 8 was a full binational emergency exercise which took place during the night of 9 and 10 November 1996. The scenario was of an accidental explosion in a single deck tourist shuttle, followed by a fire.

There was also a Eurostar evacuation exercise staged to support Eurotunnel's submission to restart Eurostar and Tourist shuttle services following the fire in the tunnel on 18 November 1996.

A report on each of these exercises will be included in the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority Annual Report for 1996–97.

Train Services (Safety)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that research undertaken by individual train operating companies will be disseminated to all other train operating companies if it contains important safety implications. [5602]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The results of research commissioned by an individual train operating company would normally be the company's intellectual property and is therefore disclosed at the company's discretion. I understand, however, that if the results of any research are known to have wider safety implications for the railway industry, the Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate would expect the information to be communicated to these companies by those who commissioned the work.

The Health and Safety Commission's Railway Industry Advisory Committee (RIAC) is developing proposals to ensure that key health and safety information continues to reach all those who need it.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of incidents in (i) 1995–96 and (ii) 1996–97 when contractors have been directed to work on the wrong track, similar to that referred to in paragraph 75 of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority report 1995–96. [5670]

Ms Jackson: There have been no other reported incidents similar to that reported in paragraph 75 of the Safety Authority Annual Report for 1995–96.

School Buses

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action the Traffic Commissioners propose to take in respect of the discovery of substandard school buses by Suffolk Education Authority and Suffolk Constabulary. [5448]

Ms Glenda Jackson: All operators of school buses are subject to the licensing requirements and disciplinary procedures exercised by the Traffic Commissioner. I understand that, following recent checks carried out by the Vehicle Inspectorate Agency accompanied by the Suffolk Police, the Traffic Commissioner for the area will shortly be receiving recommendations from the Eastern Traffic Area Licensing Review Board. It will then be for him to decide what further action is appropriate.

Ozone Layer (Concorde)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what study he is making of the impact of Concorde on the ozone layer relative to that of aerosols and sulphur particles; and if he will make a statement. [4505]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The importance of aerosols and particles emitted from aircraft has only recently been recognised and there is still uncertainty about the effects. Some data on emissions of oxides of nitrogen (NOx) from Concorde are in the ANCAT/EC Global Inventory of NOx Emissions from Aircraft, in which the UK has taken a leading role. The date are being used extensively by stratospheric ozone researchers and climate modellers internationally.

Heathrow Airport (Terminal 5)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his Department's policy that the construction of Heathrow Terminal 5 is conditional on the widening of the M25. [5648]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government remains strictly neutral in respect of the planning application by BAA plc for a fifth terminal at Heathrow. Arrangements for surface access to the M25 are being considered by the current public inquiry.

SCOTLAND

East of Scotland Water

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what parts of their area of operations East of Scotland Water propose an embargo on all future developments because no additional effluent can be accommodated in the existing sewerage systems. [4612]

Mr. Chisholm: East of Scotland Water has no plans to introduce any such embargoes nor has any power to do so. When the Authority was established last year, however, it inherited insufficient capacity in the public sewerage system in a number of areas which prevents new connections. The areas principally affected are West Edinburgh and South East Edinburgh, and part of West Lothian and Midlothian. The Authority has made substantial progress in procuring additional infrastructure which should result in the lifting of restrictions in these areas from the year 2000.

There are a number of other parts of the Water Authority's area, mainly small towns and rural areas, where restrictions on new connections to the public sewer may also apply. In all of these areas, the Authority plans to take appropriate action as soon as possible to resolve any problems.

Interception of Communications

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what notification his Department receives in respect of the interception of telephone lines by Scottish police forces other than those carried out by the security services under the terms of the Interception of Communications Act 1985; and on how many occasions in the last twelve months Scottish police forces have intercepted telephone lines of suspected criminals. [5129]

Mr. McLeish: Telephone communications may be intercepted only under the personal authority of a Secretary of State. Where an address in Scotland is concerned, it would normally by me right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland whose authority is sought. Information about the number of occasions telephone interception took place is not available in the form requested. But, in 1996, 228 new telephone warrants were issued.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what circumstances plastic baton rounds are used by police in Scotland. [6117]

Mr. McLeish: Plastic baton rounds have not been used by the police in Scotland.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Animal Breeding (Ethics)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what he is doing to respond to the recommendations of the committee chaired by Michael Banner, Professor of Moral and Social Theology at King's College, London, on the ethical implications of new technologies in animal breeding. [4500]

Mr. Rooker: Much progress has already been made on the various recommendations in this report, but we will be considering what more is needed.

MAFF already holds annual meetings on the need to conserve farm animal breeds, maintains a register of breeds and supports research on animal biodiversity. In addition, following discussions with the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, a working party was set up last year to look into the role of non-veterinarians in relation to the artificial insemination (AI) of cattle and horses. The results of this exercise, which may affect the way the recommendations of the Banner Committee are taken forward in relation to AI, are currently awaited.

The Farm Animal Welfare Council (FAWC) has been operating the general principles set out in the report for some time now and has established arrangements for liaison with the Animal Procedures Committee. Additionally, an ethicist has been appointed to the Council.

Finally, the Government is presently seeking an acceptable outcome from negotiations on the EC patents Directive taking account of the Banner recommendations.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the work of the Institute of Food Research in Reading in relation to E. coli 157 and bifidobacteria; and if he will make a statement. [4504]

Mr. Rooker: The project in question began just over a year ago. The work is not yet sufficiently advanced to make an assessment of the potential benefits of the results.

Fish Stocks

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he plans to take to implement the recommendations of the House of Lords Science and Technology Committee, Fourth report, 1996–97, sustainable management of North Sea fisheries, (HL 63) into fisheries research relevant to the setting of quotas, and the provision of data on fish stocks. [4564]

Mr. Morley: The Government will be responding to the report in the near future, and I shall send my hon. Friend a copy of the response.

Farmers

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for (a) 1980, (b) 1990 and (c) the latest two available years (i) the estimated numbers of farmers and (ii) the estimated numbers of organic farmers, indicating (ii) as a percentage of (i). [4859]

Mr. Morley: Figures are available on the numbers of registered organic holdings rather than on the numbers of organic farmers as such. No figures are, however, available for 1980 and 1990.

Registered organic holdings and total main holdings in the United Kingdom in the latest two available years are given below. It should be noted that because the organic and general figures are collected on different bases they are not strictly comparable.

Year	(A) Registered organic holdings	(B) Total main holdings	(C) (A) as percentage of (B)
1995 (June)	784	234,921	0.33
1996 (June)	867	234,268	0.37

DEFENCE

Organophosphates

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the disposal of army surplus tents and other equipment sprayed with organophosphates during the Gulf war, indicating whether any equipment was passed on the Scouts movement. [5665]

Dr. Reid: As my noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement has said in another place, what is now known about the use of organophosphate (OP) pesticides during the Gulf War was described in the organophosphate pesticides investigation team report which was published last December. Some of the tents used by British troops were sprayed whilst in theatre with organophosphate-based residual insecticide, which was applied to the outside surfaces. The investigation found no evidence that any clothing, bedding or personal kit was treated with organophosphate-based products, although there exists the possibility that some clothing was contaminated whilst being worn by those using such products for other purposes.

Many of the tents used by British troops during the Gulf war were subsequently burned or buried in theatre because it was generally thought not to be cost-effective to ship such material back to the UK or Germany. It is not now possible to identify those tents which were brought back from the Gulf; some of them are likely to have been retained by units or at depots, while some others will probably have since been sold as surplus stock.

The amount of OP pesticide remaining on a treated surface reduces over time, which is why regular re-application is normally necessary to maintain its effectiveness. Beyond this initial period of effectiveness, those traces of OP pesticide that remain break down naturally through exposure to air and water and normally disappear completely over a period of years. The break down process may be delayed if the compounds are used on material that has been treated with a wax finish, as was the case for tents which were used in the Gulf. However, any traces of OP pesticide that remain on a surface after the initial period of effectiveness would be in small and ever decreasing quantities, which would be unlikely to cause a risk to human health.

Nevertheless, the specific tents which were reported as being a source of illness have been identified by the Scout Association and, at their request, my Department has made arrangements for appropriate tests to be carried out by the Laboratory of the Government Chemist. The results of these tests will be made public as soon as possible.

Beef

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the (a) Army, (b) Royal Air Force and (c) Royal Navy purchase British beef for consumption by service personnel stationed in the United Kingdom; and what are the countries of origin of beef purchased by each of the services from overseas. [5989]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Naval Bases and Supply Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. A. Trewby to Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones, dated 30 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked me to reply to your Question about the supply of beef to the Armed Forces stationed in the United Kingdom.

The task of procuring food for the Army, Royal Air Force and Royal Navy is contracted to the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes (NAAFI). We do not specify the source of origin from which NAAFI should obtain beef (or any other meat), but expect them to seek the best market price for the product. British meat products are considered equally with all others available on the open market. A range of products including sirloin, forerib, minced and diced beef are normally sourced in the UK. However the Armed Forces' requirement is mainly for frozen products and the majority of beef joints are sourced, on cost grounds, from Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, New Zealand and Australia.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors underlay the exclusion of representatives of the UK Lockerbie Families group from the explosives test at Bruntinghthorpe aerodrome on 17 May. [4498]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Tam Dalyell, dated 30 June 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question about the exclusion of representatives of the UK Lockerbie Families group from the recent explosive tests at Bruntingthorpe since, as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) which undertook the tests, this matter is my responsibility.

The research being carried out by DERA is on behalf of the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) and the United States Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and is aimed at exploring what physical effects would result from an explosion in an aircraft at altitude and subsequently what measures might be introduced to contain those effects and limit the structural damage to the aircraft. It was those measures that were being tested in the trial.

Although the media were allowed to cover the event, both DERA and its customers were concerned to ensure that the trial was reported factually as part of a disciplined and ongoing programme of scientific work. To that end DERA agreed to requests from its customers to make it a condition of entry to the site by media crews that they should not be accompanied by other parties who might seek to broaden the coverage into areas not directly concerned with the trial itself. This condition was enforced rigidly and therefore included representatives of the UK Lockerbie Families group. In fact, before the event, several television companies requested that Dr Jim Swire of the 'UK Families–Flight 103' group be allowed to accompany them to watch the trial and were informed that this would not be possible.

The position taken over the trial does not indicate any lack of compassion for the victims and families involved in the Lockerbie disaster. Indeed it is precisely the scale of that tragedy that has prompted the research programme which culminated in the trial at Bruntingthorpe and which, we hope, will eventually bring real benefit to aircraft safety.

Combined Cadet Forces

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the amount of money received by each (a) state and (b) independent school in support of combined cadet force activities in each year from 1994–95 to 1997–98. [6074]

Dr. Reid: The Ministry of Defence support to the combined cadet force is principally through access to service facilities and instructors. However, some money is made available to schools with CCFs to defray expenses incurred during cadet activities, and for administration.

This takes the form of an Annual Establishment Grant, calculated on the following basis. The rates given are for 1997–98

A flat rate of £252 per contingent.

A grant of £17.57 for each of the first 40 cadets in each Service section.

A grant of £12.32 for each subsequent cadet in each Service section.

An additional grant of £4.90 for each cadet in an Army section.

The allocation is based on the number of cadets on the strength of the contingent at 1 April each year.

I am placing a detailed list of the amount of money received by each school in support of combined cadet force activities in each year from 1994–95 to 1997–98 in the Library of the House.

Plastic Baton Guns

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidelines for the use of plastic bullets. [6110]

Dr. Reid: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who authorises the use of plastic baton rounds by the Army in Northern Ireland. [6111]

Dr. Reid: Normally the use of plastic baton rounds must be authorised by a commander not below the rank of sergeant.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the Heckler and Koch baton gun (Model L104A1) was introduced for use in Northern Ireland. [6108]

Dr. Reid: The Heckler and Koch baton gun (Model L104A1) was introduced for use in Northern Ireland on 1 June 1994.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) who is responsible for testing the accuracy of the plastic baton rounds used by the RUC and the Army in Northern Ireland. [6109]

(2) who is responsible for testing the accuracy of plastic baton rounds fired by the RUC and the Army in Northern Ireland. [6105]

Mr. Spellar: The baton gun manufacturer was responsible for testing the accuracy of all guns as a part of the manufacturer's acceptance test. The user of the gun is responsible for maintaining its accuracy during training.

The baton round manufacturer is responsible for testing all batches of baton rounds at the time of manufacture, including accuracy firings, to enable the Ministry of Defence to accept them against the proof specification.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances routine Army foot patrols in Northern Ireland carry plastic baton guns. [6113]

Dr. Reid: All routine Army foot patrols in Northern Ireland carry plastic baton guns.

Expenditure

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the relationship between the strategic defence review and the fundamental expenditure review. [5259]

Dr. Reid: There will be one coherent review of defence. The strategic defence review will be the Ministry of Defence's contribution to the comprehensive spending review. It is envisaged that work on the strategic defence review will be completed around the turn of the year.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the present (i) land owning and (ii) leasing arrangements between his Department, AWE and Hunting and Brae in respect of the former AWE site at Llanishen, Cardiff; what proposals he has to (a) decontaminate and (b) redevelop the site; and what consultation he will undertake with the local authority, other agencies and local residents on these proposals. [5499]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 26 June 1997]: The land which forms the AWE sites is owned by the MOD. There are no land owning or leasing arrangements between MOD, AWE plc. and the present operating contractor Hunting-BRAE. The operating contractor's use of the sites is licensed under the term contract between MOD and the company.

The Cardiff site closed on 28 February 1997, and the process to decommission the facilities has started. There will also be a complementary site decontamination process. All work will be undertaken in a careful and progressive manner, in conformity with all relevant guidelines and legislation and the requirements of the regulatory bodies. The MOD has consulted the local authorities as necessary. The local liaison committee was also kept fully informed of the MOD's plans to close the site. The whole process will take a number of years, following which we intend to dispose of the site.

Equipment Exhibition, Farnborough

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will invite hon. Members to attend the forthcoming Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition at Farnborough. [5694]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 27 June 1997]: Invitations to RNBAEE are extended to members of the Defence Select Committee, the Trade and Industry Select Committee, and the All Party Defence Study Group. Exhibitors are also free to invite individual hon. Members. While a blanket invitation is not normally extended to all hon. Members, the Government would be willing to host any Members who express a firm interest in attending.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

8. Mr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on her plans in respect of the functions of the Child Support Agency. [4341]

Mr. Keith Bradley: As I indicated when we debated Child Support on Friday 20 June, we intend to look closely at all aspects of the Child Support Agency to ensure that it provides an efficient and effective service. Children are entitled to the support of both parents wherever they live. My key objectives for the Child Support Agency during the coming year are to sort out cases faster, tackle the backlog of cases, and chase up fathers who avoid paying.

20. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of Child Support Agency orders for payment are in arrears. [4355]

Mr. Bradley: The latest figures show that over two thirds of absent parents with a full maintenance assessment and paying through the Child Support Agency are in arrears. This is not an acceptable situation and we are determined to ensure that the Agency improves its performance in pursuing absent parents for the maintenance that they owe.

32. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the workings of the Child Support Agency. [4368]

Mr. Bradley: We intend to review all aspects of the Child Support Agency to ensure that it provides an efficient and effective service. Our key objectives for the Child Support Agency over the coming year are to sort out cases faster, tackle the backlog of cases, and chase up fathers who avoid paying.

37. Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures she intends to take concerning the operation of CSA appeals procedures. [4373]

Mr. Bradley: We believe that there are a number of changes which can be made to streamline the child support appeals process to provide a better, simpler, more efficient service to clients. We intend to bring forward legislation to improve current appeals arrangements. Further details will be announced in due course.

Pensions

19. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will introduce measures to ensure that the basic pension is increased in line with increasing national prosperity. [4354]

Mr. Denham: There are many ways in which pensioners can share in rising national prosperity—through contributory pension entitlements, through other benefits, or through the income derived from savings.

Our review of pensions will consider the central areas of insecurity for elderly people including all aspects of the basic pension and its value. We will retain the basic pension as the foundation of security in retirement and we will increase it at least in line with prices.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to introduce a flexible decade of retirement. [4356]

Mr. Denham: The pensions review, details of which my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, will announce in due course, will examine all aspects of basic pension and its value.

Poverty

22. Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on her priorities for the reduction of poverty in the United Kingdom. [4358]

Ms Harman: Our priorities in tackling low incomes are to help young people, the long-term unemployed and lone parents into work, and to get help to up to a million pensioners not claiming the Income Support to which they are entitled.

Benefit Claimants

24. Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to improve social security office services to those claiming benefit. [4360]

Mr. Field: We are reviewing the way that the Department does business to ensure the system is more accessible and more responsive to our clients' needs.

There are over 400 sites offering a full range of services. Services for job seekers are provided in over 1,000 job centres.

Benefit Entitlement

26. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures she proposes to ensure that those entitled to benefit have access to, and are aware of, their entitlement. [4362]

34. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps she is taking to increase the take-up of benefits by people entitled to them. [4370]

Mr. Field: We are concerned that up to 1 million pensioners currently miss out on the Income Support to which they are entitled. We want to get help to Britain's poorest pensioners and are commissioning research into the reasons why pensioners fail to claim the Income Support which is their due.

Jobseeker's Allowance

27. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to repeal the jobseeker's Allowance. [4363]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government believes that work is the best form of welfare for people of working age. A programme of monitoring and evaluation is under way to enable us to ensure that Jobseeker's Allowance contributes to achieving our objectives.

Benefit Fraud

28. Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals she has to tackle fraud in the benefit system. [4364]

Mr. Denham: We will be vigilant in tackling fraud, ensuring value for taxpayers' money and rebuilding confidence in the Social Security system. A number of measures to help prevent, deter and detect benefit fraud will be brought in over the next few months and we shall consider what additional measures are needed.

29. Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the level of benefit fraud in the Social Security system. [4365]

Mr. Denham: The previous administration estimated about £4 billion of benefit fraud in the system of which £1 billion is detected. We shall be looking at the assumptions underpinning these figures, and at new information from an on-going programme of work and benefit reviews, to ensure we have a robust measure of the level of fraud. Our aim is to tackle fraud to ensure value for tax payers' money and to rebuild public confidence in the Social Security system.

Housing Benefit

33. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations she has received relating to the proposal to restrict housing benefit entitlement for single claimants under 60 years of age. [4369]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We have received a considerable number of representations relating to this restriction. These were taken account of in our review of the regulations. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, announced her decision on 18 June to revoke the extension of the single room rent for claimants between the ages of 25 and 59.

35. Mr. Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on her plans for housing benefit. [4371]

Mr. Bradley: On 18 June, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, announced her decision to revoke the extension of the single room rent to those aged 25 or over.

More broadly, we will be working with other Government Departments to develop a housing policy which does not trap people on benefit and which generates personal responsibility.

We want a modernised Social Security system which will tackle poverty and welfare dependency and promote work incentives. We will develop a system which supports work, savings and honesty. We will be vigilant in tackling fraud and ensuring value for taxpayers' money. We are, therefore, committed to a review of the Social Security system as a whole, including housing benefit.

Lone Parents

36. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the Government's policy to help lone parents into work. [4372]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government believes that the best form of welfare for people of working age is a job and we are committed to a package of measures as part of our welfare to work strategy which will help lone mothers to move off benefit and into work.

Young People

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has for helping young unemployed people off benefit dependency. [4348]

Mr. Field: We believe that work is the best form of welfare for people of working age. Our new deal for young people will offer opportunities for work, volunteering, training and education.

Child Benefit

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on her plans to reform child benefit. [4361]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Modernising the Social Security system is a key priority of the Government. We are committed to retaining universal child benefit from birth to age 16 and to uprate it at least in line with prices. We are reviewing educational finance and maintenance for those older than 16 to ensure higher staying-on rates at school and college, and that resources are used to support those in most need.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps she is taking to ensure fair medical evaluation of people claiming disability benefits. [4366]

Mr. Denham: As part of our general review of Social Security provision, we will be looking at a number of eligibility issues including the requirements for medical assessment for benefit purposes. A key priority will be to ensure that procedures for determining entitlement are fair and that claimants receive an efficient and high quality service.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the powers of the Independent Tribunal Service in respect of the disability appeal tribunal system with particular reference to the case of Mr. M. McCall of Broughton. [4367]

Mr. Denham: We intend to bring forward legislation to improve current decision making and appeals arrangements in the Social Security system. Further details will be announced in due course.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons the mobility component of the disability living allowance is restricted to people over the age of five years; and if she will make a statement. [5590]

Mr. Denham: We are committed to a review of Social Security with the objective of reducing poverty and welfare dependency and to provide work incentives. Provision for disabled people will form part of that review. We will announce the details in due course.

The mobility component of disability living allowance is paid primarily to help people become independently mobile. Children under the age of five cannot be independently mobile as they need guidance and supervision whilst out of doors.

Benefits Claimants (Medical Examination)

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations she has received on changes to the procedure for DSS medical examinations for claimants; and if she will make a statement. [4357]

Mr. Field: I have received a number of representations about DSS medical assessments from a number of groups representing sick and disabled people, other interested organisations and DSS staff representatives. as part of our general review of Social Security provision we will be looking at a number of eligibility issues including the requirements for medical assessment for benefit purposes. Key priorities will be to ensure that procedures for determining entitlement are fair and that claimants receive an efficient and high quality service and that taxpayers' funds are fully protected.

Appeals

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will set a maximum time for the hearing of appeals to the social security and other related appeals tribunals as part of the Citizen's Charter Initiative; and if she will make a statement. [5993]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Modernising the Social Security system is one of our key priorities. We will streamline services to provide better, simpler more efficient services to clients. We intend to bring forward legislation to improve current decision making and appeals arrangements for all Social Security matters. Further details will be announced in due course.

Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority

Mr. Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she expects to receive the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority's first annual report; and if she will make a statement. [6358]

Mr. Denham: We have laid the first report of the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (OPRA) before both Houses today. It covers the first 12 months of OPRA's existence in which it made the necessary preparations to take up its statutory responsibilities on 6 April 1997.

OPRA has the leading role in helping to ensure that the interests of all members of occupational pension schemes are safeguarded. we are pleased that the efforts made by the Authority during its start up year enabled it to be fully operational from day one.

In-house Bids

Dr. Tony Wright : To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will allow West Mercia Services to make an in-house bid to continue to provide the services it currently undertakes; [4980]

(2) if she will allow in-house bids for departmental contracts. [4988]

Mr. Field: West Mercia Services are part of the Department's Accommodation and Office Services project. This is one of a range of initiatives the Department of Social Security is engaged in to test the value for money of involving external contractors. We will review these initiatives, including Partnerships Schemes, in the light of our objectives for modernising the delivery of the welfare system; the implications for customer service, staff and the taxpayer; our commitment to work within the announced spending totals for the first two years of Government; our aim of getting best value for public money; the scope to apply the private sector's expertise, discipline and economies of scale in procuring public services and securing investment; and the flexibility for government to make changes at a later date.

Written Answers to Questions

DEFENCE

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many claims by British nuclear test veterans have been made; and how many have been settled. [5447]

Mr. Spellar: It is not possible to say precisely how many claims for compensation from the Ministry of Defence have ever been made by British nuclear test veterans. However, my Department's computer records show that since 29 June 1976 109 claims for compensation for radiation linked illnesses have been made by ex-Service personnel who were involved in the British nuclear test programme. All of these cases have been repudiated because independent studies of the health of the test veterans showed that participation in the nuclear testing programme had had no detectable effect on the veterans' life expectation, or on their risk of developing cancer. However, nuclear test veterans may receive a War Pension, which is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security (Mrs. Harman).

Cyprus (Environmental Damage)

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the risks of damage to the environment through British military exercises in the Akamas peninsula in Cyprus; and what measures (a) are being taken and (b) are planned to minimise such damage. [6255]

Mr. Spellar: Every effort is made to minimise the environmental impact of military training on the Akamas peninsula. Particular care is taken to avoid starting fires, the most important potential cause of damage from training. Exercises involving live ammunition are undertaken in the wetter and cooler months to minimise the risk. Use of the area is kept to the minimum required to meet essential training requirements and we have offered to discontinue training on the Akamas altogether if the Government of the Republic of Cyprus can provide a suitable alternative site.

Royal Yacht

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of a possible replacement for the Royal Yacht. [6140]

Dr. Reid: The Government is currently considering the requirement for a replacement Royal Yacht, and will announce its decision in due course.

Army Recruiting Organisation

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about Defence Agency status for the Army's Recruiting Organisation. [6439]

Dr. Reid: On 1 July the Army's recruiting function will be amalgamated with the Army Individual Training Organisation (AITO) which is an existing Defence Agency. As a result of its expanded responsibilities the AITO will be retitled the Army Training and Recruiting Agency (ATRA). The ATRA's Chief Executive, a Major General, will be known as the Director General Army Training and Recruiting (DGATR). The ATRA's headquarters will continue to be based at Upavon, Wiltshire; alongside the Headquarters of the Adjutant General who will continue as the Agency's owner. The Agency will assume responsibility for an additional 598 military and 337 civilian staff employed at various recruiting units, including the Armed Forces Careers Offices and Army Careers Information Offices throughout the country. Altogether the ATRA will employ 11,153 personnel at 178 locations.

The integration of the recruiting and individual training functions into a single Defence Agency will further improve efficiency and effectiveness in the provision of trained manpower to the Army. The ATRA's mission will be "to recruit and train young people to become the best soldiers in the world". The Chief Executive has been set the following Key Targets for the first year of operation:

1. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for Commissioned Officers.[1]
2. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for officers qualified for service in a Field Force Unit following successful Special-to-Arm training.[1]
3. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for officers' professional development training.[1]
4. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for soldiers qualified for service in a Field Force Unit following successful Special-to-Arm Training.[1]
5. To meet the Adjutant General's requirement for soldiers' professional development training.[1]
6. To achieve efficiency savings greater than £20 million in 1997–98. During the year to develop an efficiency index that measures training output and associated costs as a baseline to achieve year on year improvements in efficiency.

I shall arrange for copies of the agency's Framework Document to be placed in the Library of both Houses.

[1] As expressed in the Statement of Training Requirement (SOTRs) which stipulate the numbers to be trained, the standards to be achieved and when the output is required. SOTRs are published (internally within MOD) in AG's Annual Management Plan, although with the agreement of the Agency they may be updated during the year to reflect changes to the requirement.

Defence Analytical Services Agency

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Analytical Services Agency for 1997–98. [6438]

Dr. Reid: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency for financial year 1997–98. The targets build on the progress already made by the Agency since it formed in July 1992 and are as follows:

Delivery of customer service and quality

The majority of the Agency's business is covered by Service Level Agreements with customers, which set out the targets for timeliness and quality of work. For the parts of the business where Service Level Agreements are inappropriate, Project Agreements are in place. The Agency is committed to achieving a continual improvement in the range and quality of the services provided to customers. Key targets are:

(a) To meet at least 95 per cent. of the timeliness and quality targets set in the Service Level Agreements and Project Agreements.

(b) To have at least 90 per cent. of customers saying they are at least satisfied with the timeliness, quality of work and helpfulness of staff in the annual Customer Satisfaction Survey covering all aspects of the business.

(c) To have at least 25 per cent. of customers receiving DASA services in both 1996–97 and 1997–98 report an improvement in the services provided in the annual Customer Satisfaction Survey.

(d) To demonstrate a further, independently assessed, improvement in the quality of published output.

Efficiency and business excellence

The Agency plans to make efficiency savings in 1997–98 as well as meeting the additional demands placed upon it by a number of important studies and initiatives. The Agency is committed to continual improvement and is using the Business Excellence Model as a means of driving this forward. Key targets are:

(e) To achieve a British Quality Foundation validated score of 350 points or more against the Business Excellence Model.

(f) To deliver efficiency savings with a value of at least 2.5 per cent. of the initial running cost cash allocation.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 19 June, Official Report, column 263, what factors underlie the differences of policy between Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary and his Department in respect of the disclosure of the name of the company whose baton gun is authorised for police use in the United Kingdom. [6296]

Dr. Reid: There is no difference in policy between my Department and Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary in this respect. My Answer of 19 June to my hon. Friend, Official Report, column 263, related to the manufacturer of the baton rounds rather than the baton gun.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer of 19 June, Official Report, column 262, what happened on or before 24 March to prompt his Department to advise the RUC that some 1994 plastic baton rounds were outside agreed specification when earlier tests carried out in 1995 were not considered conclusive. [6107]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 30 June 1997]: Following a meeting of MOD technical staff in February 1997 to discuss the baton round development programme, the MOD decided that rounds manufactured in 1994 should be withdrawn from operational use. This decision was taken in the light of the tests carried out in 1995 and further tests which had been conducted in 1996. The 1996 tests showed that batches of rounds manufactured in that year did not exceed the specification and were therefore to be preferred to the 1994 rounds.

Defence Industry (Chelmsford)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what help he will make available to defence-related companies in the Chelmsford area to diversify into non-military activities to offset redundancies in the defence industry; [3784]

(2) what help his Department will make available to employees of Marconi Communications in Chelmsford who have been made redundant to help them retrain and get back into work; and if he will make a statement. [3786]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 16 June 1997]: I have met with the hon. Member to discuss this matter. I understand that he has also raised with the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Small Business, Trade and Industry the question of what help can be made available in the fields of retraining and assistance. The Ministry of Defence does not currently have a role in such measures. However, I hope that in the future our developing policy towards defence diversification will offer some help in similar situations. As I told the House on 16 June, the Government will be making proposals in the autumn on how best to give effect to the objectives for defence diversification as outlined in our manifesto.

Al-Yamamah Contract

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will establish the level of commission paid to individuals to secure the Al-Yamamah contract. [5622]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 27 June 1997]: The British Government have not employed business agents to secure the Al-Yamamah contract and has paid no commissions. Any use of agents by companies associated with Al-Yamamah is a matter for those companies, but the prime contractor, British Aerospace, has assured us that it operates in accordance with the laws and regulations of Saudi Arabia.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will transfer responsibility for that part of Elmbridge currently in the Metropolitan police area to the Surrey police area. [6223]

Mr. Michael: We have no plans to change the boundaries of the Metropolitan police district.

European Court of Justice

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the titles and purposes of those conventions (a) proposed and (b) agreed under the Home and Justice Pillar of the treaty of Maastricht which proposed that the European Court of Justice should have judicial powers in respect of that convention; in each case what was the position of Her Majesty's Government in respect of providing those powers for the Court; and what parliamentary proceedings are planned before ratification of each agreed convention. [5564]

Ms Joyce Quin: Seven conventions have been agreed under the third pillar of the treaty on European Union, and six more are currently under discussion. The information requested is set out in respect of each convention.

Concluded conventions

1. Convention on the Establishment of a European Police Office (Europol Convention)

The purpose is to establish a European police office. The European Court of Justice has jurisdiction over disputes relating to conditions of employment of Europol staff. A subsequent protocol to the convention establishes an optional jurisdiction for the court in respect of points referred by national courts for preliminary rulings. The convention was ratified by the United Kingdom on 10 December following debates in both Houses of Parliament on an order granting Europol legal status in the United Kingdom.

2. Convention on the Use of Information Technology for Customs Purposes (Customs Information System Convention)

The purpose is to enhance the exchange of intelligence between member states on the movement of drugs and other prohibited or sensitive goods. The convention establishes jurisdiction for the European Court of Justice to rule on disputes between member states and between member states and the European Commission. The Court also has an optional jurisdiction to give preliminary rulings on interpretation of the convention, subject to member states declaring whether they will accept this jurisdiction. The convention was ratified by the United Kingdom on 18 June 1997.

3. Convention on the Protection of the European Communities' Financial Interests (Fraud Convention)

The purpose is to ensure that frauds committed against European Community (EC) funds are appropriately criminalised in all member states. The European Court of Justice has jurisdiction over certain parts of the convention to rule on disputes between member states, disputes between member states and the European Commission and proceedings brought by individuals against the Commission. The convention establishes an optional jurisdiction for the Court to give preliminary rulings on the interpretation of the convention and its first protocol, subject to member states declaring whether they will accept this jurisdiction. An order under section 78(3) of the Criminal Justice Act 1993 is required before the convention can be ratified.

4. Convention on the Fight against Corruption Involving Officials of the European Communities or Officials of Member States of the European Union

The purpose is to ensure that acts of corruption by or in relation to European Community or national officials (whether or not to the detriment of the EC budget) are appropriately criminalised in all member states. The European Court of Justice has jurisdiction over disputes between member states, and over disputes between member states and the European Commission as regards certain articles. The convention establishes an optional jurisdiction for the Court to give preliminary rulings on the interpretation of certain articles, subject to the acceptance of such jurisdiction by member states. No further parliamentary proceedings are required to ratify the convention.

5. Convention on Simplified Extradition Procedure between the Member States of the European Union

The purpose is to improve extradition procedures between the member states in cases where the subject consents. The European Court of Justice has no jurisdiction. Ratification of the convention will require amendment of the Extradition Act 1989.

6. Convention Relating to Extradition between the Member States of the European Union

The purpose is to improve extradition procedures between member states. The European Court of Justice has no jurisdiction. Ratification of the convention will require amendment of the Extradition Act 1989.

7. Convention on the Service in the Member States of the European Union of Judicial and Extra Judicial Documents in Civil and Commercial Matters

The purpose is to formalise procedures for the service of documents in civil and commercial matters. The European Court of Justice has jurisdiction to give preliminary rulings on the interpretation of the convention, subject to the acceptance of such jurisdiction by member states. Ratification procedures may require changes to the Rules of Court.

Proposed conventions under discussion

1. Draft Convention on Driving Disqualifications.

The purpose of the convention is to prevent drivers who are given a driving disqualification in a member state from escaping the ban when they travel to another member state. There is no provision for European Court of Justice jurisdiction.

2. Draft Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters between Member States of the European Union.

The purpose of the convention is to update and improve procedures for provision of mutual legal assistance between member states in criminal matters. There is no provision for European Court of Justice jurisdiction.

3. Draft Convention on the Crossing of the External Frontiers of the Member States of the European Union.

The purpose is to provide for common standards of immigration control at the external frontiers of the European Union. The draft convention contains provision for the European Court of Justice to give preliminary rulings concerning the interpretation of the convention and to rule on disputes between member states and the European Commission.

4. Draft Convention on Jurisdiction, Recognition and Enforcement of Judgments in Matrimonial Matters (Brussels II Convention).

The purpose is to allow the recognition and enforcement of judgments in matrimonial matters between member states. No decisions have yet been taken about European Court of Justice jurisdiction.

5. Draft Convention on Mutual Assistance and Co-operation between Customs Administrations (Naples II Convention).

The purpose is to foster operational co-operation and assistance between customs administrations of the European Union. No decisions have yet been made about possible European Court of Justice jurisdiction.

6. Draft Eurodac Convention.

The purpose is to set up a system of collection, storage, exchange and comparison of fingerprints of applicants for asylum, in connection with Article 15 of the Convention Determining the State Responsible for Examining Applications for Asylum Lodged in one of the member states of the European Communities (the Dublin convention—a pre-Maastricht instrument). The issue of possible European Court of Justice jurisdiction has yet to be discussed.

The Government's views

As all conventions agreed under the third pillar require unanimity, it may be taken that Her Majesty's Government were content with any role established for the Court in respect of the concluded conventions. As regards draft conventions still under discussion, the Government's general approach is to consider the possible need for European Court of Justice jurisdiction in each case on its merits.

Schengen Agreement

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent the decision on whether or not to join the Schengen Agreement was influenced by his assessment of the technical and operational documents relating thereto; and if he will make a statement. [6098]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government have no intention of signing the Schengen agreement because it would require the removal of United Kingdom frontier controls with other member states. This decision was not influenced by our examination of documents relating to the implementation of the agreement.

Extradition (Mr. Ronnie Biggs)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the extradition treaty with Brazil is to be concluded; and what steps he is taking to secure the extradition of Mr. Ronnie Biggs. [5605]

Mr. Michael: The United Kingdom/Brazil extradition treaty was signed on 18 July 1995. Both the United Kingdom and Brazil have now completed the necessary domestic parliamentary procedures for ratification. Preparations are in hand for the drawing up of the instrument of ratification for signature by my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary. This will then be forwarded to Brazil where Her Majesty's ambassador will exchange instruments with a representative of the Brazilian Government. The treaty will come into force on the date of the exchange of instruments of ratification. Only then could any request for extradition be made. In line with normal practice, I would not disclose the existence of any request until proceedings had been instituted in the requested state.

Passport Agency (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the policy of the Passport Agency in Northern Ireland in relation to the use of the name of the city and county of Londonderry.[5639]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is the policy of the Passport Agency in Northern Ireland to issue passports showing the place of birth as either Londonderry or Derry, depending on which has been used by the applicant on the application form. The county in which an applicant is born is not recorded on passports.

Mr. Jonathan Aitken

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers and of which rank are currently assigned to investigate the alleged offences of Mr. Jonathan Aitken. [6058]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner informs me that a senior detective from the Specialist Operations Department at New Scotland Yard has been appointed to investigate the allegation. Other detectives will assist the inquiry. They will be selected on the basis of the skills they bring to the task, and not according to their rank.

Asylum Applications

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to announce changes to the handling of asylum applications from nationals of Sierra Leone. [6546]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: In view of the current situation in Sierra Leone, we have decided to declare that that country has undergone such a fundamental change in circumstances that we would not normally order the return of a person to that country for the time being. The effect is that a Sierra Leonean national who entered the United Kingdom previously and applies for asylum within three months of this declaration being made, becomes eligible to claim social security benefits while their application is considered by my Department. No decisions will be made on asylum applications made by Sierra Leonean nationals until the situation stabilises.

Police Act 1997

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to implement part IV of the Police Act 1997. [6547]

Mr. Michael: We intend to bring part IV of the Police Act 1997, which establishes the Police Information Technology Organisation (PITO) as an executive non-departmental public body (NDPB), into force in two stages. In the autumn, we shall appoint the board of PITO and confer on it the necessary powers to bring to fruition the preparations required to establish the NDPB. The board will then take on its statutory functions in respect of police information technology and procurement with effect from 1 April 1998. PITO's new status will bring the police service into the heart of decision making and lead to the improved delivery of cost-effective and timely information technology systems.

PITO was set up in April 1996 on an interim basis as part of the Home Office. We are today publishing the organisation's first annual report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Electoral Register

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to establish a rolling electoral register; and if he will make a statement. [5048]

Mr. George Howarth: We are examining this issue carefully.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the guidance issued to electoral registration officers; and if he will make a statement. [6022]

Mr. Howarth: Guidance is issued regularly to electoral registration officers on all aspects of electoral registration as this is required. Written guidance was last issued to electoral registration officers and acting returning officers in England and Wales on 19 June.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department will (a) assess the (i) advantages and (ii) disadvantages and (b) estimate the costs of introducing a rolling electoral registration system. [6024]

Mr. Howarth: We are examining this issue carefully and will look at the points mentioned by my hon. Friend.

Postal and Proxy Voting

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans to take to ensure that persons requiring a postal vote at elections are properly informed about the availability of postal votes and proxy voting and have time to complete the relevant forms. [5049]

Mr. George Howarth: Absent voting facilities were publicised at the general election through a television campaign and advertisements in the national press. We are currently reviewing the effectiveness of this publicity. The closing dates for absent vote applications were recently relaxed as set out in the Representation of the People (Amendment) Regulations 1997.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons forms for infirm elderly and disabled persons requiring a postal or proxy vote were not available at some electoral registration offices prior to the 1997 general election. [5050]

Mr. Howarth: I understand that in the Wakefield area, just before the general election, application forms for an absent vote for an indefinite period were not available. Electors affected by this were provided with alternative application forms so that they could obtain an absent vote for the elections on 1 May. They were subsequently supplied with application forms to give them absent votes for an indefinite period.

Polling Stations (Access)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the numbers of disabled people who failed to vote at the last general election due to their inability to gain access to polling stations; and if he will make a statement. [6014]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on the number of disabled people who could not vote in person at the general election because they could not gain access to a polling station is not collected centrally. District and London borough councils are statutorily required to designate as polling places, so far as is reasonable and practicable, only places which are accessible to the disabled. Acting returning officers may apply to the Home Office for grants towards the cost of providing temporary ramps where it is not possible for them to use a building for the purpose of a polling place which affords easy access for the disabled. Grants are also available for specially adapted polling screens for use by the disabled.

Protection of Badgers Act

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) arrests, (b) prosecutions and (c) convictions have been recorded under the Protection of Badgers Act 1992 in each year since 1992, broken down by local authority in (i) England and (ii) Wales; and if he will make a statement. [5706]

Mr. Michael: I have been asked to reply.

Information on the number of people arrested for specific offences is not collected centrally.

Available court proceedings data, by police force area, are given in the table. 1996 information will be available in the autumn.

Wild Mammals (Protection) Act

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) arrests, (b) prosecutions and (c) convictions have been recorded under the Wild Mammals (Protection) Act 1996 since its introduction, broken down by local authority in (i) England and (ii) Wales; and if he will make a statement. [5703]

Mr. Michael: I have been asked to reply.

Information on the number of people arrested for specific offences is not collected centrally.

Information on court proceedings under the Wild Mammals (Protection) Act 1996, which came into force on 29 April 1996, will first become available this autumn. That information will be by police force area and not by local authority area.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the public spending implications in respect of (a) land reclamation, (b) infrastructure works, (c) costs, (d) road construction and (e) other items arising from the decision to proceed with a Millennium Exhibition in Greenwich. [5633]

Mr. Chris Smith: All these regeneration costs are included in existing public expenditure plans. The Millennium Exhibition itself has no public spending implications. The Millennium Commission has pledged its support for the project by committing £400 million of National Lottery proceeds to it.

Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has for an additional bank holiday in the year 2000 to celebrate the Millennium. [6133]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 30 June 1997]: There is a clear demand in the country for a one-off additional bank holiday to mark the Millennium. I shall be recommending to colleagues that my Department proceed to consultation with the relevant interest groups on the basis that the holiday should take place on Friday 31 December 1999.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Record Office

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the key performance targets for the Public Record Office executive agency for 1997–98. [6545]

Mr. Hoon: The following table sets out the key performance targets that the Lord Chancellor has set for the Public Record Office for 1997–98.

Public Record Office Key Performance Indicators and Targets 1997–98

Indicator	Target
Efficiency
Unit costs of key activities:
(a) record accessions;	Reduce by 37.55 per cent. to £1.68.
(b) providing record storage space per linear metre;	Limit increase to 0.93 per cent., i.e. to £67.52.
(c) making documents available to users per document;	Reduce by 23.38 per cent. to £3.90.
(d) providing Census reader services per reader visit;	Reduce by 17.68 per cent. to £4.33.
(e) providing document reader services per reader visit;	Reduce by 16.95 per cent. to £37.24.
(f) providing remote user information services per contact.	Reduce by 42.10 per cent. to £26.38.
Backlog of records reported by departments as being over 30 years old and awaiting review.	Reduce by 1200 metres.
The timely destruction of records not worthy of preservation.	Departments to have in place key features of records management, as specified in the PRO Manual of Records Administration.
Provision of acceptable storage conditions i.e. meeting the preservation and environmental standards recommended by BS 5454: 1989 Recommendations for storage and exhibition of documents (BSI. 1989).	Increase the proportion of records stored to the standards from 87.85 per cent. to 88.12 per cent.
Management efficiency in running support services and projects.	Reduce the running costs of the Office's support services as a proportion of overall running costs from 9.8 per cent. to 9.01 per cent.
Quality of Service
Citizen's Charter Standards.	Achieve the Charter Standard targets.
Effectiveness
Performance in achieving specified milestones towards strategic objectives.	I. Carry out the quinquennial agency review of the Office and implement its agreed recommendations to the required timetable. II. Extend the Office's opening hours by 29 per cent. III. Increase revenue by 13 per cent. against the 1996–97 target.

Fuller details of the agency's targets are given in its business plan, which is available from the Public Record Office.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Drugs Tsar

Mr. Beith: To ask the President of the Council what will be the responsibilities and terms of appointment of the official described as the drugs tsar. [2384]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The post-holder will be responsible to the Cabinet Sub-Committee on Drug Misuse, which I chair. His or her main tasks will be to provide visible leadership in the fight against drugs; to support and help co-ordinate the efforts of relevant agencies; and to draw up for ministerial consideration a new strategy for tackling drugs. Detailed terms of reference are being drawn up, and an appointment will be made as soon as possible.

Mr. Beith: To ask the President of the Council when she expects to reply to the question of 5 June from the hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed relating to the drugs tsar. [6336]

Mrs. Taylor: I have replied to the hon. Member today.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Council if she will list the special advisers in her Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in her Department in the year up to 1 May. [5365]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Subject to final agreement on their salaries, three special advisers are being appointed in the Privy Council Office: Mr. Ian McKenzie, Mr. Damien Welfare and Miss Marianne Morris. Special advisers are employed on terms and conditions based on a model contract, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Mr. McKenzie is to advise me, and Mr. Welfare and Miss Morris are to advise my noble Friend the Lord Privy Seal, in his capacity as Leader of the House of Lords, on a range of matters concerning parliamentary business and, in particular legislation, in accordance with schedule 1 (part 1) of the Model Contract. The number of special advisers to Ministers in the Privy Council Office during the financial year 1996–97 was two.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Planning Service

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the review of the area plans in respect of the Down and Newry and Mourne district council areas will be included in the Planning Service's business case for the financial year 1997–98. [5407]

Mr. Murphy: Responsibility for this subject has been delegated to the Planning Service under its chief executive Mr. T. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. W. Stewart to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 26 June 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about the Down and Newry and Mourne area plans.

As I explained in my recent letter of 20 June 1997 on this issue, the review of the Down and Newry and Mourne area plans is not included in the Agency's Business Plan for 1997–98, a copy of which is enclosed. I explained that the programming of work on both plans will be taken into account in accordance with competing priorities and available resources. At present, there is no agreed time-scale for the commencement and execution of the work.

I do hope this further clarifies the position.

Absent Voting

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the number of absent voting papers issued in each local government area for the 1993 and 1997 elections and the Northern Ireland total and percentage, and the percentage difference for each council between 1993 and 1997; and if she will make a statement. [3832]

Mr. Murphy: The information requested is as follows:

1993 and 1997 Northern Ireland District Council General Elections

Absent voters

District Council	1993	1997	Percentage difference
Derry	1,637	1,912	16.80

These figures show there has been a significant increase in the overall numbers of absent votes in Northern Ireland.

It is also the case however that in almost half of the local government areas the number of voting papers issued in 1997 were down on the 1993 figures. In Antrim by 24 per cent., in Moyle by 21 per cent. and in Down by 20 per cent. In areas where there has been an increase it has been less than 12 per cent. in over a quarter and less than 20 per cent. in over half. Nevertheless in 1997 in four local government areas (Strabane, Magherafelt, Omagh and Ards) voting papers issued increased by more than 25 per cent.

Unemployment

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will identify the categories and travel-to-work areas of long-term unemployed people. [5140]

Majorie Mowlam: The latest available information as at 8 May 1997 is as follows:

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the ACPO Joint Standing Committee on Police Use of Firearms was informed of the use of faulty plastic bullets. [6115]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 30 June 1997]: I have been asked to reply.

The Secretary of the Association of Chief Police Officers Joint Standing Committee on the Police Use of Firearms was informed that certain plastic baton rounds were not performing to the required specification on 25 March 1997.

Alcohol Smuggling (Sunday Markets)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide details of the seizures of alcohol smuggled through Sunday markets in the past six months. [5246]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

I regret that no central figures are kept.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Special Advisers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5363]

Dr. David Clark: I have appointed one special adviser, Andrew Lappin, who is responsible to me.

Mr. Lappin is employed under terms and conditions based on the model contract for special advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Mr. Lappin advises me on issues across the range of my responsibilities in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the Model Contract.

There were two special advisers in my Department in the year up to 1 May. Sir Paul Judge was special adviser to the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster until resigning in July 1996; he was succeeded by Andrew Caesar-Gordon from September 1996 to March 1997.

In addition, the Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State had two special advisers in his office. Dr. Alan Kemp until his resignation in December 1996; and Lady Eileen Strathnaver until April 1997.

Deregulation

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster where the Deregulation Unit which was part of the Cabinet Office is now located; and by what name it is now known. [5634]

Dr. David Clark: The Deregulation Unit has been renamed the Better Regulation Unit to reflect our priority to get regulation right. It remains a core part of the Cabinet Office. The Government is committed to ensuring that regulations are simple, helpful and fair both to business, particularly small firms, and to the citizen.

The work of the Unit will contribute to my Department's White Paper, "Better Government" to be published in the autumn, setting out a unified programme for the renewal of government.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to re-assess the deregulation initiative; and if he will make a statement. [5816]

Dr. Clark: The Government is committed to ensuring that regulations are simple, helpful and fair. We aim to deliver responsible and responsive regulation for business, particularly small firms, and the citizen. The Deregulation Unit has been renamed the Better Regulation Unit to reflect our priority to get regulation right.

We are giving small firms a greater voice by appointing six small business representatives on the revitalised Task Force. To develop practical measures to help small businesses, we are setting up a cross-departmental group on "Access Business". It will draw together regulatory advice and forms into a simpler, more unified service, in particular using advances in information technology.

We are equally committed to removing bureaucracy from the lives of ordinary people, bringing citizens' issues to the fore. We will focus on key groups—the elderly, the young, the disadvantaged and volunteers.

The work of the Unit will contribute to my Department's White Paper, "Better Government" to be published in the autumn, setting out a unified programme for the renewal of government.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what policy he will adopt in relation to the further deregulation of British industry. [5635]

Dr. Clark: As we made clear in our Manifesto, we are committed not to impose unnecessary burdens on business. I am also appointing a revitalised Task Force and will work with them to lift regulatory burdens wherever appropriate.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to improve the regulation of British industry. [5636]

Dr. Clark: I aim to modernise Government for business—particularly small firms—and citizens by achieving better quality regulation. To develop practical measures to help small businesses, we are setting up a cross-departmental group on "Access Business". It will draw together regulatory advice and forms into a simpler, more unified service, in particular using advances in information technology.

I am also in the process of appointing a revitalised Task Force, half of whose members will represent small business. I look forward to working with them to ensure that new regulations are simple, helpful and fair.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to which public bodies the Government's proposed Freedom of Information Act will apply. [5972]

Dr. David Clark: We believe that the Freedom of Information Act should apply to a substantial number of public bodies in addition to central Government departments and agencies. Details of our proposals will be set out in the forthcoming White Paper.

Sovereign (Communications)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will review public access to those communications sent directly to the Sovereign from other Heads of State relating to the political relations between the country concerned and the United Kingdom. [5712]

Mr. David Clark: Communications about political matters from Heads of State to the Sovereign are referred to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and therefore come within the ambit of the Public Records Acts. The forthcoming White Paper on Freedom of Information will address the issue of public access to all types of government records.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Rifle Range

Ms Gisela Stuart: To ask the President of the Council what arrangements exist for access by hon. Members to the rifle range; how many members of the rifle club there are; and how many of these are hon. Members. [4064]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: I am advised by the Rifle Club that it has 24 members, four of whom are hon. Members. If hon. Members wish to access the rifle range they can contact the club.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Social Chapter

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many directives under the social chapter are currently being prepared by the European Commission; and how many of these will be subject to unanimous decision. [6088]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Commission have launched consultations with a view to possible legislation in two areas under the Social Agreement: rights to part-time workers, on which the European Social Partners have negotiated a framework agreement which may be translated into a directive; and arrangements for information and consultation of workers, on which the Commission recently published a consultation paper. The Voting procedure for directives on either of these issues would be Qualified Majority Voting.

European Parliament, Strasbourg

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the cost of maintaining the European Parliamentary presence in Strasbourg in 1996; and how much has been spent upgrading the buildings there and in Brussels. [6096]

Mr. Doug Henderson: There is no readily available break down of the complete cost of the EP presence in Strasbourg. Title 2 chapter 20 of Section 1 of the 1996 budget of the EU (Official Journal, volume 39 of 29 January 1996) gives details of investments in immovable property, rental of buildings and associated costs for the EP's Strasbourg site at a total cost of 23,836,078 ecu (£16,713,994). Title 2, Section 1, articles 204 and 209 of the 1996 budget and Title 2, Section 1 articles 204 and 209 of the 1997 budget (Official Journal, volume 40 of 14 February 1997) give details of costs of fitting-out of premises and other expenditure on buildings, in Brussels and Strasbourg, in 1996 and 1997 at a total cost of 21,371,000 ecu (£14,991,756).

European Monitoring Centre on Racism and Xenophobia

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the activity of the European Monitoring Centre on Racism and Xenophobia. [6093]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We welcome the establishment of the European Monitoring Centre on Racism and Xenophobia. It will gather, and provide to the Community and Member States, information on the phenomena of racism, xenophobia and anti-semitism. This information will be particularly in the fields of:

(a) free movement of persons;

(b) media and communication;

(c) education, vocational training, youth;

(d) social policy including employment;

(e) free movement of goods;

(f) culture.

Lomé Convention

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be the United Kingdom's approach to the negotiations on a successor to the fourth Asian, Caribbean, Pacific/European Union Convention of Lomé. [6144]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Lomé Convention is the main cooperation agreement between the Africa, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) states, covering political dialogue, development assistance and preferential trade access for ACP goods to the EU. It is one of the mainstays of the UK's relations with the ACP states. We will play a leading role in formulating the EU's mandate for a successor to Lomé IV, especially during our Presidency in 1998. We will work for a coherent outcome which increases poverty focus and improves effectiveness, promotes an outward-looking EU and strengthen links with the Commonwealth, 38 of whose members belong to the ACP group.

China

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the potential for development of United Kingdom relations with China after the handover of Hong Kong. [5718]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We aim to build a new, broad and forward-looking relationship with China. We want Hong Kong to be a bridge not a barrier between us, but that will depend on China honouring its undertakings in the Joint Declaration. Britain and China have substantial common interests. We look forward to dialogue and cooperation across a full range of issues.

Council of the European Union

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union for July; and if he will list the major EU events for the next six months. [6437]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Details are as follows.

PRIME MINISTER

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he took to investigate the allegations made by the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) against the right hon. Member for Caerphilly. (Mr. Davies). [6260]

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Prime Minister what investigations he carried out and with whom he spoke prior to writing to the Leader of the Opposition on 26 June concerning matters relating to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith). [6261]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the replies I gave to the right hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague), on Wednesday 25 June, Official Report, columns 837-38.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Mis-selling of Pensions

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will review the charging to policyholder funds of the costs of mis-selling of pensions by insurance companies. [3304]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 16 June 1997]: The Department has been in regular contact with all life insurance companies on a number of issues arising from pensions mis-selling, including the attribution of costs.

In October 1994, in the light of SIB's publication of criteria and procedures for assessing whether compensation should be paid to individual pension policyholders, the Department made clear that each company would need to consider where the costs should fall on its funds; and indicated that, while the precise arrangements would vary according to the circumstances of each office, the Department considered the following general principles to be relevant:

(i) With profits funds which, in normal circumstances, stand to profit from the sale of pensions business can reasonably be expected to bear a corresponding share of the costs associated with that business.

However,

(ii) Compensation costs should not be regarded as a normal expense of the business for the purpose of assessing bonus rates; and

(iii) The Department would expect proprietary offices to consider whether it is appropriate that some part of the compensation cost be met from outside the long-term fund, to enable the reasonable expectations of policyholders to be fulfilled.

The overall objective of this guidance was to minimise the risk that the costs of compensation would have an adverse effect on the levels of bonus paid to policyholders.

The Insurance Companies Act 1982 gives the Secretary of State powers to intervene in individual companies' affairs, to protect policyholders against the risk that the company may be unable to meet its liabilities, or —in the case of life and pensions business—fulfil the reasonable expectation of policyholders. The Department stands ready to use these powers, though on current evidence it believes that their use to impose a particular attribution of the costs of pensions mis-selling is likely to be justified only in exceptional cases.

Toys (Imports)

Mr. Paice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she intends to abandon the use of the CE mark as an indicator of the safety of imported toys. [5168]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The CE marking is not a European mark of safety or quality intended for consumers. Its purpose is to indicate to enforcement authorities that the toys bearing it are intended for sale in the European Community and signifies a declaration by the manufacturer or his authorised representative that the toys have been designed and manufactured in accordance with the requirements of the relevant European directives. All toys supplied in the United Kingdom, whether manufactured here or imported, must comply with the Toys (Safety) Regulations 1995 which implement the European requirements and trading standards officers have the necessary powers to remove non-complying toys from the market.

Defence Industry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate she has made of the annual cost to the Government of subsidies to the defence industry per person employed on defence-related work in each of the last three years. [4751]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 23 June 1997]: It is not possible to answer the question in the way posed because the Government do not provide subsidies to the defence industry. However, the Department and others, through our on-going sponsorship activities, support and encourage the competitiveness of the industry as it does to a whole range of sectors.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will assess the advantages of requiring auditors criticised in her Department's inspectors' reports to bear part of the costs. [4826]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 25 June 1997]: The role of Companies Act inspectors is to investigate rather than to perform a judicial function of apportioning blame. It would therefore not be possible to recover costs from any party criticised by Companies Act inspectors. Inspectors' reports can be and often are the basis of subsequent action by the Department or by other prosecutors and/or regulators. Under section 439(2) of the Companies Act 1985 a person who is convicted on a prosecution initiated as a result of the investigation may be ordered to pay all or some of the costs of that investigation.

Resort Hotels

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will investigate the affairs of the auditors of Resort Hotels and the recognised supervisory body which licensed and monitored the quality of audits. [4857]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 25 June 1997]: The regulation of auditors is a matter for their recognised supervisory body to whom any complaints should be made. The Department's powers of investigation are broadly directed towards limited liability companies and to persons carrying on investment business, rather than the affairs of auditors.

Insolvency Regulators

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will assess the advantages of replacing the present regulators of insolvency with a single independent regulator. [4823]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 25 June 1997]: As the hon. Member will be aware, a working party has been established to consider whether there are ways in which regulation of the insolvency profession might be made more effective in the public interest. The working party intends to issue a draft report by way of a consultation document in the autumn and will clearly welcome responses from all those with an interest in insolvency. I shall give careful consideration to any recommendations the working party may make in its final report.

Helene Clothing Company Inquiry

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to announce the result of her Department's inquiry into the affairs of the clothing company, Helene. [6060]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My Department does not discuss the affairs of individual companies.

Fraud

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will extend the requirement to detect and report fraud placed on local authority and bank auditors to other private sector auditors. [5973]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has no plans to do so.

Guidance on the rights and duties of auditors required to report to regulators in the financial sector was set out in the Auditing Practices Board's (APB) "Statement of Auditing Standards" (SAS) 620, issued in March 1994 and revised in March 1995. The APB has published two further SASs that clarify the rights and duties of auditors when reporting fraud or any other non-compliance with regulations. These are SAS 110: Fraud and Error and SAS 120: Consideration of Law and Regulations. Copies of these documents are available for inspection in the Library of the House.

Telecommunications

Sir Richard Body: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's position towards a European Union universal service in telecommunications. [6106]

Mrs. Roche: The draft EC directive on the application of open network provision to voice telephony and on universal service for telecommunications is scheduled to come into force on 1 January 1998. The directive defines universal service as a defined minimum set of services of specified quality which is available to all users independent of their geographical location and, in the light of specific national conditions, at an affordable price. The Government are keen to ensure that EC universal service obligations guarantee consumers a good quality service at an affordable price, whilst not imposing unreasonable burdens on new entrants to the EC telecommunications market.

Regulations

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the regulations laid by her before the House since 1 May. [5997]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 30 June 1997]: My Department has laid one set of regulations—the British Coal Corporation (Change of Quorum) Regulations—which were laid on 26 June.

Ariane Mission

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has had with the European Space Agency on the rescue of the Ariane 5 Cluster Mission of June 1996; and if she will make a statement. [4636]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 30 June 1997]: I took the opportunity of my visit to the Paris air show on 17 June to hold an introductory discussion with the senior management of the European Space Agency. I was very encouraged by the approach being taken by the agency in maintaining excellence in space research and development, while focusing on the competitiveness of European industry and increasing further the value the UK and other member states gain from their investment in ESA. I look forward to working with the new Director General of ESA, Mr. Rodota.

The failure of the first Ariane 5 launch in June 1996 was a severe blow to the European space community and to scientists, many of whom are in the UK, planning to work on data from the four Cluster satellites. I am therefore very pleased that ESA has been able to gain approval for a recovery mission in the year 2000, this time using a Soyuz launch.

ESA and its member states have also made a splendid effort in reorganising their space programmes to cover the cost of the launch failure. The successful launch of Ariane 502, now planned for September, will clearly be of the utmost importance for Europe's space capability.

CJD Litigation

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate she has made of the legal costs incurred to date by the Treasury Solicitor on behalf of the Medical Research Council in respect of CJD litigation. [6083]

Mr. Battle: The total legal costs incurred to date by the Medical Research Council in relation to the litigation, including the costs of the Treasury Solicitor, amount to almost £49,000.

Industrial Pollution

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what assessment she has made of the risk of extra industrial pollution elsewhere in the world as a result of tighter emission controls in the United Kingdom; [5841]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact of tighter controls on industrial emissions than elsewhere in the world on the numbers of (a) job losses, (b) factory closures and (c) bankruptcies in the United Kingdom. [5842]

Mr. Battle: In recognition of this risk, the UK seeks the greatest possible international participation in environmental agreements, both to maximise the potential environmental benefits and to minimise any risks to our competitiveness that might arise. Studies by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development have not so far identified evidence of significant industrial migration to countries with lower environmental standards.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Teacher Training Recruitment

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish the advice on teacher training recruitment targets received by his Department from the Teacher Training Agency for 1995–96, 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [5700]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 27 June 1997]: The targets are the responsibility of the Department. The TTA has not in the past been invited to submit advice to the Department on the whole range of issues involved, but on occasion we have discussed particular aspects—such as the necessary assumptions on course length and wastage—with Agency staff. The Select Committee on Education and Employment, in its sixth report, recommended that TTA be given a greater role in advising the Department on the staffing model and training targets and that its advice about them should be made public. The Government's response will be published shortly.

Unemployed Teachers

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the availability of full-time posts for unemployed teachers in (a) the Northern region and (b) the Teesside area. [5964]

Ms Estelle Morris: The following table shows the number of full-time vacancies as at January 1997 in each Local Education Authority in the North East region. Teesside TEC area is covered by Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland and Stockton on Tees.

	Total vacancies[1]
North-east Region[2]	73

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of people in Blackpool aged 17 to 25 years are currently claiming the jobseeker's allowance. [5945]

Mr. Alan Howarth: It is not possible to provide the precise information as requested but I can confirm that in April 1997 there were 1,283 people aged between 17 and 24 who were receiving JSA. It is not possible to give an unemployment rate for particular age groups. I can confirm that the unemployment rate for all age groups for the North West, based on May 1997 information, is 5.3 per cent.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will review the operation of the jobseeker's allowance with particular reference to the impact of the six-month rule on those seeking or involved in seasonal employment in the leisure and tourist industries. [5954]

Mr. Howarth: Our Welfare to Work objectives are to provide work incentives, to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to strike a new balance between rights and responsibilities. A programme of monitoring and evaluation is under way to enable us to ensure that Jobseeker's Allowance contributes to achieving our objectives. In addition to this major evaluation exercise, we shall also keep the individual benefit rules under active consideration as we develop our plans.

Head Teachers

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to review the funding of the National Qualification for Head Teachers so as to take account of schools' financial ability to make contributions. [5950]

Mr. Byers: The Government is supporting candidates from LEA-maintained schools taking the National Professional Qualification for Headship with £4.5 million in 1997–98 through the Grants for Education Support and Training programme. This funding is allocated to LEAs on the basis of the number of schools in their area; central support for candidates is not dependent on the financial ability of their school to make contributions.

Primary Class Sizes

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the (a) average and (b) maximum numbers of children in primary school classes in East Sussex. [5956]

Mr. Byers: The available information is shown in the following table.

Table 1: Average and maximum class size taught by one teacher in maintained primary schools in the East Sussex Local Education Authority area in January 1997 (provisional estimates)

School Performance Targets

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to review the presentation of statistics for primary and secondary school performance to give greater prominence to the progress made over a three year period by the schools concerned. [5946]

Ms Estelle Morris: I announced on 25 June that the secondary school performance tables to be published this November will show schools performance over the last three years. Primary tables will be published locally by LEAs in January. LEAs will be able to publish information on school improvement alongside the core data. We are also working to include measures of value added in the performance tables of 1998 data.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his oral answer, Official Report, column 965, to the hon. Member for Romsey (Mr. Colvin) of 26 June, by how much the projected savings from the phasing out of the assisted places scheme fall short of the cost of reducing class sizes for five, six and seven-year-olds. [6241]

Mr. Byers: About £100 million will have been saved from the phasing out of the assisted places scheme by the year 2000, and annually thereafter the savings will be in excess of £100 million a year. That is adequate funding to fulfil our pledge to reduce class sizes for five, six and seven-year-olds by the end of this Parliament.

Wakefield Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what financial resources were made available to Wakefield Training and Enterprise Council in respect of the pit closure programme in Wakefield district; and what reports he has received on the use of those resources. [5051]

Dr. Howells: Over the last four years over £6 million has been made available to Wakefield Training and Enterprise Council (TEC) as part of the agreed "Coal Plan" to assist in areas affected by the closures of collieries. Of this over £4.5 million has been paid directly to the TEC, and the balance has been available to fund allowances to support unemployed adults attending additional Training for Work provision organised by the TEC. Other Government funding available to the TEC will also have benefited former mining areas. Wakefield TEC commissioned PRISM Research to undertake a full independent evaluation of its activities under Coal Plan Funding. The findings were published in a series of reports published in April and May 1997 and copies have been received by Government Office York and Humberside officials. Conclusions were generally positive.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he took to evaluate the record of Wakefield training and enterprise council, in working with relevant local bodies and the voluntary sector. [5052]

Dr. Howells: Wakefield TEC's record of working with local bodies has been formally evaluated within the context of the TEC Licensing process, and more generally within the TEC annual planning and contracting round. Wakefield TEC was awarded a Licence to run from three years from April 1995, and as part of this was found to be fully competent in its ability to work with local partners to develop and implement a shared agenda, which is a key element of the licensing process. The TEC annual re-contracting evaluation process covers all aspects of the TEC's capacity to work with partners. Wakefield TEC is a founder member of and plays a key role in the Wakefield Economic Alliance and also plays a key role in the Wakefield Partnership which includes representatives from the business, voluntary and education sectors.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the annual budget for Wakefield training and enterprise council in the last year for which figures are available, provided by public funds; what additional training, education and employment placements were created as a result of this funding; and if he will make a statement. [5113]

Dr. Howells: Wakefield TEC's annual budget for 1996–97 was £8,602,358. A total of 3,643 young people/adults secured training placements as part of Youth Programmes (YP) and Training for Work (TFW) in 1996–97. Information is not available about the total number of employment placements, although all young people within the YP will undertake work experience, and work placements also form an integral part of TFW. There were 302 Modern Apprenticeship starts during 1996–97, and a total of 1,069 NVQs were gained by Youth Trainees (60 NVQs per 100 leavers). One thousand and forty two adults leaving TFW secured employment, resulting in Wakefield TEC achieving an average of 50 jobs per 100 leavers.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the annual budget for Training and Enterprise Councils provided from public funds in the last year for which figures are available; and what quality audit mechanisms are employed to monitor their efficiency and value for money. [5112]

Dr. Howells: The budget provided by this Department for Training and Enterprise Councils in England in 1996–97 is provisionally estimated to be £1.2 billion.

A range of mechanisms are in place to monitor efficiency and promote value for money. Government Offices negotiate and monitor key performance targets. They also assess the effectiveness of each TEC's financial control environment to ensure public money is properly protected. In addition, the TEC Quality Assurance: Supplier Management (TQA: ASM) framework sets out the quality requirements which the Department places on TECs and which it requires TECs to make of their suppliers. The Department is also considering proposals to establish an inspectorate that would assess the quality of Government funded training provision.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what powers he has in relation to appointments to the boards of TECs. [5826]

Dr. Howells: The Government's contract with Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs) sets eligibility conditions that TEC directors must meet. However, TECs are private companies and the appointment of directors to TEC boards is determined by the members of the company acting in accordance with the company's Articles of Association. It is for each TEC to decide on its own membership in accordance with its contract with government and the TEC National Council's "Framework for local Accountability of TECs" which has as its first principle clarity and openness in the selection of well qualified and trained board members.

Research Assessment Exercise

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to review the research assessment exercise in higher education establishments. [6139]

Dr. Howells: None. The research assessment exercise is a matter for the higher education funding bodies, which are currently reviewing the conduct and outcome of the 1996 exercise. I understand that they intend to consult on future options in the light of any relevant recommendations from the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education, which is expected to report shortly.

Museums

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will ensure that the Higher Education Funding Council's criteria for making funding awards to university museums are published; [6306]

(2) what proposals he has to co-ordinate policy with the Scottish Office and the Department of National Heritage with regard to the funding of university museums; and if he will make a statement; [6307]

(3) what proposals he has to review the criteria by which the Higher Education Funding Council allocates funds to university museums; [6310]

(4) if he will list the university museums which receive funds from the Higher Education Funding Council, stating in each case how much each museum has received in the last five financial years and how much it will receive in future financial years for which funding has been determined; [6316]

(5) if he will list the museums in England and Wales which receive non-formula funding from the Higher Education Council. [6318]

Dr. Howells: Most university museums are funded by their parent universities. In addition the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) provides "non-formula funding" in support of a number of university museums of national importance. These are listed in HEFCE Circular 9/95, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

The HEFCE reviewed its non-formula funding of museums in 1993 and 1994 and announced its decisions in March 1995. The criteria for funding were published in HEFCE Circulars 5/93, 46/93 and 9/95, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Circular 9/95 listed the amounts that each museum would receive in 1995–96 and announced the Council's decision that, on the recommendation of its Museums, Galleries and Collections Review Group, the distribution of non-formula funding in respect of university museums would not be reviewed for at least five years. Funding allocations in support of university museums before 1995–96 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department for Education and Employment, the other Education Departments and the Department of National Heritage work together closely on policy for funding university museums. Funding of university museums in Scotland and Wales is the responsibility of the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales respectively.

Social Costs and Employment

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish his Department's response to the Education and Employment Committee's fourth report, on Social Costs and Employment (HC 130) of Session 1996–97. [6462]

Mr Alan Howarth: I welcome the Committee's report. The Department's response is being placed today in the Library.

CABINET OFFICE

Private Secretary

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what are the main duties and responsibilities of his private secretary; and if he will make a statement. [6169]

Mr. Mandelson: My private secretary supports me in carrying out my Ministerial responsibilities for contributing to and implementing Government policy and driving forward the Millennium Experience at Greenwich.

TREASURY

Stillbirths

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many stillbirths there were in each region of the United Kingdom in 1996. [2158]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr Keith Vaz, dated 1 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics, to your question on the number of stillbirths in each region of the United Kingdom.

The information for health regions of England and Wales is available in ONS Monitor Series DH3 97/1: Infant and perinatal mortality 1996: Health authorities and regional offices. This publication is available in the House of Commons Library. Similar information for the health regions of Scotland and Northern Ireland is shown on the following table:

Inland Revenue Chairman

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who will be the next chairman of the Inland Revenue; and what criteria will be used to determine this appointment. [3366]

Dawn Primarolo: Mr. Nicholas Montagu CB has been appointed chairman of the Board of Inland Revenue. The criteria for selection were set out in the public advertisement for the post, a copy of which has been placed in the Members' Library.

Cross-border Shopping

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his most recent estimate of the duty revenues lost as a result of cross-border shopping for, and smuggling of, (a) cigarettes, (b) hand rolling tobacco, (c) beer, (d) wine and (e) spirits. [3544]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs' latest estimate of excise duty revenues lost from legitimate cross-border shopping for duty paid alcohol and tobacco products is for the year ending 30 June 1996, and is given in table 1, and for smuggling is given in table 2.

Table 1: Revenue losses from cross-border shopping

Product type	Excise duty
Beer	25
Wine	75
Spirits	45
Tobacco products	55
Total	200

Figures have been independently rounded to £5 million. Figures assume that 50 per cent. of alcohol purchased is additional consumption. Customs have no separate estimates of the revenue losses for individual types of tobacco products.

Table 2: Revenue evaded through smuggling

£ million

Product type	Excise duty
Beer	75
Wine	35
Spirits	40
Hand-rolling tobacco	335
Cigarettes and other tobacco products	110
Total	590

Figures have been independently rounded to £5 million. Components may not therefore sum to the totals given.

VAT (Fuel)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the VAT income which would accrue from VAT on fuel at (a) 5 per cent., (b) 7½ per cent., (c) 10 per cent. and (d) 12½ per cent., and the cost of the subsidy to retirement pensioners and other vulnerable groups at those levels. [3510]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated full-year cost, in 1997–98, of reducing VAT on domestic fuel and power from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent. is around £450 million; estimates for the other options can be approximated pro rata.

Fuel (VAT)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the reduction in the total annual amount of VAT on fuel paid by pensioners in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland as a result of the proposed reduction in the rate of VAT to 5 per cent. [5563]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on household consumption of fuel and power is not available at constituency level. The average household would save £18 per year from a reduction in VAT on domestic fuel and power from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent., pensioners will benefit most in proportion to income.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what stamp duty is on share transactions in (a) Germany, (b) France and (c) The United Kingdom; and what assessment he has made of the impact of differential stamp duties on share transactions on the competitiveness of the City of London. [3624]

Dawn Primarolo: UK stamp duty on share transfers is generally charged at 0.5 per cent. In certain circumstances—for example, a transfer of shares into a depositary receipt scheme—the rate of duty is 1.5 per cent.

In France a stock exchange turnover tax is charged on both purchases and sales of shares. The tax is charged at 0.3 per cent. of the price up to FF 1 million, and 0.15 per cent., on any excess of over FF 21 million. The amount of tax is then reduced by FF 150. The maximum tax on a transaction is FF 4,000. There is also a 1 per cent. registration tax on deeds relating to the transfer of company shares, up to a FF 20,000 maximum.

There is no share transfer tax in Germany.

Stamp duties on share transactions do not affect the competitiveness of the City of London.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of assessments and the revenue derived from stamp duty on property transactions in each band of £5,000 between £60,000 and £100,000 in the latest convenient year. [3444]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 1995–96 are as follows:

Price of transactions	Number of property transactions (thousands)	Value of stamp duty (£ million)
£60,000 to under £65,000	50	30
£65,000 to under £70,000	55	35
£70,000 to under £75,000	45	30
£75,000 to under £80,000	40	30
£80,000 to under £85,000	35	25
£85,000 to under £90,000	30	25
£90,000 to under £95,000	25	20
£95,000 to under £100,000	20	20
Total[1]	295	225

[1] Totals may not be the sum of the figures shown because of rounding.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the yield of stamp duty reserve tax has been in each tax year since its inception. [3448]

Dawn Primarolo: The figures are as follows:

	Stamp duty reserve tax receipts (£ million)
1986–87	44.2
1987–88	103.9
1988–89	64.2
1989–90	82.2
1990–91	73.4
1991–92	100.5
1992–93	48.0
1994–95	42.4
1996–97[1]	310.0

The sharp rise in 1996–97 reflects the switch to electronic share transfers following the introduction of the CREST system and the consequent rise in transactions liable to stamp duty reserve tax rather than to stamp duty.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much stamp duty payable on house purchases was received from sales (a) at or above £200,000 and (b) at or above £375,000 in each of the last five years. [3774]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 20 June 1997]: Available estimates are as follows:

Stamp duty on residential property transactions[1]

(£ million)

	(a) At or above £200,000	(b) At or above £375,000
1992–93	50	25
1993–94	85	30
1994–95	95	35
1995–96	90	30

[1] Figures exclude non-residential transactions which are also liable to stamp duty.

Taxation and Duty

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list on a comparable basis the levels of taxation and duty on (a) petrol, (b) cigarettes and (c) beer in each of the EU member states. [3550]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested for petrol and beer is given in the table.

Private Health Insurance

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of taxpayers currently claiming tax relief for private medical insurance are over retirement age. [3628]

Dawn Primarolo: In 1994–95, the latest year for which information is available, it is estimated that about three-quarters of the individuals covered by private medical insurance contracts on which tax relief is claimed are over retirement age, that is, men aged 65 or over or women aged 60 or over.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people currently benefit from tax relief on medical insurance. [3520]

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax payers are currently claiming tax relief in respect of private medical insurance. [3629]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for East Ham (Mr. Timms) on 13 March 1997, Official Report, column 322.

Single Currency

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations have been undertaken by Treasury Ministers and officials with the banking and retail industries, and the accountancy profession, on the preparations for the introduction of a single currency. [3530]

Mrs. Liddell: Treasury Ministers and officials meet regularly with representatives of the banking, retail and accounting sectors to discuss a wide range of issues.

The Bank of England has been involved in consultations with the financial sector on a number of issues surrounding the implications of the introduction of a European single currency. The Bank provides information, primarily targeted at the financial sector, through the publication of a quarterly bulletin entitled "The Practical Issues Arising from the Introduction of the Euro".

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the cost to the Government of the introduction of a European single currency. [3539]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government will assess the implications of EMU for jobs, investment and growth in the United Kingdom. In making that assessment, the cost to Government of joining EMU is one of many aspects which will be taken into account.

Demand Elasticity

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the elasticity of demand for (a) unleaded petrol, (b) cigarettes, and (c) beer. [3545]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated own price elasticities, based on a computer model produced by the Institute of Fiscal Studies, are –0.272, –0.201, and –0.963 for petrol, tobacco and beer respectively.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the estimated reductions in weekly household income in each household income decile group which would result from the withdrawal of mortgage interest relief. [3562]

Dawn Primarolo: Information for 1997–98 is given in the table. The estimates are based on information projected from the 1994–95 family expenditure survey and are therefore provisional.

Average weekly reduction in households income[1] as a result of withdrawing mortgage interest relief

Household income decile group	Average weekly reduction for households with a mortgage £
Lowest ten per cent.	—
Second	1.30
Third	2.30
Fourth	3.70
Fifth	4.50
Sixth	4.60
Seventh	4.90
Eighth	5.00
Ninth	5.00
Highest ten per cent.	5.20

[1] Household income is defined as income from all sources less income tax payments and National Insurance contributions.

[2] Insufficient data to provide a reliable estimate.

VAT (Fuel)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the impact on retirement pensioners of reducing VAT on fuel to 5 per cent. [3552]

Dawn Primarolo: The average household would save £18 per year from a reduction in VAT on domestic fuel and power from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent., pensioners will benefit most in proportion to income.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the financial impact on the average household of a reduction in the rate of VAT levied on domestic fuel to 5 per cent. [3682]

Dawn Primarolo: The average household would benefit by £18 per year from a reduction in VAT on domestic fuel and power from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent.

Inland Revenue Offices

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the network of Inland Revenue offices; and if he will make a statement. [3548]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has now completed four years of its 10 year programme to restructure its network of local offices. Ministers together with the Board of Inland Revenue are currently considering how to take the programme forward.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the terms of the leases of Inland Revenue offices which are undergoing closure; and what penalty clauses will apply if the new office structure plan goes ahead. [4903]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has offices in hundreds of buildings throughout the United Kingdom. Some buildings are Crown property, others are leasehold and the terms of each occupation are the subject of separate negotiation and agreement. The costs, including any penalties for vacating premises ahead of lease breaks are always fully taken into account as part of the overall appraisal.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the conclusions of the new office structure plan phase 3 for Inland Revenue offices will be published; and if he will make a statement. [4904]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has embarked on a major programme of change which includes restructuring its local office network over a number of years. The restructuring programme, which is scheduled to take 10 years to complete, is now in its fifth year. Ministers are currently considering with the Board of the Inland Revenue how to take the programme forward.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue offices have been refurbished; and what has been the total cost to public funds under the inland Revenue new office structure plan of the (a) closure and (b) transfer of offices. [4907]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue's programme to restructure its network of local offices was designed to be implemented in three stages from January 1993 to around 2002. When implementation of the second stage is completed during 1998, some 167 new-style offices will have replaced 387 old-style offices. The total cost of setting up these 167 new-style offices, all of which will be in new or refurbished accommodation, will be £107 million. Set against these costs, the programme will have delivered running cost savings reaching £35 million per annum in 1997–98 rising to about £50 million per annum by 2002.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the savings and costs identified under the Inland Revenue new office structure plan phase 3 in respect of the (a) Penzance, (b) Launceston, (c) Barnstaple and Bideford, (d) Truro, (e) Torquay, Newton Abbot and Paignton, (f) Wells, (g) Frome and (h) Bridgewater offices; and if he will list the criteria used in each office to identify costs and savings. [4906]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has embarked on a major programme of change which includes restructuring its local office network over a number of years. The restructuring programme, which is scheduled to take 10 years to complete, is now in its fifth year. Ministers are currently considering with the Board of Inland Revenue how to take the programme forward. A full investment appraisal in accordance with normal Treasury rules will be required before detailed individual proposals can be considered for approval.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the proposals contained in the new office structure plan phase 3 currently before the Board of Inland Revenue can proceed in instances where changes produce negative savings. [4905]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has embarked on a major programme of change which includes restructuring its local office network over a number of years. The programme, which is scheduled to take 10 years to complete, is now in its fifth year. At the outset, the Board of Inland Revenue agreed with Ministers that the overall programme should deliver a high rate of financial return.

Tax Offices

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the Inland Revenue tax offices which are currently the subject of consideration for closure under the New Office Structure Review No.3. [3372]

Dawn Primarolo: Since 1993, the Inland Revenue has been carrying out a 10-year programme to reorganise its whole network of local offices. I have now asked the Revenue to review all of the proposed reorganisations which would result in closure of the only local office.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the names of right hon. and hon. Members who have made written, oral or personal representations to his Department in the last 12 months about tax offices which are included in the New Office Structure Review No. 3. [3371]

Dawn Primarolo: Since 1993, the Inland Revenue has been carrying out a 10-year programme to reorganise its whole network of local offices. Firm plans exist for the period up to mid 1998 and proposals for the remaining period are currently being considered by the Board of Inland Revenue. A large number of Members made representations in the present Session and in 1996–97 regarding offices which will be included in the final stage of the reorganisation programme.

Drug Imports

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase the numbers of customs officers directly engaged in duties relating to the import of drugs. [3546]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no plans to increase the number of customs officers directly engaged in duties relating to the smuggling of illicit drugs.

Industrial Investment

Mr. Norman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact of the most recent reduction in capital allowances on the level of investment by industry. [3704]

Dawn Primarolo: It is too early to judge the impact of the legislation on investment.

Company Cars

Mr. Norman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated loss of tax revenue resulting from the special treatment of company cars. [3702]

Dawn Primarolo: No estimates of revenue effects can be made without details of what is meant by their special treatment.

Tax Receipts

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has received from the Inland Revenue revised estimates for tax receipts for 1997–98 taking into account the higher than forecast tax receipts for 1996–97. [3362]

Dawn Primarolo: Yes, the next published forecast will be on 2 July in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report."

Self-assessment

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost has been of Inland Revenue publicity in support of the move to self-assessment. [3440]

Dawn Primarolo: Since the launch of the self assessment public information programme in June 1995 about £15,000,000 has been spent informing taxpayers of the changes.

VAT (Holidays)

Mr. Prior: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to public funds of reducing VAT on domestic holidays to the level in France. [3556]

Dawn Primarolo: No figures on the revenue generated from VAT on domestic holidays are currently available.

Company and Shareholder Taxation

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have to abolish the imputation system of company and shareholder taxation. [3625]

Dawn Primarolo: It would not be appropriate for me to comment at this stage.

VAT

Mr. Norman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy on extending the scope of VAT to (a) new housing and (b) fares for international travel. [3701]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to comment on tax matters in advance of the Budget.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria determine which items of play equipment, fixtures and fittings purchased for the use of children with special needs are exempted from VAT. [5587]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 June 1997]: There is no general provision for VAT relief on play equipment, fixtures and fittings used by children with special needs. Equipment, including play equipment, fixtures and fittings, is zero-rated if it has been designed solely for use by chronically sick or disabled people including children, provided that it is supplied to such people, charities, serving their needs, and certain other eligible bodies which pay for the goods wholly from charitable funds or with voluntary contributions.

Excise Duty

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of each excise duty, other than VAT, is payable by businesses and is recoverable as a business cost. [3447]

Dawn Primarolo: Excise duties are not normally recoverable by businesses. The exceptions include when goods on which duty has been paid are exported or returned to the manufacturer, for example because they are contaminated. In addition businesses may receive duty paid goods, principally hydrocarbon oils, which are relieved of duty when used for eligible purposes and on which a refund of duty can be claimed.

Mergers

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the advantages of merging the Inland Revenue, the Customs and Excise and the Contributions Agency; and if he will make a statement. [3532]

Dawn Primarolo: A programme of closer working between Customs and Excise, Inland Revenue and the Contributions Agency has been developed since 1994. We intend to develop further this programme in support of Government objectives.

Corporate Groups

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's policy with regard to spend to save initiatives in respect of large corporate groups. [3623]

Dawn Primarolo: The spend to save initiatives being implemented by Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise include a range of measures for improving compliance, covering both large corporate taxpayers and other taxpayers.

Political Appointees

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what has been the additional cost resulting from the increase in the numbers of political advisers since 1 May; [3318]

(2) what has been the additional cost resulting from the increase in size of the Prime Minister's Policy Unit since 1 May. [3319]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which the Prime Minister gave yesterday to the hon. Member for Harborough (Mr. Garnier), Official Report, column 25.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 3 June, Official Report, column 146, if he will make a statement setting out how closer working between Customs and Excise and the Inland Revenue will be developed; and what are the manpower and financial implications of each of these proposals. [3332]

Dawn Primarolo: The closer working programme has been continually developed since its introduction. Where initiatives have manpower or financial implications these are being contained within existing spending plans.

Policy Making

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms he will put in place to ensure that environmental sustainability considerations are taken into account in the policy-making process within his Department. [3853]

Dawn Primarolo: Our manifesto stated, "We will put concern for the environment at the heart of policy-making, so that it is not an add-on extra, but informs the whole of government." Like other departments, the Treasury is committed to delivering that commitment. I shall, as the Minister with the lead on environment issues for the Treasury, be taking a close interest in ensuring that we do so.

Discretionary Trusts

Mr. Faber: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many discretionary trusts benefiting minors are in operation; [4029]

(2) what is the value of (a) the highest and (b) the lowest decile of discretionary trusts benefiting minors. [4028]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

National Audit Office

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will request the NAO to provide an annual report to the Committee of Public Accounts on their review of the assumptions behind the economic forecast. [4186]

Dawn Primarolo: The Comptroller and Auditor General, as Head of the NAO, was asked to review the key assumptions and conventions for projecting the public finances. His report was published as a Command Paper on Thursday 19 June. Copies of the report are available from the Vote Office. The Government intend that, in future Budgets, there will be a continuing role for the NAO in auditing the process of forecasting the public finances.

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the assumptions behind the economic forecast which will be submitted to the NAO for review. [4185]

Dawn Primarolo: The NAO was asked to review the following assumptions and conventions for projecting the public finances:

Credit will only be taken for privatisation proceeds from sales that have already been announced.

The estimate of savings generated by the "Spend to Save" programme announced in the November 1996 Budget will be limited to the direct effects of the measures, and will exclude indirect impacts such as the deterrent effect of the programme.

The assumed underlying rate of growth of the economy will be 2¼ per cent. per year.

A flat planning assumption for unemployment will be used rather than forecasts of actual unemployment.

Assumptions for the level of interest rates will be derived from expectations in financial markets.

The NAO report was published as a Command Paper on Thursday 19 June. Copies of the report are available from the Vote Office.

Windfall Tax

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his oral answer of 12 June, Official Report, columns 1261–62, if the Treasury will account for revenue accruing from the windfall tax on a deferred income basis spread over the whole Parliament. [4073]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The Chancellor of the Exchequer will announce details of the windfall tax in his Budget Statement.

Travel Insurance

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current rate of tax levied on travel insurance sold by (a) a bank, (b) a newsagent and (c) a travel agent. [4594]

Dawn Primarolo: Under provisions introduced in the last Budget, with effect from 1 April 1997 travel insurance sold by a travel agent is subject to insurance premium tax (IPT) at a rate of 17.5 per cent. Travel insurance sold by a bank or newsagent is normally liable to IPT at a rate of 4 per cent.

Duty Free Shopping

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy towards the European Commission's proposal to end duty free shopping and if he will make a statement. [4061]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 19 June 1997]: The Government have no objection to looking at the impact of the end of the regime. But the legal commitment is to abolish duty free shopping for intra EU travel by 30 June 1999.

Cot Deaths

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the rate of cot deaths in England and Wales in (i) 1994, (i) 1995 and (iii) 1996. [5959]

Mrs Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Ronnie Fearn, dated 1 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to your recent parliamentary question on the rate of cot deaths in England and Wales.

The information for 1994 and 1995 is available in ONS Monitor Series DH3 96/2 Sudden infant deaths, 1991–1995. This publication is available in the House of Commons Library. Information for 1996 will be published in August 1997.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list each person advising or assisting his Department who has (a) membership of and (b) involvement in (i) the European Round Table of industrialists, (ii) the European Centre for Infrastructure Studies, (iii) the Competitiveness Advisory Group, (iv) Transatlantic Business Dialogue, (v) the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe, (vi) Union of Industrial and Employers Confederations of Europe, (vii) Europa Bio and (viii) the World Business Council for Sustainable Development. [5308]

Mrs. Liddell: I am advised that no civil servant or special adviser in the Chancellor's Departments is either a member of, or directly involved in, any of these bodies. Treasury Ministers and officials do, however, have contacts with many different organisations, including some of those listed, in the course of their work. It would be impracticable to maintain a database of all the organisations and individuals with whom contact is maintained.

Green Taxes

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Tax-benefit Working Group's remit covers the job-creating potential of green tax reform; and if he will make a statement. [5160]

Dawn Primarolo: The role of green taxes is not within the remit of the task force on tax and benefits. The task force will concentrate on streamlining and modernising the tax and benefits systems so as to promote work incentives, reduce poverty and welfare dependency, and strengthen community and family life.

Disabled People (Computer Equipment)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current relief from VAT on computer equipment supplied to disabled people. [4377]

Dawn Primarolo: VAT is not chargeable on the cost of adapting computer equipment so that it is easier for a disabled person to use, nor on items of equipment and software specifically designed for the disabled—for example, Braille embossers.

Married Couples (Taxation)

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane) of 2 June, Official Report, column 89, if the report to be prepared by the Inland Revenue into the tax and benefits system will consider alternative means for the taxation of married couples; [4813]

(2) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Rotherham of 2 June, Official Report, column 89, if he will make it his policy not to take decisions on the future of the married couple's allowance until the review has been completed. [4801]

Dawn Primarolo: Martin Taylor is leading the task force on tax and benefits. He will no doubt consider whatever options can streamline and modernise the systems and so promote work incentives, reduce poverty and welfare dependency, and strengthen community and family life. The Government's policy is to take decisions which will achieve those objectives.

Holidaymakers (Purchases Abroad)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on the United Kingdom economy of holidaymakers purchasing goods duty paid abroad. [4452]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs' latest estimate of the retail value of alcohol and tobacco products purchased duty paid in other EU member states for personal importation into the United Kingdom is given in the table. The figures shown are for the year ending 30 June 1996.

Legitimate cross-border shopping

£ million

Product type	Retail value
Beer	175
Wine	450
Spirits	185
Tobacco products	95
Total	905

Figures have been independently rounded to £5 million. Components may not therefore sum to the totals given.

Customs have no estimate of the value of other goods purchased duty-paid by UK residents abroad.

Tobacco Taxes

Mr. Barron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue was raised from each of the taxes payable on each category of tobacco product in the last year for which figures are available. [4506]

Dawn Primarolo: The amounts raised from excise duty and VAT are as shown for the financial year 1995–96.

£ million

	Duty	VAT
Cigarettes	6,883	1,570
Cigars	131{*B}
Hand-rolling tobacco	225{*B}	140
Other smoking and chewing tobacco	52{*B}

Value added tax has been estimated from Office for National Statistics figures for consumers' expenditure on tobacco.

VAT (Plants)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to bring the VAT charged on flowering and pot plants into line with European Union norms. [5596]

Dawn Primarolo: I have no plans to change the rate of VAT charged on flowering and pot plants. The rate of VAT charged on these goods varies significantly across the European Community.

Firearms

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if payments made by the Government to firearms dealers under (a) the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997 Compensation Scheme and (b) the ex gratia compensation scheme for small calibre pistols are subject to VAT. [5829]

Dawn Primarolo: Yes. If the dealer is registered for VAT the surrender of pistols against a payment of compensation is a taxable supply for VAT purposes.

Fuel Duty (Rural Areas)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will have particular regard in considering any increase in duty on petrol and diesel to the impact of such measures on rural areas with low income levels and lacking public rail and road transport; and if he will make a statement. [5837]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 27 June 1997]: Matters such as these will be taken into account in reaching Budget decisions.

Interest Rates

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 24 June, Official Report, columns 455–56 on interest rates, if he will set out the basis of his calculations and the assumptions on which his measures of real rates were based. [6063]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 1 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your further question (6053) on interest rates following the answer which I gave on 24 June (at columns 455–6).

The original table provided was regretfully incorrect due to miscalculation. I now attach a table providing the corrected nominal and real interest rates which I hope rectifies any confusion ONS caused.

As stated in my original letter, the real rate of interest is calculated as the nominal rate of interest adjusted by removing the growth in inflation over the 12 month period. The basis of the calculation is the base interest rate of retail banks adjusted for the change in the retail price index excluding mortgage interest payments.

The annual rate of interest is a weighted average of the retail banks' base rate over the year. The weights are the number of days a particular interest rate is in operation.

Real interest rates are calculated by adjusting the annual nominal rates by the change in the rate of inflation over the previous year (refer to footnote). The Bank of England also calculate real interest rates, but use indicators of future inflation rather than recorded price changes in the previous year. Latest movements are detailed in their Inflation Report.

Once again I apologise for the inconvenience this error has caused you.

	RPI: Percentage change over 12 months
	Nominal interest rate	All items excluding mortgage interest payments	[1]Real interest rate

[1] The real interest rate = (((1+i_t) / (1+r_t)) –1) * 100 where i_t = the nominal rate of interest in year t (Column 1/100)
r_t = the annual percentage change in retail prices excluding mortgage interest payments (RPIX) between year t–1 and year t (Column 2/100).

Beer (Illegal Imports)

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the loss of income to the Exchequer from illegally imported beer. [6236]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs and Excise estimate that the total revenue (excise duty plus VAT) evaded through smuggling of beer into the UK, excluding any amounts for commercial fraud, is some £110 million per annum.

Customs and Excise (Expenditure)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the expenditure of HM Customs and Excise in each of the last five years for which figures are available on preventing imports of child pornography and associated intelligence. [5450]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 June 1997]: Customs do not hold statistics on expenditure directly related to preventing imports of child pornography and associated intelligence. Child pornography is one of the highest priorities for Customs work in protecting society.

Treasury Economic Brief

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the Treasury weekly economic brief. [6001]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 30 June 1997]: The Treasury is currently considering whether to make a wider range of briefing on the economy and the Government's economic policies available on its Internet site, including material from the Treasury weekly economic brief.

Windfall Tax

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, at the time of the Budget Statement, he will release details of the Treasury analysis of the likely effect of a windfall tax on utility prices, investment levels, share values and employment. [5980]

Mr Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 30 June 1997]: The Chancellor of the Exchequer will announce details of the windfall tax in his Budget Statement.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact of the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance upon the reduction in the unemployment figures in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Wales. [6138]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Edward Rowlands, dated 1 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on what the effects are of the introduction of Jobseekers' Allowance (JSA) on unemployment figures for a) the UK and b) Wales.

The measure of unemployment, derived from the quarterly Labour Force Survey (LFS), is defined on a consistent and internationally recognised basis set out by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and counts as unemployed people who are: a) without a paid job; b) available to start work within the next two weeks and c) have either looked for work in the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained. However, largely because it is a sample survey, information is not available from the LFS in as much geographical detail as from the claimant count measure described below.

ONS also publishes the monthly claimant count, which is based on the administrative system and includes all people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance, Income Support or National Insurance credits) at Employment Service offices on the day of the monthly count, who on that day had signed on as unemployed and available to do any suitable work. Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign are counted, irrespective of whether they are actually receiving benefit.

There have been two main types of JSA effect on the claimant count figures:

1. Changes to rules - the effect of the main change in the rules under JSA, to means test after 6 months rather than twelve months, is proving very difficult to disentangle from other JSA and real economy effects. The best estimate that can be provided is that this has led to around 30,000 extra claimants leaving the count in the UK since the introduction of JSA. A breakdown of this estimate by country is not available.

2. Behavioural - it is likely that the introduction of JSA has had an effect on claimant behaviour, such as deterring fraudulent claims, but it is impossible to quantify this using available data.

The estimates of ILO unemployment properly reflect people's behaviour in the labour market, as reported in LFS interviews, and are not dependent on the receipt of unemployment-related benefits. It is, however, possible that labour market behaviour could have been influenced to some extent by the introduction of Jobseekers' Allowance, although this cannot be quantified.

Tax Returns

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what representations he has received on the availability of suitable software to allow chartered accountants to carry out partnership tax returns under the new assessment system; and what steps he will take to resolve those problems which have been identified; [5650]

(2) when the Inland Revenue (a) planned to make and (b) made available to software houses final versions of the new tax return system; and if he will make a statement; [5651]

(3) what advice he will issue to chartered accountants who cannot gain access to final versions of the necessary software to carry out computerised partnership returns under the new tax assessment system; and what plans he has to extend the filing deadlines for 1997 tax returns. [5652]

Dawn Primarolo: The availability and reliability of commercial computer software packages is a matter for software suppliers to address. For their part the Inland Revenue are continuing to work closely with software suppliers to give them the assistance they need to produce an approved software package.

The near final draft of the new tax return for self-assessment was published in September 1996. The only changes made after September 1996 were minor corrections and the changes required following the last Budget.

The Inland Revenue had kept software houses fully informed of developments throughout the three-year process of consultation on and testing of the new return form.

Taxpayers have until 31 January 1998 to submit their completed 1996–97 tax returns. There are no plans to extend the filing deadline.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the interest payment liability for existing partnerships under income tax self-assessment where the profit for the transitional period is higher than the submitted assessment. [5649]

Dawn Primarolo: From 1997–98 onwards the same payment rules will apply to all self-employed taxpayers, whether individuals or partners. But in 1996–97 special transitional rules apply. For certain partnerships—broadly, those with businesses which commenced prior to April 1994—the transitional arrangements mean that the existing rules are retained for one final year. As in previous years therefore the tax due for 1996–97 is payable in two instalments, on 1 January 1997 and 1 July 1997. Normally interest will only arise on any additional tax for the year, over and above the amount originally assessed, which remains unpaid after 1 July 1997.

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the data gathered in 1977–79 for the tax options for a Scottish Parliament. [6142]

Dawn Primarolo: In taking forward work on the Government's devolution proposals, Treasury Ministers and officials have consulted a wide range of papers and people, including papers bearing on the devolution proposals of the last Labour Government.

Budget

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish, at the same time as the Budget Statement, the Budget briefing pack prepared for departmental Ministers. [6263]

Dawn Primarolo: Budget documents will be provided to right hon. and hon. Members on Budget day as in the past. The Budget brief will be released on the Internet about a week later in the same way as last time.

Tax Rates

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact on the tax yield of increasing the top rate of tax to 50p in the pound; and if he will make a statement. [6254]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated full year yield at 1997–98 income levels of increasing the top rate of income tax from 40 per cent. to 50 per cent. is £5.3 billion. The yield includes the consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax after allowing for likely changes in the volume of disposals. It does not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of the new rate.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Wet-bikes

10. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce regulation to govern the use of wet-bikes; and if he will make a statement. [4673]

Angela Eagle: Local authorities have powers to regulate seaside pleasure boats for the prevention of danger, obstruction or annoyance to persons bathing in the sea or using the seashore and for the prevention and suppression of nuisances. We shall be considering whether existing powers are adequate as part of my Department's review of coastal byelaws.

Strategic Authority for London

13. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the Government's plans to set up a strategic authority for London. [4676]

Mr. Raynsford: To date we have received 22 letters about our plans to set up a strategic authority for London. We have also had a number of meetings at which this issue has been raised.

19. Mrs. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress on the Government's plans to set up a strategic authority for London. [4682]

28. Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress on the Government's plans to set up a strategic authority for London. [4691]

Mr. Raynsford: We intend to issue a consultation paper on the establishment of a strategic authority in London by the end of July. Subsequently we will introduce legislation to make provision for a referendum in London on this matter and, subject to parliamentary approval, it is our intention to hold the referendum in May 1998.

Regional Development Agencies

14. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the regional economic development agencies to be set up. [4677]

Mr. Cabon: We propose to bring forward legislation in the Autumn with a view to the agencies beginning operation on 1 April 1999.

Social Housing

15. Mr. Caplin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress he has made in enabling local authorities to improve and expand the provision of social housing. [4678]

17. Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress he has made in enabling local authorities to improve and expand the provision of social housing. [4680]

Ms Armstrong: We are currently consulting local authorities about our proposals for the capital receipts initiative which will provide additional resources to local housing authorities. Under this initiative local authorities will be able to renovate local authority stock and, in partnership with Registered Social Landlords, provide new social housing where appropriate.

Scottish Assembly

16. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his letter of 3 June, if he will make a statement on the extent to which his Department would retain responsibility for the Health and Safety Commission in the circumstances of a Scottish Assembly. [4679]

Angela Eagle: We are currently considering many issues to do with devolution, including the responsibilities of the Scottish Parliament. The Government's proposals will be published in a White Paper later in the summer.

Water Services

18. Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress he has made in persuading water companies to accept responsibility for supply pipes. [4681]

Mr. Meacher: Water companies have responded positively to the 10 point plan announced at the Water Summit on 19 May. Most have agreed to offer a free leakage detection and repair service for household customers' supply pipes. We are pursuing this issue with a few companies who have yet to give a fully satisfactory response. We will make a further statement shortly.

22. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he next expects to meet representatives of the water companies to discuss water leakage. [4685]

Mr. Prescott: At the Water Summit on 19 May, I announced that the Director General of Water Services would set tough mandatory targets. I have no current plans to meet representatives of the water companies again to discuss the issue.

Homelessness

20. Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what initiatives he has undertaken to reduce homelessness. [4683]

Ms Armstrong: Homelessness is an affront to civilised society; this Government is adopting measures that deal with its causes, through the phased release of capital receipts to help fund new housing, and measures that deal with its effects, by providing a better deal for homeless households.

Construction Contracts (Adjudication)

21. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to bring forward proposals for adjudication, pursuant to the provisions of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996. [4684]

Mr. Raynsford: I expect to lay the order required to implement Part II of this Act later this year.

Council Tax

23. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce changes to council tax banding. [4686]

Mr. Raynsford: The question of whether any changes should be made to the structure of the council tax valuation bands is one that I shall wish to discuss with the Local Government Association and others for reaching a view. Any changes that might be proposed will be the subject of widespread consultation.

Local Government Services

24. Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he has taken to encourage public-private partnership in local government services. [4687]

Ms Armstrong: Good local government should be a partnership between local people, businesses and voluntary groups and our mandate is to give authorities the powers necessary to develop these partnerships. We have introduced a Bill to help authorities set up privately financed projects, and said that compulsory competitive tendering will be replaced by a duty on authorities to achieve best value. In these and other matters we are working closely with the Local Government Association and other parties directly interested in the provision of local services.

National Memorial Arboretum, Alrewas

25. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he next plans to visit the National Memorial Arboretum near Alrewas. [4688]

Mr. Prescott: I have no plans to visit the National Memorial Arboretum. However, the Under Secretary of State (Angela Eagle) plans to visit the Arboretum in October when she launches the Tree Council's 100th Tree Warden Scheme at Lichfield.

Local Government Finance

26. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what powers he has to direct a local authority to rebill all households in the event that it is refused permission to spend above its cap; and who pays for this. [4689]

Mr. Raynsford: The powers to limit an authority's budget requirement are set out in sections 57 to 59 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992. Where these powers have been exercised, the authority is required to make substitute calculations by virtue of section 60, which applies to billing authorities, and section 61, which applies to precepting authorities. Under section 31 a billing authority which makes substitute calculations is required to set substitute amounts of council tax and there is an equivalent requirement for a precepting authority in section 42. Costs of rebilling fall to the billing authority except where they result from a substitute precept issued by a precepting authority. In such cases, section 31 allows the billing authority to recover its administrative expenses from the precepting authority.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement regarding his Department's policy towards the capping of local authorities' spending. [5875]

Mr. Raynsford: We have now met all three of the authorities designated for capping this year (Oxfordshire, Somerset and Warwickshire County Councils) and are carefully considering their cases before determining caps for each authority which are reasonable, achievable and appropriate. We hope to complete the 1997–98 capping round before the summer recess.

For the future, we have given a commitment to do away with crude and universal capping, although we will retain reserve powers to control excessive council tax increases. We are now considering ways to implement our commitment.

Structure Plans

27. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that structure plan population and housing growth figures are commensurate with anticipated employment opportunities and job creation projections. [4690]

Angela Eagle: Existing national policy (PPG12) provides advice to local authorities on the content of structure plans, including the need to ensure that interactions between land use policies for housing and economic development are fully considered. It is open to the Secretary of State to object to a plan if this advice is ignored. These issues are also considered during the preparation of Regional Planning Guidance, issued by the Secretary of State. The Government is committed to a more integrated approach to the planning process at the regional level and is considering the role that Regional Chambers and Regional Development Agencies might play in this process.

Green Belt (West Midlands)

29. Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the protection of the Green Belt in the West Midlands with particular reference to the Meriden gap between Coventry and Birmingham. [4692]

Angela Eagle: Policy on Green Belts is set out in Planning Policy Guidance Note 2. There is a general presumption against inappropriate development in the Green Belt. Inappropriate development can only be justified if there are very special circumstances whereby the harm is clearly outweighed by other considerations.

Regional Planning Guidance for the West Midlands, published in September 1995, reaffirmed this national policy and made clear that the Meriden Gap should remain in the Green Belt.

Within the Meriden Gap between Birmingham and Coventry, detailed Green Belt boundaries have been confirmed in the recently adopted Solihull Unitary Development Plan.

Unitary Authorities

30. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has for reassessing the funding of the new unitary authorities with particular reference to North-east Lincolnshire. [4693]

Ms Armstrong: Discussions with local government on the distribution of Revenue Support Grant for 1998–99 are currently in progress. These discussions will cover most of the standard spending assessment elements received by unitary authorities.

Devolved Decision Making

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans for a rolling programme of devolved decision making within England. [4674]

Mr. Caborn: We want to encourage the development of representative regional bodies in England so that we can increase the Government's accountability. It is important, however, that uniformity is not imposed on the diverse English regions.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what use he plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5104]

Angela Eagle: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions already takes advantage of new technology, including the Internet, as part of its communications strategy. We promote the Internet as an important additional source of information across a wide range of the Department's responsibilities. Examples include the provision of national air quality data, up-dated hourly from the Department's monitoring stations, and full details of the Mobility Roadshow, being held at Crowthorne, with information on a range of production vehicles and equipment for disabled drivers.

The Department currently has two Internet sites averaging 33,000 accesses a week. Collectively both sites carry substantial guidance on open access with information on the Department's business, with named officials, addresses, and telephone numbers and an alphabetically listed public enquiry facility with over 70 e-mail addresses. As a result of our recent merger, arrangements are now in hand to move towards a single Departmental Internet site. Until the site is set up the current addresses are as follows:

DOE–http://www.open.gov.,uk/doe/doehome.htm

DOT–http://www.open.gov.uk/dot/dothome.htm.

Passive Smoking

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with the leisure industry concerning the dangers to their customers and employees from passive smoking. [5083]

Angela Eagle: Officials from the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions have discussed passive smoking with representatives of pub and restaurant trade associations. The associations are well aware of the dangers of passive smoking and are keen to work with us to develop effective smoking policies.

The Government intend to hold a seminar of experts in the field of smoking reduction on 14 July 1997. The results of this seminar will inform policy, which will then be set out in a White Paper on our strategy to reduce smoking. As part of this, my Department will be looking for ways of speeding up progress in the introduction of more stringent smoking policies in public places.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to implement section 57 of the Environment Act 1995 (Provisions on Contaminated Land); and if he will make a statement. [5662]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 21 May to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett), Official Report, columns 84–85.

Environmental Task Force

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what criteria will determine the projects to be undertaken by the Environmental Task Force; to what extent the costs for non-Governmental organisations taking part in the scheme will be reimbursed; and what qualifications will be awarded to those taking part. [5664]

Angela Eagle: Further information on the Government's New Deal programme, including the Environmental Task Force, will be announced as part of the Budget.

Nuclear Discharges

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's policy on proposals relating to nuclear discharges into the marine environment to be considered at the OSPAR convention meeting in September. [6283]

Angela Eagle: The UK delegation to the Oslo and Paris Commissions has made clear to our partners in those Commissions that the Government is reviewing the policy to be adopted on all the questions to be discussed at the forthcoming Ministerial meeting of the OSPAR Commission, among others those relating to radioactive substances, including waste. These reviews are not yet complete.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if housing benefit will continue to be paid via local authority housing revenue accounts. [5046]

Mr. Raynsford: We are currently examining the financing of local authority housing as part of our comprehensive review of spending. Housing benefit granted by local authorities to their tenants as rent rebates is paid through local authority housing revenue accounts in accordance with the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Legislation would be required to change this.

Lake District Planning Board

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the reappointment date for each member of the Lake District Planning Board. [5824]

Angela Eagle: Twelve members of the new Lake District National Park Authority were appointed by the then Secretary of State for the Environment with effect from 1 October 1996. They are listed below, together with the expiry date of their current appointments. Seven of the 12 members are appointed to represent the national interest, the remainder are parish members. The Authority has a further 14 members appointed by the local authorities in the area.

Secretary of State members of the Lake District National Park Authority

	Appointment expires
National
Mr. William Cowx	31 March 1998
Mr. John Trotter	31 March 1998
Mr. Peter Dean	31 March 1999

Mr. Keith Harryman	31 March 1999
Mr. John Park	31 March 1999
Mr. David Thornton	31 March 1999
Parish members
Mr. Thomas Coulthard	All 31 May 1999
Mr. Benjamin Dobson
Mr. John Hayton
Dr. Helen Jones
Mr. Jack Morris-Eyton

Small Cetaceans Agreement

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the actions taken by the Government, pursuant to the Agreement for Small Cetaceans in the Baltic and North Seas. [6007]

Angela Eagle: The UK has taken forward numerous measures to implement the Resolution on the implementation of a Conservation and Management Plan, adopted by the Parties at Stockholm in September 1994. The Resolution established the following as priority actions: reduction of pollution; reduction of direct interaction with fisheries; reduction of indirect interactions with fisheries; reduction of disturbance; reduction of indirect disturbance; monitoring, status and population studies; education and promotion; and administration.

The UK has produced a report on actions taken between April 1992 and March 1996. A copy of that report will be made available to the hon. Member.

Vehicle Emissions Standards

42. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to improve vehicle emissions standards. [4705]

Dr. Strang: The Government is considering a range of measures for reducing vehicle emissions. These include measures aimed at reducing the level of emissions from individual vehicles, and reduced car usage.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

44. Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to announce a decision about the Birmingham northern relief road. [4707]

Dr. Strang: The Birmingham northern relief road is one of 12 schemes that are the subject of an accelerated review as part of our roads review. We propose to announce decisions on these schemes later.

Railway Industry (Investment)

45. Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to encourage higher investment by the privatised rail industry. [4708]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government is keen to encourage higher levels of investment by the rail industry. First and foremost, we will use all the levers at our disposal to make sure that Railtrack and the train operating companies deliver on their existing investment obligations.

Trust Ports

46. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's proposals for the future of trust ports. [4709]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Trust ports vary greatly in their commercial significance, type of use, and the powers and duties they have under local legislation. We will be reviewing the options available to trust ports, including voluntary privatisation under the Ports Act 1991.

M62 Relief Road

47. Mr. Ivan Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on progress in respect of the M62 relief road scheme. [4710]

Dr. Strang: The M62 relief road was withdrawn from the roads programme in November 1995.

Public Transport (Bicycles)

48. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received recently regarding the transit of bicycles on the public transport system; and if he will make a statement. [4711]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have received 29 representations about the transit of bicycles on trains.

The Government supports the objectives of the national cycling strategy and the aim of a fourfold increase in cycling by 2012, as part of an integrated transport policy. The Government will be encouraging improvements in conditions for cycling, and we intend to play a full part in the National Cycling Forum, which has been set up to co-ordinate delivery of the strategy.

I recently presented a cycle mark to Anglia Railways under the rail operations' code of practice for cyclists for its bikes on trains initiatives.

London Underground

49. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the future ownership of London Underground. [4712]

53. Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his plans for the funding of London Underground. [4718]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are looking very urgently at options for public/private partnership to increase investment in the core Underground network. This work is intended to fulfil our Manifesto commitment to develop "a new public/private partnership to improve the Underground, safeguard its commitment to the public interest and guarantee value for money to taxpayers and passengers". We have also made it clear that wholesale privatisation of London Underground is not the answer.

Airports (Investment)

50. Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the level of investment in the airports system. [4713]

Dr. Strang: In 1995–96, the most recent year for which information is available, £591 million was invested in UK airports. (Sources: The UK Airports Industry Airports Statistics 1995–96, published by the Centre for the Study of Regulated Industries, and the Civil Aviation Authority).

A1 (Morpeth)

51. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about progress towards dualling the A1 north of Morpeth. [4716]

Dr. Strang: The Highways Agency is investigating the further dualling of the A1 between Morpeth and the Scottish Border.

Road Traffic

52. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has for the reduction of road traffic as part of his Department's promotion of sustainable development. [4717]

Dr. Strang: We will be addressing the issue of road traffic growth as we develop our integrated transport policy.

Traffic Flow (London)

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on plans to improve traffic flow in London. [4706]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government announced last month that it was launching a fundamental review of transport policy to provide an integrated transport system which meets the needs of all regions of the county, including London. Traffic levels will form a key aspect of that review.

Heathrow and Gatwick Airports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on how many days in (a) 1996 and (b) 1997 a procedure permitting a reduced final approach separation distance between aircraft has been put into operation at (i) Heathrow and (ii) Gatwick airports. [5603]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Strict criteria, particularly in respect of visibility and weather conditions, govern the introduction of reduced final approach separation. Since the trials began in 1994, procedure has been applied for approximately 1 per cent. of flights into Heathrow overall. Specific information on the number of days involved in 1996 and 1997 is not available. A similar trial is expected to start at Gatwick airport soon.

Cycling

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will represent to the Rail Regulator the importance of cycling in the Government's transport policy; and if he will make a statement. [5807]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 12 June 1997, Official Report, volume 296, column 523.

Roads Programme Review

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what environmental and economic criteria the Government will use to review road schemes in its forthcoming Roads Programme Review; if the same criteria will apply for each phase of the review; and if he will make a statement. [5960]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Both the accelerated review and the main review will use the same criteria of accessibility, safety, environmental impact and economy. Our objective is to find the best possible solutions to the transport problems we face within the limits of the available resources and to ensure that short term gains in one area are not negated by wider or longer term damage. Achieving the right balance between our four criteria will therefore be a central issue in the review.

Channel Tunnel (Safety)

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to improve security on trains travelling through the Channel Tunnel. [6153]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The security requirements placed on the operators of Channel Tunnel rail services are closely tailored to the risk, which takes account of the threat to the tunnel as assessed by Government agencies. The measures, which cover both the trains and the passengers, freight and vehicles carried, are constantly monitored and adjusted according to the level of assessed risk, and any necessary improvements made in the light of experience.

Public Servants (Car Use)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what policies the Government will adopt to discourage the use of cars by public servants. [4714]

Dr. Strang: A cross-Government group is reviewing existing travel policies and identifying what measures can be taken to reduce the environmental impact of travel. Departments are being encouraged to draw up green transport plans to address issues such as staff commuting and official business travel. Guidance on green transport plans is being developed by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions to assist other Departments. The Government has also been encouraging public and private sector organisations to look at ways of minimising staff commuting by car and cutting down on environmental impacts of car fleets. The Government's general transport policies to encourage use of public transport and reduce car dependency, will also affect public servants' travel decisions.

Rail Services (South West)

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review rail services in the south west. [4715]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Our objective for the whole of the passenger network is to see more people travelling by rail. We want higher levels of investment, proper enforcement of train operators' service commitments and all the benefits of having a national railway network. We welcome work that is planned or in progress to improve rail services in the south west and elsewhere on the network.

Network Card

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to extend the powers of the Rail Regulator to enable him to prevent train operating companies making significant changes to the conditions applying to network-purchased train tickets. [5463]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Neither the Government nor the Rail Regulator has powers to prevent train operating companies making changes to the conditions applying to the Network Card. Train operating companies' participation in the Network Card scheme is voluntary and there is no statutory obligation on them to offer the Network Card.

The Government is currently considering the options for establishing more effective and accountable regulation by the Rail Regulator.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will meet the Rail Operators Association to discuss their proposals to (a) limit the use of the network and (b) increase the cost of travel for those using the network card. [6299]

Ms Jackson: The Government has no powers to prevent train operators changing either the price of the Network Card or the conditions on which it is offered. The Government is keen to see off-peak rail travel increase. We have already held a number of discussions with train operators, and we will continue to encourage them to develop new plans to expand the off-peak market in the South East and elsewhere.

Bus Route Tenders (London)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) of 19 June, Official Report, column 278, if he will make it his policy to withhold on grounds of confidentiality only those parts of any tender document that necessarily should be confidential and make the other parts of the document publicly available with those confidential parts blanked out. [6123]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is a matter for London Transport Buses.

Lightning Jets

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy in respect of granting licences to fly ex-RAF Lightning jets in private ownership in the United Kingdom; and what guidance he issues to licensing authorities in other countries. [5505]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The issue of Permits to Fly to ex military aircraft is the responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority, which is sponsored by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. The CAA's policy on this subject is set out in the British Civil Airworthiness Requirements (BCAR) Chapter A8–20—this requirement covers the design evaluation and assessment of the aircraft type, as well as the maintenance activity required to maintain its airworthiness. In addition, Civil Aviation Publication (CAP) 632 specifies the requirements to be satisfied for the operation of ex military aircraft by civil organisations, owners and operators. BCAR A8–20 and CAP 632 are both available to the public.

The CAA does not give general guidance to overseas authorities, but would share its experience on specific aircraft types if asked.

M25

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the length of the stretches of road to be included in the proposed widening of the M25 in Surrey including those areas involving the removal of hard shoulders; and if he will make a statement. [6335]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The widening scheme for M25 junctions 12 to 15 is 10.9 km long of which 1.595 km of the Northbound carriageway and 955 m of the Southbound carriageway has discontinued hard shoulder.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the accelerated highways review will include an assessment of the safety implications of containing the proposed widening of the M25 in Surrey within the existing motorway curtilage; and if he will make a statement. [6340]

Ms Jackson: The Accelerated Review will assess schemes in terms of accessibility, safety, economy and environmental impact. The safety implications of continuing widening within the existing motorway boundary will be considered.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the projected carbon emissions within the vicinity are consequent on the proposed widening of the M25 between junctions 12 and 15 will be compatible with the commitments made on behalf of the United Kingdom under the Convention on Climate Change; and if he will make a statement. [6337]

Ms Jackson: The UK is on course to meet its climate change convention commitment to return national emissions of carbon dioxide to 1990 levels by the year 2000. Within this trend of downward total national emissions some individual emissions may rise. As shown in the Environmental Statement about the scheme this is forecast for the proposed widening of the M25 between junctions 12 and 15. Such increases are not incompatible with the UK commitment.

A23

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the construction of the A23 Coulsdon Inner Relief Road. [6334]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The A23 Coulsdon Inner Relief Road proposals will be considered within the terms of the comprehensive Review of Trunk Roads announced recently by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport. The full Review will include consultation with interested parties. The results of the Review are expected next Spring.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment has been made of the feasibility of a banded form of vehicle excise duty related to engine size and fuel efficiency and the environmental benefits that would accrue. [5381]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

It is not possible to comment on tax matters in advance of the Budget.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements there are to ensure a high quality of telephone access to the Child Support Agency; and if she will review the quality of telephone access. [2182]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients throughout the child support assessment process.

The Secretary of State has asked the Child Support Agency to improve the telephone service it offers to its customers. To do this the Agency plans to employ staff to work a wider more flexible range of working patterns over six days a week. This will provide more opportunities for customers to contact the Agency and vice versa, and will enable the Agency to deliver a better standard of customer service through greater use of the telephone and faster throughput of cases.

Pensioners' Christmas Bonus

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Christmas bonus for pensioners was introduced; what was its value; and what plans he has to increase it this year. [4033]

Mr. Denham: All pensioners should share fairly in rising national prosperity and we are committed to examining ways to deliver more automatic help to the poorest pensioners. We will shortly be announcing details of a review of the central areas of insecurity for older people.

The Christmas bonus was first paid in December 1972 at the rate of £10. We have no plans to increase this payment in 1997.

Benefits (Payment)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will increase the discretion of local managers of benefits offices to allow those who may be currently required to appear in person to collect benefit, to be paid their benefit by post. [4567]

Mr. Field: In order to safeguard public funds, each individual claimant's case is considered on its own merit. There are no plans to amend this regulation. As the administration of Social Security benefits is a matter for the Benefits Agency, I have asked its Chief Executive, Peter Mathison, to write to the hon. Member directly and for his reply to be published with the answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Tom Dalyell, dated 30 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if she will increase the discretion of local managers of benefit offices to allow those who may be currently required to appear in person to collect benefit, to be paid their benefit by post.

The manner in which benefit is paid is determined by a Benefits Agency officer acting on behalf of the Secretary of State. These officials have a duty to safeguard public funds and to ensure that the customer receives the benefit to which they are entitled. There are circumstances where officials may consider it necessary for a customer to collect their benefit in person. These may be where the customer has an unsafe postal address or is homeless.

A customer's individual circumstances are always considered when the payment method is determined. There are no plans to change the level of discretion an officer acting on behalf of the Secretary of State has in determining whether a customer is required to collect their benefit in person.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Housing Benefit (Rent Levels)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the future relationship between housing benefit subsidy and rent levels in the public sector. [5047]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Housing policy and housing benefit policy should not be considered in isolation from each other, and we need to consider the relationship between personal subsidy and "bricks and mortar" subsidy. This Department will be working with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the regions with the aim of developing a housing policy which frees people from the benefit trap and which encourages personal responsibility.

We are examining the financing of local authority housing as part of our Comprehensive Spending Review. This will review all aspects of public expenditure and will see that taxpayers' money is being spent effectively in order to fulfil the Government's manifesto commitments.

Pensioners (VAT on Fuel)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the effect on (a) a single retirement pensioner and (b) a retirement pensioner couple of reducing VAT on domestic fuel from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent., taking into account the effect of the subsequent annual uprating of pensions and benefits. [6173]

Mr. Denham: pensioners' fuel bills vary considerably. We expect any reduction in VAT to be reflected in their fuel bills.

SCOTLAND

Crofting

Mrs. Ray Mitchie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions have been held with representatives of the Scottish Crofter's Union regarding (a) changes to land tenure and (b) specific grants for crofters and crofting communities. [3822]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 23 June 1997]: My noble Friend the Minister for Agriculture, the Environment and Fisheries met representatives of the Scottish Crofters' Union (SCU) on 9 June. There was no discussion of changes to land tenure as such but union representatives outlined their ideas for the establishment of a Pan-Highland Trust. In addition, the SCU mentioned the importance to crofters of the crofters building grants and loans scheme.

Bullying

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he has given to schools and local education authorities concerning dealing with bullying; and what steps he has taken to encourage schools and LEAs to learn from best practice elsewhere in Scotland in this respect. [5397]

Mr. Wilson: The Government take the problem of bullying very seriously. In recent years, my Department has issued a range of guidance on the subject, as follows.

In 1992, the Department issued to all schools a support pack called "Action against Bullying". The pack contained extensive examples of good practice and stressed that the single most important thing a school can do to prevent bullying is have a clear policy to which staff, pupils and parents are committed.

In 1993, the Department funded the issue to every school of a follow-up resource pack aimed at non-teaching staff and families. The pack is called "Supporting Schools against Bullying in Scotland".

In August 1994, the Department issued to all schools a leaflet aimed directly at children entitled "Let's Stop Bullying—Advice for Young People". In August the following year, the Department issued a further leaflet providing advice for parents and families entitled "Let's Stop Bullying—Advice for Parents and Families".

We are urgently reviewing what further steps might be taken. I have asked for the report "Which Way Now? A Progress Report on Bullying in Scottish Schools" by Andrew Mellor to be followed up, in order to establish if there are further measures based on the report which could be usefully implemented. I am also taking steps to satisfy myself that every school has an effective anti-bullying policy in place.

Health Boards

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to reform the structure of health boards in Scotland with particular reference to the percentage of the board made up of (a) councillors, (b) NHS representatives and (c) directly elected representatives; and if he will make a statement. [5862]

Mr. Galbraith: In the last week eight new chairmen for health boards have been announced, which signals a new direction for the Scottish Health Service. It is our intention to ensure that health boards are representative of the populations they serve: I have just announced a local authority member for Lothian, Tayside and Grampian health boards. It is my intention to ensure that all health boards have on them a local authority member. I have also indicated that I would welcome nominations of candidates for health boards from the STUC. In all cases I will appoint the best available candidates in order to pursue the Government agenda for the NHS.

Water Authorities

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when, and in what form, the water authorities in Scotland will be returned to local democratic control. [5866]

Mr. Dewar: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 5 June 1997 to my hon. Friend the member for Glasgow, Shettleston (Mr. Marshall), Official Report, column 233–34 and to the reply given on 26 June 1997 to my right hon. Friend for Inverness, Nairn and Lochaber (Mr. Stewart), Official Report, column 601–02.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the Scottish health projects which were pursuing experimental private finance initiative funding as at 22 June; and if he will indicate the sum spent to date in respect of preparatory work for each project. [5992]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 30 June 1997]: Proposals for capital projects which were exploring the PFI route as at 22 June this year and on which information is held by the Department are as listed. It should be noted that projects are considered for PFI only after outline business case approval. In addition there are other smaller projects developed on the same principles which fall within trust and health board delegated limits and for which information is not held centrally.

Health board/NHS trust	Project description	Capital value (£ million)
Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh NHS Trust	Relocation of major acute teaching hospital	175
Law Hospital NHS Trust	Hospital	100
Hairmyres and Stonehouse Hospitals NHS Trust	New major acute hospital	63
Victoria Infirmary NHS Trust	Provision of geriatric beds at Mearnskirk	2
Ayrshire and Arran Community Healthcare NHS Trust	Community Hospital (Cumnock, East Ayrshire)	9
Greater Glasgow Community and Mental Health Services Trust	Replacement of facilities for delivery of in patient mental health services (Stobhill)	8
Southern General Hospital NHS Trust	Provision of geriatric medicine	9
Western Isles Health Board	Community Hospital	8
Dumfries and Galloway Acute and Maternity Hospitals NHS Trust	Provision of maternity and day care services	4
Yorkhill NHS Trust	Provision of maternity services	10
Orkney Health Board	Community Hospital	12
Highland Communities NHS Trust	Provision of psychiatric unit (Inverness)	18
Dundee Healthcare NHS Trust	Provision of psychiatric unit (Dundee)	9
Renfrewshire Healthcare NHS Trust	Geriatric assessment facility	9
West Glasgow Hospitals University NHS Trust	New major acute teaching hospital	100
Glasgow Royal Infirmary University NHS Trust	Package of schemes	40

On Monday 16 June I announced that due to the urgent nature of proposals for maternity and theatre facilities at Glasgow Royal the Government would provide £36 million of public funding. Other aspects of the package of schemes will continue to explore PFI. I also decided that PFI was inappropriate for proposals for the redevelopment of the Western general hospital in Edinburgh and on Monday 23 June announced that £40 million would be provided for a new ward and theatre block.

Information on sums spent on preparatory work is not centrally available. However we estimate that costs should be not more than 1.5 per cent. of the capital value of a project. In view of the innovative nature of PFI boards and trusts have been provided with some funding to help cover these costs. As at 30 April 1997 grants to projects listed above amounted to approximately £4.7 million. We expect costs to decrease significantly as the PFI process becomes more streamlined. It should also be noted that much of the preparatory work for a project is necessary regardless of whether it will be funded publicly or under the PFI.

Badgers

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) arrests, (b) prosecutions and (c) convictions have been recorded under the Protection of Badgers Act 1992 in Scotland in each year since 1992 broken down by local authority; and if he will make a statement. [5708]

Mr. McLeish: Information on the number of people arrested is not collected centrally.

The information requested on prosecutions and convictions is not separately identifiable within the Scottish Office Home Department's classification of crimes and offences.

Museums

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the museums in Scotland registered under the Museums and Galleries Commission's registration scheme. [6312]

Mr. Galbraith: There are some 300 Scottish museums and galleries registered under the scheme. A list of registered museums in Scotland drawn up by the Museums and Galleries Commission is available in the Library.

HEALTH

Royal Bolton Hospital

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients admitted to Royal Bolton hospital (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97 had been forced to remain in hospital for longer than their treatment required because suitable residential or day care was not available for up to (i) one week, (ii) two weeks, (iii) one month, (iv) two months and (v) three months or longer; and what estimate he has made of the additional costs to the NHS of these extended periods of care. [4251]

Mr. Boateng: For information for 1 June 1997, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 20 June 1997 at columns 317–18. Bolton Hospital national health service trust is unable to aggregate these figures for the reasons previously described. The trust has collected precise information on this subject only for the last 18 months. My hon. Friend may wish to approach Mrs. B. Peacock, chairman of the trust, for more details.

Surgical Work

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring takes place of the quality of surgery carried out in general practitioners' surgeries; how this compares with the monitoring of similar surgical work in hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [5320]

Mr. Milburn: In order to receive a fee from the health authority for undertaking minor surgical procedures, a general practitioner must gain admission to the health authority's minor surgery list. The National Health Service (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992 require the health authority to satisfy itself that the general practitioner has the medical experience, training and facilities necessary to carry out minor surgical procedures.

General practitioners themselves are guided by professional advice on minor surgery. We are exploring with the profession options for standardising entry criteria and introducing regular review of general practitioners on such lists.

Clinical audit can have a valuable role in maintaining and enhancing the quality of clinical care. The Government and the NHS support clinical audit in all areas of care, and nowadays participation in audit is becoming an accepted and expected part of high standards of professional practice.

Waiting Lists

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were awaiting non-emergency treatment for (a) up to six months, (b) up to 12 months, (c) up to 18 months, (d) up to 24 months and (e) for over 24 months in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and Cleveland, East at the latest date for which figures are available. [5562]

Mr. Milburn: The latest date for which the information requested is available is 31 March 1997. Provisional figures show that on that date 9,931 patients were waiting for admission to South Tees Acute hospitals NHS trust, the major trust in my hon. Friend's constituency, on either an inpatient or day-case basis. Of these, 7,430 had been waiting up to six months and all had been waiting less than 12 months.

Prescriptions

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has given to health authorities concerning the (a) payment and (b) monitoring of payment for prescriptions, issued by general practitioners for optician services. [5659]

Mr. Milburn: Only optometrists, and ophthalmic medical practitioners are empowered to issue prescriptions for glasses under the General Ophthalmic Services. Guidance on monitoring and checking arrangements is contained in Health Circular HC(91)17, copies of which are available in the Library.

Health Service Reviews

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a full list of reviews at present being carried out in the national health service, the timetable for each review and if the results will be published. [5691]

Mr. Milburn: In addition to reviews of local services being carried out by health authorities, the Government have announced the following reviews which have an impact on the national health service.

The Chief Secretary to the Treasury announced a Government-wide comprehensive spending review on 11 June which will look at all areas of Government spending. The timetable for the review is 12 months and the results will inform a new set of public expenditure plans. In the Department of Health the review will be carried out in the context of the Government's election manifesto commitment which states:

"if you are ill or injured there will be a national health service there to help; and access to it will be based on need and need alone—not on your ability to pay, or on who your GP happens to be or on where you live".

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health announced on 20 June the details of the Government's review of health services in London. The review will be conducted by an independent advisory panel chaired by Sir Leslie Turnberg, President of the Royal College of Physicians. The panel has been asked to complete the main elements of its work by the end of October 1997. It is envisaged that the panel's findings will be published.

We have announced an ongoing review looking at the process and product of the private finance initiative in the NHS. It will be complete by the end of the year and the results will be published.

In addition, we have also established a national health service efficiency task force to explore more effective and efficient ways of delivering high quality patient care. The group has not been asked to prepare a report.

Dental Services

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the 1996–97 General Dental Service access funding grants were allocated to dental practices in the Cambridgeshire and Huntingdon health authority area; if this funding has been distributed; and to what extent criteria set out in the bid were fulfilled. [5681]

Mr. Milburn: The funding was used to meet the aims identified in the health authority's bid and was allocated to practices in the 1996–97 financial year.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the £41,000 recently awarded to Gloucestershire health authority to improve patients' access to NHS dentistry has yet been allocated. [5674]

Mr. Milburn: Yes.

Cancer Treatment (CPT-II)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the effectiveness of the drug CPT-II in combating bowel cancer; [5612]

(2) what is the cost of a course of treatment for CPT-II; [5614]

(3) which health authorities currently allow the supply of CPT-II to cancer patients. [5613]

Ms Jowell: CPT-II is the manufacturer's code name for a chemotherapy drug, Irinotecan hydrochloride which this year acquired a product licence from the Medicines Control Agency. While the Department of Health does not undertake research into new drugs prior to licensing, the Medicines Control Agency assesses the research evidence relating to their quality, safety and efficacy before licensing. The dose of CPT-II is adjusted for the size of patient; the cost of one dose is £830 on average and some patients may have up to six doses, at intervals of three weeks.

The drug came on the market only three months ago. Further research is underway to assess its role in comparison with current standard treatment and many doctors will await the outcome of this research before deciding whether to use this drug. For these reasons, it is too early to derive meaningful information on where the drug is being provided. The decisions on whether to use any drug takes into consideration the medical details of the individual patient and evidence as to whether the patient is likely to benefit.

Health Service Fraud

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the Healthcare Financial Management Association report concerning alleged fraud in the health service; and if he will make a statement; [5657]

(2) what plans he has to implement the recommendations of the Healthcare Financial Management Association report on alleged fraud in the health service. [5658]

Mr. Milburn: We are determined to stamp out fraud which diverts resources away from patient care in the national health service. The report of the Efficiency Scrutiny on Prescription Fraud in England and Wales was published on 19 June. In response to that report, we have already announced the Government's intention to take immediate steps to tackle prescription fraud.

We shall also look carefully at the report of the Healthcare Financial Management Association and consider its recommendations, some of which complement those of the Efficiency Scrutiny. We shall consider the proposals to deal with dental and optical fraud on a similar timescale.

Hepatitis C

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ensure that counselling is available for those who contracted hepatitis C, other than by means of blood transfusions. [5667]

Ms Jowell: As my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health said in his reply of 19 June 1997, column 291, patients who may be infected with hepatitis C should be given sufficient information to enable them to make an informed decision about the implications for them of a positive test before being tested. Generally we would expect that the health care professionals dealing with the patient should be able to provide the advice and support that the patient needs. A few may require more specialist counselling and support. Patients who have a positive test should, if they wish, be referred to a specialist for further advice on the management of their disease, including more specialised counselling. It is for those commissioning services to ensure that suitably trained staff are available to advise such patients irrespective of how they were infected.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department gives on the circumstances in which it is appropriate for health authorities or trusts to engage outside advisers or consultants in the preparation of PFI proposals; and if he will make a statement. [5815]

Mr. Milburn: Guidance on the appointment of external consultants and advisers is given in the "National Health Service Capital Investment Manual" (HSG(94)31 published in 1994) in the sections "Business Case Guide" and "Management of Construction Projects". The "Guide to Procedures for the Commissioning of Building and Engineering Consultants" issued as part of "Concode" (published 1983) also gives advice. Advice is also available in "5 Steps to the Appointment of Advisers to PFI Projects" (published May 1996) which was issued by the private finance panel.

We will be examining the use of external advisors in our review of PFI.

Elmstead House, Hendon

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the report into the deaths at Elmstead House, Hendon, will be published. [5663]

Mr. Milburn: We understand that Barnet health authority currently expects the report of the review panel to be published in late July or early August this year.

Health Service Professionals

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the (a) advantages and (b) disadvantages of self employed status for national health service (i) general practitioners, (ii) pharmacists, (iii) dentists and (iv) opticians. [5660]

Mr. Milburn: Self-employment has both advantages and disadvantages for both the national health service and the contractors concerned, who will take these into account when making decisions on how best to pursue their professions.

The national health service already directly employs doctors, dentists, pharmacists and optometrists in the hospital and community health sectors.

The national health service Acts currently require health authorities to arrange for the provision of primary care, generally through independent contractors. Pilots that may be introduced under the NHS (Primary Care) Act 1997 could extend to doctors and dentists options for salaried service in this sector.

BSE

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has received further advice from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee on the scientific evidence on the possibility of a link between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. [6573]

Mr. Dobson: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC) considered this issue at its meeting on 23 May 1997 and has since produced a statement entitled, "Research Into The Link Between BSE and nvCJD" (SEAC, June 1997). The statement summarises the key research results on the question of whether there is a causal link between bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) and new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (nvCJD) which have emerged since March 1996 when SEAC first concluded that the most likely explanation for the cases of the new variant CJD was exposure to BSE before the introduction of the Spongiform Bovine Offals ban in 1989. The statement concludes that the evidence that has accumulated since the March 1996 announcement is consistent with the hypothesis that nvCJD is caused by exposure to the BSE agent, and that no evidence refuting the hypothesis that nvCJD is caused by exposure to the BSE agent, and that no evidence refuting the hypothesis has yet come to light. However, SEAC regard the evidence to date as insufficient to constitute formal scientific proof of a causative link, and that further data are required before a firm conclusion can be reached. A copy of the statement has been placed in the Library.

Blood Centre, Liverpool

Ms Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received (a) during the consultation process and (b) subsequently from medical consultees on the clinical implications of proposals to remove blood processing and testing from the Liverpool blood centre. [5653]

Mr. Boateng: The consultation process relating to the plans for the reorganisation of the National Blood Service took place in 1994–95. Separate records were not kept on the make-up of those commenting. Since 1 May 1997, one clinician has written with views on the proposed changes at the Liverpool blood centre.

Hospitals (London Review)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the geographical area for hospitals within the London review; and on what basis that area was determined. [5715]

Mr. Milburn: The review covers services provided within the area of Greater London.

Basildon and Thurrock Hospital Trust

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the towns of residence of each of the non-executive directors of the Basildon and Thurrock hospital trust; [5710]

(2) what are the termination dates of the contracts for the existing non-executive directors of the Basildon and Thurrock hospital trust; and when he expects advertisements will be published inviting applications to fill the next vacancies that occur. [5711]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is provided in the table:

	Post town	Appointment dates
		From	To
Chairman
Mr. Ian Macpherson	Ingatestone	1 December 1993	30 November 1997
Non-executive directors
Mr. Derek Harman	Benfleet	1 December 1995	30 November 1997
Mrs. Joan Sladden	Brentwood	1 December 1993	30 November 1997
Mr. Peter Wallis	Grays	1 December 1994	30 November 1998
Mr. Melvyn Lambert	Hornchurch	1 December 1996	30 November 1998
Ms Fiona East	Brentwood	1 December 1996	30 November 1998

An advertisement for the chairmanship appointment appeared in the Sunday Times on 29 June 1997. Two more advertisements will be placed in The Guardian on 2 July 1997, and The Times on 3 July 1997. The two non-executive director posts will be advertised in the local press shortly.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which (a) royal colleges and (b) other bodies have indicated that they may withdraw accreditation for teaching of staff employed by the Basildon and Thurrock hospital trust if services are not transferred to Basildon hospital from (i) Orsett hospital and (ii) other locations. [5713]

Mr. Milburn: We understand from Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS Trust that the accreditation of training currently undertaken at Basildon hospital is not dependent on services being transferred there from Orsett or other locations.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultants with (a) full time contracts and (b) part-time contracts with the Basildon and Thurrock hospital trust are permitted under those contracts to work privately at (i) the Nuffield hospital, Brentwood and (ii) other hospitals indicating the total hours they are contracted to work for (1) the trust in each case and (2) in private hospitals. [5714]

Mr. Milburn: We understand from Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS Trust that it currently employs 69 consultant medical staff. Of these 31 are on whole-time contracts and do 11 sessions a week, 30 are on maximum part-time contracts and do 10 sessions a week, and eight are on part time contracts and do from two to eight sessions a week for the trust. The consultants are employed on nationally agreed terms and conditions which specify their entitlement to undertake private practice. The work plans of every consultant are reviewed annually to ensure that contractual requirements are met and that clinical sessions are allocated to meet local healthcare needs.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the document by which the Basildon and Thurrock hospital trust consulted the Burma Star Association over its intention to seek planning permission for residential development at Orsett of land containing the Burma Star Association's garden of remembrance. [5716]

Mr. Milburn: We understand from Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS trust that the planning documents prepared so far deal with the principles of land use. Matters relating to the layout of the land are reserved, and Parties having an interest in the site will be consulted as appropriate.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the terminal dates of the fixed term contracts for each of the executive directors of the Basildon and Thurrock hospital trust. [5709]

Mr. Milburn: We understand from Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS trust that each of the executive directors is on an 18-month rolling contract subject to regular formal review by the remuneration committee.

Cot Deaths

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the expert group on cot deaths chaired by lady Limerick to publish its final report; if he will ask the group to research the cause of levels of antimony and phosphorus compounds in infants; and if he will make a statement. [5844]

Mr. Boateng: The expert group on cot death theories has the following terms of reference:

> "To review the findings of the report on "Sudden Infant Death Syndrome" (the "Turner report", 1991) and any subsequent data on hypotheses linking antimony with unexplained deaths in infants; and to advise the CMO on what further studies should be undertaken to investigate postulated causal relationships between chemicals and cot deaths."

The group is expected to publish its final report in December 1997. It has given detailed consideration to all aspects of the theory and have recommended a considerable amount of research work, which has been funded by the Department. Any need for further action will be considered following publication of the report.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers he has to review and terminate the appointment of members of NHS trusts, ambulance trusts and health authorities before the end of their normal appointment period; and in what circumstances he may take such action. [5825]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health has powers to terminate the appointment of chairmen or non-executive directors of national health service bodies. The circumstances in which these powers may be used are defined in regulations. Those relating to trusts, including ambulance trusts, are contained within the National Health Service Trusts (Membership and Procedure) Regulations 1990 (Statutory Instrument 1990/2024), as amended by the National Health Service Trusts (Membership and Procedure) Amendment Regulations 1996 (Statutory Instrument 1996/1755). In relation to chairmen and non-executive members of health authorities,

They are contained within the Health Authorities (Membership and Procedure Regulations) 1996 (Statutory Instrument 1996/707). Copies of these regulations are available in the Library.

Euthanasia

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on his policy on (a) the legislation of euthanasia and (b) the granting of legally binding status to advance directives; [6076]

(2) what plans he has to introduce legislation on advance directives, euthanasia, or the treatment of mentally incapacitated adults; and if he will make a statement. [6075]

Ms Jowell: We have no plans to introduce legislation to legalise euthanasia. Advance directives, provided they contain lawful instructions, if validly made and applicable in the circumstances presenting, are already legally binding under the common law. My right hon. and noble Friend, the Lord Chancellor is considering what action to take on the Law Commission's proposals concerning mentally incapacitated adults.

Social and Health Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will conduct a review of the arrangements for joint working between primary health care providers and social services departments in the commission of social and health care. [5881]

Mr. Boateng: The National Health Service Executive and social services inspectorate, in consultation with relevant bodies, are developing and will shortly be issuing a resource pack to assist local authorities and primary care to develop more effective collaborative arrangements. This will be followed by a series of regional dissemination events.

Tobacco

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the likely reduction in smoking resulting from a total ban on (a) tobacco advertising and (b) tobacco sponsorship; what research his Department has evaluated on this matter; and if he will place this research in the Library. [6304]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the relative efficiency of (a) banning tobacco (i) advertising and (ii) sponsorship and (b) other methods in reducing levels of smoking. [6303]

Ms Jowell: There is a significant body of research connecting tobacco advertising with children's smoking, both in predisposing children to start smoking and reinforcing the habit in those who have already started. Research, most recently that commissioned by the Health Education Authority to be published this week, indicates that the percentage of 11 to 15-year-olds who report having seen adverts for cigarettes in the last six months is as high as 96 per cent. Studies have also repeatedly shown that children who smoke choose brands which are most heavily advertised, and there is also evidence that adult consumption is affected by advertising. The 1992 Smee report on the effect of tobacco advertising on consumption found that in individual countries the balance of evidence shows that advertising does have a positive effect on consumption, copies of this report are available in the Library.

Controlling tobacco consumption requires a much wider range of measures if we are to have a real impact and see a significant and lasting reduction. The Government summit on smoking on 14 July will inform the development of a range of policy measures to tackle smoking; the resulting policies will be set out in a White Paper to be published later in the year. An advertising ban is a necessary part of that package of complementary measures.

WALES

Hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action to be pursued with the Labour Group of Blaenau Gwent Council was discussed between his special adviser and the leader of the council to persuade the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) not to oppose Welsh devolution. [6256]

Mr. Ron Davies: None.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales from where his special adviser phoned (a) the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent about his opposition to devolution and (b) the leader of Blaenau Gwent Council about the same subject; what discussion he had with his special adviser on the subject of the call prior to it being made; and which (i) Minister and (ii) officials were present when they were made. [6257]

Mr. Davies: My special adviser phoned the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent at my request, and without further discussion with me he then phoned the Leader of Blaenau Gwent Council. Both calls were made from the Welsh Office and neither Ministers nor officials were present.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussion (a) he and (b) his special adviser has had with the leader of Blaenau Gwent Council about the allegations made by the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent in respect of his special adviser's earlier phone call. [6258]

Mr. Davies: After recent reports in the media the leader of Blaenau Gwent Council contacted me to assure me that he did not regard the conversation he had with my special adviser as threatening or intimidating in any way. He undertook to write to me to that effect. My special adviser has since spoken to him to obtain a copy of this letter, but there was no discussion of the allegations made by the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list his engagements, with times, on the days of the phone calls which are the subject of allegations by the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent. [6259]

Mr. Davies: The precise dates of the telephone calls subject to various allegations are not known, so I cannot list my engagements.

Building Waste (Dumping)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many incidents of the illegal dumping of waste material by building companies have been investigated by the Environment Agency in Wales in the past year; and how many have led to prosecutions. [5882]

Mr. Win Griffiths: That is a matter for the Environment Agency. I have asked the Regional General Manager to write to the hon. Member, and will place a copy of his reply in the Library of the House.

Wildlife Protection

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) arrests, (b) prosecutions and (c) convictions have been recorded under the Wild Mammals (Protection) Act 1996 in Wales since its introduction, broken down by local authority; and if he will make a statement. [5704]

Mr. Michael: I have been asked to reply.

Information on the number of people arrested for specific offences is not collected centrally.

Information on court proceedings under the Wild Mammals (Protection) Act 1996, which came into force on 29 April 1996, will first become available this autumn. That information will be by police force area and not by local authority area.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) arrests, (b) prosecutions and (c) convictions have been recorded under the Protection of Badgers Act 1992 in Wales in each year since 1992, broken down by local authority; and if he will make a statement. [5707]

Mr. Michael: I have been asked to reply.

Information on the number of people arrested for specific offences is not collected centrally.

Available court proceedings data, by police force area, are given in the table below. 1996 information will be available in the autumn.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cattle Tags

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will seek agreement from the European Commission for double tagging of cattle to include at least one metal tag. [5453]

Mr. Rooker: We have made the European Commission aware of the preference of many UK farmers for continued use of metal ear tags for cattle.

BSE

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the contract for research into a diagnostic test for BSE with Electrophoretic International ended; for what reasons it was not renewed; and what plans he has to place future contracts with the company. [5801]

Mr. Rooker: MAFF has a collaborative agreement with Electrophoretic International (EI) which was effective from 22 December 1995 for one year. Certain clauses of the agreement continue to operate. MAFF will continue to treat the company in the same way as all other bodies in relation to research and supply of materials. There are no plans for any further contracts with EI.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what basis the contract between his Department for research into a diagnostic test for BSE was tendered; how many other tenders were received; and what was the role of Ministers in the decision to award the contract to Electrophoretic International. [5800]

Mr. Rooker: The nature of the agreement between MAFF and Electrophoretic International (EI) was one of collaboration. The Ministry did not commission any work from EI. This was not a "contract to develop a diagnostic test" and a tendering process was not relevant.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library a copy of the contract between his Department and Electrophoretics International covering work to develop a diagnostic test for BSE and a copy of his Department's evaluation of the work. [5798]

Mr. Rooker: MAFF has no contract with Electrophoretics International (EI) to develop a diagnostic test for BSE. We did, however, have an agreement with EI which was one of collaboration. As required by the terms of this agreement, we wrote to EI on 14 March requesting their agreement in writing to our placing a copy in the Library of the House. EI are currently reviewing their position in the light of their commercial position.

Since no work was commissioned by MAFF from EI, no evaluation has been made.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been paid to Electrophoretics International by his Department for work on a diagnostic test for BSE. [5802]

Mr. Rooker: No money was paid to Electrophoretics International as the Ministry had not commissioned any work from them.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what meetings took place between his Department and representatives of Electrophoretics International (a) prior to the contract for research into a diagnostic test for BSE being let, (b) during the lifetime of the contract and (c) after the expiry date of the contract; and if he will place copies of the papers and minutes of these meetings in the Library. [5799]

Mr. Rooker: The agreement was signed on 22 December 1995 and has not expired in respect of all its provisions. MAFF officials attended two meetings with Electrophoretics International (EI) representatives prior to the signing of the agreement and two meetings subsequently. This is in addition to contact between scientists from Veterinary Laboratory Agency, Weybridge and EI on research collaboration as provided for in the agreement.

Under the terms of the agreement, we would need the consent of EI before papers on such meetings could be placed in the Library of the House.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which (a) companies and (b) other bodies have been commissioned by his Department to undertake research into a diagnostic test for BSE. [5797]

Mr. Rooker: The following organisations have been funded by MAFF to undertake work into finding a diagnostic test for BSE:

Veterinary Laboratory Agency
Institute for Animal Health
Birmingham University

London Hospital Medical College

Animal Health Trust

Moredun Research Institute

University of Edinburgh

Institute for Grassland and Environment Research.

A further contract with Newcastle University is still to be finalised.

An Open Competition for research funding for development of novel methods for the diagnosis of BSE was announced by MAFF to the international scientific community in August 1996. Proposals were reviewed by independent referees and three proposals from UK research laboratories were taken up for funding in January 1997. Two further proposals are being followed up; a joint proposal from two Swiss companies (Paul Scherrer Institute and CSEM, Centre Suisse D'Electronique Etude Microtechnique, S.A.) and the California Institute of Technology.

Hunt Kennels

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the risk to public health from hunt kennels which are assessed to be unsatisfactory under the BSE enforcement programme. [5669]

Mr. Rooker: No formal assessment has been made of any possible risk to public health arising from failings identified during State Veterinary Service (SVS) audits of the controls under the Specified Bovine Material (SBM) Order 1997. Hunt kennels are required to remove SBM from the carcases of fallen stock which they take from farms and stain and dispatch it under controlled conditions for eventual rendering or incineration. Failings identified by the SVS have related to items such as inadequate staining, storage or record-keeping. These do not pose a risk to public health. Nevertheless immediate remedial action is required to be taken by the operator in all cases, and is subject to a further unannounced visit by the SVS shortly afterwards to check that it has been carried out. Hunt kennels are not permitted to sell for human consumption any of the remainder of the meat recovered from carcases. This is for feeding to the hounds only.

Cumbria Fisheries

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what powers he has in relation to appointments to Cumbria Fisheries. [5823]

Mr. Morley: The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food appoints six members of the Cumbria Sea Fisheries Committee. Five fishermen representing as wide a range of interests and geographical distribution within the District as possible and one person with appropriate environmental expertise, have just been appointed for the four-year period ending on 30 June 2001.

Cattle (Payments)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of small weight payments to cattle owners. [6082]

Mr. Rooker: Cattle slaughtered under the Over 30 Months Scheme are eligible for a weight-based payment, currently worth just under 65 pence per kilogram, irrespective of their overall weight. With effect from 4 August payments will be restricted to a maximum weight of 560 kg per animal and the rate for cows will be reduced to a little under 58 pence per kilogram.

Cattle Cull (Compensation)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the disparity in compensation for cull cattle between (a) small cattle, (b) Holsteins and (c) pedigree continental cattle. [6081]

Mr. Rooker: There is no disparity. At present all cattle slaughtered under the Over 30 Months Scheme attract the same rate of compensation per kilogram. However, with effect from 4 August the payment rate for cull cows will be approximately 7 pence per kilogram lower than the rate applying to all other cattle slaughtered under the scheme and payments will be restricted to a maximum weight of 560 kg per animal.

Seed Companies

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of the purchase of seed companies by transnational chemical companies. [6003]

Mr. Rooker: Seed production and marketing is increasingly and international business. It is essential that companies have a sufficiently large base to service these needs. I shall continue to monitor the activities of around 1,100 seed merchants, processors and packers who are registered with the Ministry in England and Wales.

Drift Nets

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimates he has made of (i) the numbers of (a) whales, (b) dolphins, (c) sharks, (d) turtles and (e) birds caught by accident in drift nets in 1996, and (ii) the percentage of those in each category caught by fishermen of each EU member country; and if he will make a statement. [6004]

Mr. Morley: The information available is from 1995 when Sea Mammal Research Unit observers on the nine English boats in the North-east Atlantic high seas tuna drift net fishery observed 62 hauls. Reported by-catch included:

	Number
(a) Whales	0
(b) Dolphins	46 (from which figure SMRU estimated that the total by-catch by the UK fleet was 165 dolphins)
(c) Turtles	8 (of which 6 were returned alive to the sea)
(d) Birds	9

The observers also reported 1,163 sharks caught, but the majority of these were landed and sold. I do not have equivalent figures for captures by the tuna fishing vessels of other countries.

I am currently considering our policy towards high seas drift nets.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make it his policy to press for an EU-wide ban on the use of drift nets; [6006]

(2) what is his policy in respect of the use of drift nets and the capture of non-target species in such nets. [6008]

Mr. Morley: It is important to distinguish between the types of drift net in use. Coastal salmon drift nets and other small scale inshore drift nets are not believed to have much, if any, adverse environmental impact. The only high seas drift net fishery in which UK vessels take part is the seasonal North-East Atlantic tuna fishery. There is evidence that these drift nets do capture non-target species.

I am currently considering our policy towards high seas drift nets.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many payments of £1 million or more were made under the Arable Area Payments Scheme in 1996. [6300]

Mr. Rooker: Four.

MAFF Service Centres

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) which organisations were consulted over his decision to centralise his Department's South West Regional Service Centre's operation at Exeter; [6171]

(2) what has been the cost of maintaining regional service centre activity in Truro in each year since its establishment in 1992. [6172]

Mr. Rooker: None. We have taken this decision to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the Department. Maintaining the unit at Truro has cost the taxpayer an additional £100,000 a year (at current prices) since 1992.

Grant Applications (Truro)

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many grant applications have been processed by staff at his Department's Truro office in each year since its establishment in 1992. [6170]

Mr. Rooker: The following numbers of applications and claims have been processed at the Truro office since 1992:

Scheme	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997 (To 30 June)
Farms Grants[2]	1,095	1,655	1,086	687	803	60
West Penwith ESA	200	200	200	200	200	257
Countryside Stewardship[2]	—	—	—	—	888	223
Objective 5b[2]	—	—	—	116	238	135

[2] Includes applications and claims for both Devon and Cornwall. Since 1992 all applications and claims for Devon and Cornwall under the Integrated Administration and Control System, the Arable Area Payments Scheme, the Beef Special Premium Scheme, Cattle Passports, the Suckler Cow premium Scheme, the Sheep Annual Premium Scheme, Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances, the Dartmoor and Blackdown Hills ESAs and to her environmental schemes have been processed at the Ministry's Regional Service Centre at Exeter.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many incidents of food poisoning have been attributed to the sale and consumption of New York dressed poultry in each of the last five years. [5312]

Ms Jowell: I have been asked to reply.

There is no record of any incident of food poisoning implicating New York dressed poultry during the last five years. Although the majority of food poisoning outbreaks are investigated the cause of infection is not always identified. For single (sporadic) cases it is not feasible to investigate the infective vehicle.

Beaufort's Dyke

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the dumping of radioactive waste in Beaufort's Dyke. [6461]

Mr. Rooker: Documents recently discovered in the Public Record Office show that small quantities of laboratory waste and luminous materials which fall within the definition of low or intermediate level radioactive waste were dumped in Beaufort's Dyke during the 1950s. The "Report of the Independent Review of Disposal of Radioactive Waste in the North East Atlantic" by Professor F. G. T. Holliday, which was placed in the library of the House on its publication in 1984 and on which Ministers have relied in answering subsequent questions in this House, makes no reference to such activities.

Naturally it is regretted that the House was given inaccurate information in the past. Copies of the documents have now been placed in the libraries of both Houses of Parliament. Further searches of the archive records are being undertaken as a matter of urgency and if any new information comes to light we will make it public.

Monitoring undertaken regularly since the early 1960s confirms that this dumping had no measurable effect on radioactivity levels in the area which remain well within internationally agreed safety levels. From 1963 all dumping of radioactive waste was restricted to waters at least 2000m deep and from 1982 the UK ceased all dumping of radioactive waste at sea.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Postal Votes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department plans to spend on advertising the availability of postal votes before the proposed referendums on (a) Welsh devolution and (b) a greater London authority. [5855]

Mr. George Howarth: There will be no Home Office expenditure for these purposes.

Responsibility for publicity on the availability of postal votes in the Welsh devolution referendum and the referendum on the strategic authority for London will be the responsibility of the Welsh Office and the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions respectively.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his Department spent on advertising the availability of postal votes before the General Election. [5857]

Mr. Howarth: Absent voting facilities were publicised at the general election through a television campaign and advertisements in the national press, at a cost of £700,000.

Firearms

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if sufficient collection centres will be made available in each police constabulary area to ensure that firearm certificate holders do not have to travel unreasonable distances to hand in weapons prohibited by the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997; [5828]

(2) what guidance he has given to chief constables on reasonable distances between collection centres which are used for weapons to be handed in as a result of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997; [5827]

(3) if he will list the police constabularies which intend to make available only one collection centre in their area for weapons which are to be handed in as a result of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997. [5830]

Mr. Michael: Decisions about the collection arrangements for weapons and equipment surrendered under the terms of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997 are for the chief officer of police for each force area and we are grateful for their co-operation in this important task. The arrangements in place will differ from one area to another, taking into account such factors as the need to ensure public safety, numbers and locations of firearm certificate holders and registered firearms dealers and police resources. These are matters for local decision and we have not sought to establish a central record of the arrangements in each area.

Polling Stations (Disabled Access)

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the level of disabled access to polling stations in Wales in the last General Election; and if he will ensure that failures to provide adequate access are remedied before their next use. [6086]

Mr. George Howarth: Information on the accessibility of polling stations in use in Wales for the General Election is not available centrally. County and County Borough Councils in Wales are statutorily required to designate as polling places for parliamentary elections, so far as is reasonable and practicable, only places which are accessible to the disabled. Acting returning officers may apply to the Home Office for grants towards the cost of providing temporary ramps, where it is not possible for them to use a building for the purpose of a polling place at a parliamentary election which affords easy access for the disabled. Grants are also available for specially adapted polling screens for use by the disabled.

The same provisions will apply at the forthcoming referendum to be held in Wales. In this instance, grants will be available from the Welsh Office towards the cost of temporary ramps.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to ensure that children are protected from convicted sex offenders. [5601]

Mr. Michael: The Government give a very high priority to ensuring that children are protected from sex offenders. There are a number of proposals under consideration, including legislating to enable sex offenders on release from prison to be supervised by the probation service for much longer periods of time, and making it an offence for a convicted sex offender to seek work with, or offer services to, children.

We also plan to implement the Sex Offenders Act 1997 as soon as possible. It will require offenders convicted of serious sex offences against children to notify the police of their name and address and any change in these details and we are determined to make sure the information is used to protect children rather than gathering dust in a file or sitting unused on a computer database.

Deportations

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were deported from (a) Manchester, (b) Gatwick and (c) Heathrow airports in each month of 1997. [5871]

Mr. Mike O'Brien [holding answer 30 June 1997]: I regret that the information requested is not held centrally.

New Polling Districts

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of electors who had moved into new polling districts between the commencement of the operation of the current electoral register and the last general election; and if he will make a statement. [6015]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: None. No information is held centrally which would allow such an estimate to be made.

Dangerous and Careless Driving

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were brought for (a) murder or manslaughter and (b) causing death by dangerous or careless driving in respect of fatal road traffic accidents in England and Wales in each of the last three years; and in each case how many resulted in (i) conviction and (ii) a custodial sentence. [5967]

Mr. Michael: The table below gives the information requested.

Prosecutions and convictions for murder or manslaughter and causing death by dangerous or careless driving, arising from fatal road traffic accidents

England and Wales 1993–1995 [1]

	Prosecutions	Convictions	Custodial sentence[2]
1993
Murder or manslaughter	19	10	10
Causing death by dangerous or careless driving[3]	442	313	226
1994
Murder or manslaughter	18	—	—
Causing death by dangerous or careless driving[3]	375	307	237
1995
Murder or manslaughter	13	4	4
Causing death by dangerous or careless driving[3]	369	323	242

[1] Murder or manslaughter cases are tabulated according to the year the offence was initially recorded by the police and causing death by dangerous or careless driving by the year of completion of proceedings.

[2] Young offender institution and unsuspended imprisonment.

[3] Includes offences of causing death by aggravated vehicle taking.

Information for 1996 is not yet available.

Drink Driving

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce (a) random breath testing of motorists by police, (b) a reduction in the current legal limit for drink driving, (c) a complete ban on drinking and driving, (d) a ban on carrying alcohol in lorry drivers' cabs and (e) all-year-round campaigns against drink driving. [5968]

Mr. Michael: We have no plans to introduce random breath testing, a complete ban on drinking and driving or a ban on the carrying of alcohol in lorry cabs.

The law already provides the police with wide powers to test drivers for drinking and driving: they may administer a test in the event of an accident, a moving traffic offence or if they have cause to suspect a driver of having alcohol in his body. These powers are used extensively; in England and Wales in 1996 it has been calculated that some 781,000 roadside breath tests were carried out, the highest number ever.

My noble Friend the Minister with responsibility for roads is currently considering a number of options for improving road safety, including the legal limit for drinking and driving. She will be looking very carefully at the findings of a research study into drink-drive countermeasures throughout the world, which was published by the Portman Group on 1 July.

It is the Government's intention to continue with regular drink-drive publicity campaigns, including at Christmas but not only at Christmas. The police act to identify drink-drive offenders all year round and the number of roadside screening tests and their results are published annually.

Alcohol Consumption (Young People)

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to encourage councils to introduce byelaws to restrict on-street consumption of alcohol by those aged under 18 years. [5944]

Mr. George Howarth: A model byelaw is available to local authorities to prohibit the consumption of intoxicating liquor in designated areas. Byelaws do not apply selectively to particular age groups.

We will be implementing the Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997. Under this legislation, a police constable may confiscate alcohol from under-aged drinkers and it will be an offence to refuse to hand over the drink.

Murder Case (Abdul Kamal Samad)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further internal inquiries are planned into the handling of the murder of Abdul Kamal Samad. [5804]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner informs me that the Head of Number 2 Area Complaints Unit in the Metropolitan Police District has been appointed to investigate the initial response to Mr. Samad's murder, which occurred on 21 May 1997. Upon receipt of his report, a decision will be made as to whether a full disciplinary enquiry is required. At this stage no formal complaint against a Metropolitan Police officer has been made. The murder of Mr. Samad is currently being investigated by a team of detectives.

Stephen Lawrence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his meeting with the parents of Stephen Lawrence. [5679]

Mr. Straw: I met Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence on 24 June. I was deeply moved listening to the tragic circumstances surrounding the death of their son Stephen. We also discussed broader issues, including racially motivated crime and the relationship between the police and ethnic minority communities. I recognise that a strong case has been made by Mrs. Lawrence for some form of inquiry and I am actively considering what she put to me. I will also consider carefully the other issues that were raised during our meeting and reflect on the best way to address the widespread concern resulting from this case. I hope to make an announcement soon.

Sentencing (Class A Drug Users)

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review mandatory drug sentences for Class A drug users, including first time offenders. [5668]

Mr. Michael: We will make an announcement as soon as possible about implementation of provisions in the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997 which establish minimum sentences of seven years' imprisonment for those convicted for a third time of trafficking in class A drugs.

Polling Stations (School Closures)

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the number and percentage of schools in Wales which were closed, wholly or partly, on 1 May for use as polling stations; and what percentages of pupils were affected. [6072]

Mr. George Howarth: Information of the kind is not collected centrally either by my Department or by the Welsh Office.

Youth Justice Task Force

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the ages of the members of the Youth Justice task force; and what plans he has to ensure that there is representation of young people's organisations on the task force. [6328]

Mr. Michael: The ages of the task force members are listed below. Members are appointed on the basis of their relevant knowledge, experience and individual merit rather than to represent particular organisations.

William Atkinson: 47

Jonathan Black: 40

Cathryn Bowker: 37

Anthony Butler: 52

Paul Cavadino: 48

Ann Fuller: 60

Cedric Fullwood: 57

Thomas Luce: 57

Jenny Rowe: 41

Ian Johnston: 51

John Lyon: 49

David Norgorve: 49

Teresa Reynolds: 41

Denise Platt: 52

Norman Warner: 56

Joan Webster: 52

Geoffrey Wicks: 62

Andrew Williamson: 49.

Police Areas

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures govern the transfer of areas from one police force area to another. [6224]

Mr. Michael: These procedures are set out in sections 32 to 34 of the Police Act 1996. The main points are as follows:

The Secretary of State may by order make alterations in police areas in England and Wales, other than the City of London police area. These alterations may result in increases or reductions in the number of police areas, but not in the abolition of the Metropolitan Police District.

The Secretary of State may not exercise this power unless either he has received a request to make the alterations from each of the police authorities affected or if it appears to him to be expedient to make the alterations in the interests of efficiency or effectiveness.

The Secretary of State must give notice of his proposed alterations to the police authorities and local authorities for every area affected. He must consider their objections and give further notice stating whether he accepts the objections and, if he does not, giving his reasons.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

EU Education Council

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the outcomes of the Council of EU Education Ministers held on 26 June. [6786]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Council of Education Ministers, at which my noble Friend the Minister for Education and Employment and my hon. Friend the Minister for Education and Industry, Scottish Office represented the UK, reached agreement on the adoption of a common position on the European Commission proposal to increase the budget of the SOCRATES education programme. The common position will provide for the budget to increase from 850 million ECU[1] over 5 years to 875 million ECU[2].

The Council adopted Conclusions on Safety at School, on Information and Communications Technology and Teacher Training, and on the Commission White Paper "Teaching and Learning: Towards the Learning Society". The Council received reports on the Commission's draft Recommendation on Quality Assurance in Higher Education and on the Fifth Research and Development Framework Programme.

Ministers also discussed the Commission Green Paper "Education, Training, Research: The Obstacles to Transnational Mobility" and language teaching.

The Council minutes will be placed in the Library as soon as they become available.

Notes:

[1] £596.3 million at £1 = 0.7015 ECU.

[2] £613.8 million at £1 = 0.7015 ECU.

EU Social Affairs Council

Mr. Darvill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EU Social Affairs Council on 27 June. [6785]

Mr. Blunkett: The UK was represented by the Minister of State, Department of Trade and Industry, the Minister for Employment and Disability Rights and me.

The UK was welcomed to the Government's first Social Affairs Council by the Presidency, at the start of the meeting. I replied by setting out the Government's intention to take a positive approach to European employment and social affairs matters, including playing a full part in discussions of matters being taken forward under the Social Chapter. I also set out the Government's view that the key should be to tackle unemployment, particularly by taking action to develop people's employability and to promote labour market flexibility.

Political agreement was reached on the common position of the draft Directive on the Burden of Proof in sex discrimination cases, incorporating UK amendments bringing the Directive into line with the approach of UK Courts in this field.

The Council also reached political agreement on the proposed Directive on Chemical Agents, which will lay down minimum standards for the protection of workers from exposure to chemical agents.

There was discussion of the Commission's follow-up to its 1995 Communication on social protection. The UK highlighted the need for innovative approaches to moving people out of dependency and into work.

The Council also discussed the report of the Davignon Group on employee involvement in the European Company Statute and agreed Council Conclusions which note the contribution of the Report. They also agree that detailed discussion of the Statute should continue.

The Council noted the Presidency report on action in the context of the French memorandum submitted to the Turin European Council in 1996. The Commission gave information on the social partners' discussions of information and consultation in the context of industrial restructuring and on progress in the area of the social dialogue. Presentations were also given on the European Social Fund and on the Commission's report on access to continuing training.

Education Authority Reserves

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list for each education authority in England, and by class and in total, the amount of balances held in reserve for each year since 1990. [6342]

Mr. Byers: Local education authorities have reported the information set out in the following tables on the level of general fund revenue reserves held each year since 1990. The figures include reserves held by schools under local management, and funds, which may be substantial, held for specific purposes which may not be available for general expenditure. Comparisons made between financial years may be affected by changing accountancy practices, particularly the reclassification of some provisions as reserves.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the availability of discretionary awards from local education authorities in the United Kingdom and the steps he is taking to encourage young people on low incomes to continue their studies to further education. [5054]

Dr. Howells: Discretionary Awards are a matter for local education authorities. Each local authority is free, in the light of its own priorities, to determine its own budget and how the money is spent. We are committed to reviewing educational finance and maintenance for those older than 16 to ensure higher staying-on rates at school and college and that resources are used to support those most in need.

Brixham and Dartmouth Community Colleges

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to announce the decision on the application for sixth form status for Brixham and Dartmouth community colleges; and if he will make a statement on the reasons for the delay. [5702]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 30 June 1997]: The proposals for sixth forms for these schools are under consideration. We shall announce a decision as soon as possible, consistent with full consideration of the proposals.

Leicestershire Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what levels of funding Leicestershire training and enterprise council have received in (i) 1994–95, (ii) 1995–96 and (iii) 1996–97; and what level of balances they carried forward in (1) 1994–95; (2) 1995–96 and (3) 1996–97. [6220]

Dr. Howells: The total amounts paid by the Department for Education and Employment to Leicestershire Training and Enterprise Council, and the amounts of reserves carried forward by the TEC are:

Year	Amount paid	Reserves
1994–95	20,039	5,221
1995–96	20,535	6,473
1996–97	21,638	—

Information on the amount of reserves held by Leicestershire TEC at the end of the 1996–97 financial year is not yet available.

Civil Service

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the Civil Service Compensation Scheme provision for the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (a) requires or (b) permits payments above the statutory minimum to members of staff being made (i) compulsorily and (ii) voluntarily redundant; and to what extent the arrangements for staff taking voluntary early severance or voluntary early retirement differ from those for staff being made voluntarily redundant. [5834]

Dr. Howells: The terms of the Civil Service Compensation Scheme for Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme members require set benefits to be paid to staff made compulsorily or voluntarily redundant. These are usually above the statutory minimum. As explained in my reply on 16 June, Official Report, columns 49–50, no members of staff have been made either voluntarily or compulsorily redundant from this Department (including the Employment Service) over the last 12 months, but a number have taken voluntary early retirement or voluntary early severance.

Where an early release has been agreed on compulsory terms, there is no difference between these arrangements and those which would apply in the case of redundancy. Where the release has been agreed on flexible terms, the main differences between these and the terms which would apply in the case of voluntary redundancy are in the length of notice required to be given or compensation payment made to those individuals concerned.

PRIME MINISTER

Arms Reduction

Q20. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister what action the Government are initiating to promote disarmament and non-proliferation. [4976]

The Prime Minister: We are strongly committed to preventing the proliferation of all types of weapons of mass destruction. We shall pursue this vigorously through maintaining and strengthening the relevant treaties (Non-Proliferation Treaty, Chemical Weapons Convention, Biological Weapons Convention) and international export control regimes (Nuclear Suppliers Group, Missile Technology Control Regime, Australia Group).

We have also made clear our commitment to the goal of the global elimination of nuclear weapons and our commitment to press for multilateral negotiations towards mutual, balanced and verifiable reductions in such weapons. We will be considering how best to implement these commitments, particularly in the context of the Strategic Defence Review.

HEALTH

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about including cystic fibrosis in the list of treatments set out in the NHS (Remission of Charges) Regulations 1988; and if he will make a statement. [6165]

Mr. Milburn: We receive regular representations from Cystic Fibrosis sufferers.

Prescription charges, and all other aspects of Government spending, are being reviewed as part of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review.

General Practitioners

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to improve the recruitment and retention of general practitioners in the national health service. [5869]

Mr. Milburn: We are aware that recruitment and retention difficulties are occurring in some areas. We are talking to the profession about ways in which some of the difficulties might be tackled; in particular how family friendly policies might be pursued.

Fluorosis

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the causes of fluorosis in children; what links have been identified between fluorosis and the fluoridation of water supplies; and if he will make a statement. [5965]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health has not itself commissioned any research into the causes of fluorosis in children. Extensive research over many decades undertaken independently of the Department, confirms a link between water fluoridation and dental fluorosis.

Genetic Material (Health Prognoses)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implications for the NHS of developments which allow prognosis of an individual's future health based on analysis of genetic material. [5948]

Ms Jowell: The Department of Health and the Medical Research Council are currently jointly establishing an Advisory Group on Scientific Advances in Genetics (AGSAG) to advise the Department and the Medical Research Council on the implications of advances in genetic science for the National Health Service, public health and medical research. AGSAG will advise the Chief Medical Officer and the NHS Director of Research and Development on the likely implications for public health and for the NHS of scientific advances in genetics and will also advise the NHS Executive Board on the establishment and evaluation of innovative genetic services and their longer term development.

The department also takes advice from a number of other specialist bodies including the Advisory Committee on Genetic Testing which advises United Kingdom Health Ministers on genetic testing issues, and the Expert Advisory Group on Cancer which advises the Secretaries of State for Health and Wales and the Chief Medical Officers for England and Wales on the organisation of cancers services including the implications of cancer genetics.

Cannabis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent discussions he has had with the British Medical Association on the legislation of cannabis for medical use; [6067]

(2) what recent assessment he has made of professional opinion in respect of the legislation of cannabis for medical use. [6068]

Ms Jowell: We have not had any discussions with the British Medical Association on this subject. Department of Health officials, including professionals, are keeping the available research into the medicinal use of cannabis under review. At present, the evidence is inconclusive. The key point is that a cannabis—based medicine has not been scientifically demonstrated to be safe, efficacious and of suitable quality. This is what has to happen before any drug can be licensed for medicinal use. Misuse of drugs legislation allows for research involving cannabis under Home Office licence. Any proposed clinical trial would have to be submitted to the Medicines Control Agency for approval or exemption in accordance with the Medicines Act 1968. Any application for a licence or a certificate, or both, would be carefully considered.

North Lakeland Healthcare Trust

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates members of the Board of Carlisle North Cumbria Health Care Trust are due for reappointment. [5867]

Mr. Milburn: The terms of office of the non-executive directors of the North Lakeland Healthcare National Health Service Trust expire on the following dates:

	Appointed to
Dr. Brian Lindley (Chairman)	31 October 1997
Mr. Paul Hargreaves	31 October 1997
Mrs. Jane Johnston	31 October 1997
Mrs. Barbara Loffill	31 October 1997
Mr. John Noctor	31 October 1997
Mrs. Jessica Riddle	31 October 1997

Electro-magnetic Fields

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment his Department has made of the potential health risks posed by mobile phone usage; and if he will make a statement; [2723]

(2) what assessment he has made of the possible health risks connected to the use of electric blankets; and if he will make a statement. [2710]

Ms Jowell [pursuant to her reply 10 June 1997]: I regret that there was an error in my previous reply. The last paragraph should read as follows;

"The NRPB's advice is that there is no convincing scientific evidence of exposure to either microwave radiation associated with mobile phone usage or electro-magnetic fields associated with electric blanket usage being harmful to human health."

Water Fluoridation

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations he has received from the (a) British Dental Association, (b) British Fluoridation Society, (c) Northumbrian Water Ltd., (d) NHS Executive and (e) Water Services Association regarding the Water Fluoridation Order 1987; [3206]

(2) what plans he has to review the Water Fluoridation Order 1987; and if he will make a statement. [3207]

Mr. Worthington: I have been asked to reply.

I have received no representations from the organisations mentioned and have no plans to review the Water Fluoridation Order 1987. Fluoridation continues to be part of dental health promotion policy.

TREASURY

Non-departmental Public Bodies (Fraud)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many members of non-departmental public bodies have been found guilty of fraud offences in each of the last three years. [4949]

Mr. Darling: This information is not collected centrally. The arrangements for fraud reporting, which are described in Chapter 37 of Government Accounting, do not require non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) to report frauds to the Treasury. Rather, they report to sponsoring Departments, which are asked to tell the Treasury only of any novel or usual frauds occurring in NDPBs. This approach, which was adopted some years ago, was part of an effort to encourage sponsoring departments to take closer and more direct responsibility for the oversight of NDPBs.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will name the ministers, officials and political advisers in his Department who will be involved directly in the Strategic Defence Review. [5611]

Mr. Darling: As in any review of this nature the identity of the Ministers, officials and political advisers involved in the Strategic Defence Review will depend on the issues that arise, and on the detailed allocation of responsibilities at the time.

Construction Industry

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to announce his detailed proposals for the construction industry tax scheme outlined in paragraph 6B.17 of the 1997–98 Financial Statement and Budget report. [3377]

Dawn Primarolo: Legislation is contained in the 1995 and 1996 Finance Acts to provide for changes to be made to the construction industry tax scheme. The Inland Revenue are continuing to consult with industry representatives on the more detailed proposals which will be included in regulations. An announcement will be made shortly about the implementation of the new scheme.

Capital Receipts

Mr. Maples: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, under present conventions, the spending of local authority capital receipts counts as public spending. [3261]

Mr. Darling: Local authority expenditure (including expenditure financed by local authority capital receipts) is scored as part of General Government Expenditure, except when other local authorities or central government receive the expenditure.

Third World Debt

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to secure a multi-national agreement on the cancellation or reduction of third world debt. [5850]

Mrs. Liddell: The Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative to reduce the debt burdens of the poorest countries to sustainable levels was launched at the IMF and World Bank Annual Meetings last September. At the recent Summit of the Eight held at Denver, the other Finance Ministers followed my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in calling for rapid implementation of this initiative. However, there is no room for complacency, and we shall continue to press for the international community to provide further debt relief.

Inland Revenue Offices

Ms Atherton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the decisions to close the Redruth, Penzance and Truro Inland Revenue offices were taken, what were the criteria for these decisions; what are the terms of reference for the Inland Revenue rationalisation No. 3; and if he will make a statement. [3518]

Dawn Primarolo: Since 1993, the Inland Revenue has been carrying out a 10-year programme to reorganise its whole network of local offices. I have now asked the Revenue to review all of the proposed reorganisations which would result in closure of the only local office in a particular town. This includes Truro and Penzance but not Redruth which is not proposed for closure.

Opticians (VAT)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total value of the VAT receipts which HM Customs and Excise has been obliged to return to opticians as a result of the High Court and Appeal Court hearings of the case brought by Leightons Opticians. [5245]

Dawn Primarolo: To date, Customs and Excise have refunded in the order of £211 million VAT and £63 million in statutory interest as a result of the aforementioned High Court decision.

Single Market

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to H.M. Treasury press release 60/97 of 4 June 1997, what specific measures are required to complete the single market; and which of these the Government supports. [3359]

Mrs. Liddell: The Commission presented an "Action Plan for the Single Market" to the European Council in Amsterdam, describing in detail the steps it regards as necessary to complete the single market. A copy of the text has been placed in the House Library. The Government welcomes the Commission's initiative in bringing forward this plan and supports in particular its strategic targets for improving transposition and enforcement of existing rules, ensuring that competition policy is effective, simplifying legislation and reducing the level of state aids. Taking significant steps towards the completion of the single market will be a top priority for the British presidency of the European Union in the first half of 1998.

Single Currency

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Her Majesty's Treasury will publish quarterly reports of progress on preparations for the introduction of a European single currency. [3529]

Mrs. Liddell: The Bank of England publishes quarterly reports entitled "Practical Issues Arising from the Introduction of the Euro". The most recent report was published on 24 April. The Government is considering whether additional information would be useful to help businesses prepare for the practical implications of economic and monetary union, some of which will arise whether or not the United Kingdom participates.

Health Spending

Mr. Norman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish his estimates of the future share of health spending as a percentage of gross domestic product. [3707]

Mr. Darling: The plans for health spending in 1997–98 and 1998–99 were published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1997–98 at the time of the 1996 Budget.

Beer Duty

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the rates of beer duty applicable, by value and alcohol content, in (a) France, (b) the Netherlands and (c) Belgium. [3424]

Dawn Primarolo: The rates of duty are listed in ECUs.

Member state	Variables	Excise[1] duty/hl/° Plato (ECUs)	Excise[2] duty/hl/° alc (ECUs)
Belgium	—	1.75	—
Netherlands	up to 7° Plato	9.29	—
	from 7° to 11° Plato	16.36	—
	from 11° to 15° Plato	21.79	—
France	—	—	2.62

[1] Excise duty is charged per hectolitre per degrees Plato.
[2] Excise duty is charged per hectolitre per degree of alcohol.

Euro

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the ability of blind people to identify the different proposed Euro coins. [5296]

Mrs. Liddell: Organisations representing visually impaired people have been involved in discussions organised by the European Commission about euro coins. The Royal Mint has separately been in contact with organisations representing visually impaired people in the United Kingdom. During negotiations on the specifications of euro coins, the Government has supported the use of features to assist their recognition by visually impaired people.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the Government propose to reflect local government reorganisation in the European regional classification known as NUTS. [6788]

Mrs. Liddell: The Nomenclature of Units for Territorial Statistics (NUTS) is the European Commission's classification of sub-national areas for statistical purposes, and is managed by Eurostat, the Commission's statistical office. The Government Statistical Service has drafted a new NUTS structure for the UK which takes account of Government Office regions and local government reorganisation. The draft structure was the subject of wide consultation last summer, and the results of that consultation are incorporated in the final proposals. Dr. Holt, the Director of the Office for National Statistics, has submitted the proposals to Eurostat for their consideration. Copies of the proposals, and a report on the consultation of last year, are being placed in the Libraries of the House today.

Dealing Rate

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will instruct the Bank of England to place in the Library the press notices which it issues announcing each month's decision of its Monetary Policy Committee in respect of the official dealing rate. [5878]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 30 June 1997]: The announcements of the Monetary Policy Committee's decisions will be placed in the House of Commons Library by the Bank of England.

Taxation

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the implications of the policy of open government for the release of Treasury analysis of the effects of proposed taxation at the time of the Budget statement. [5981]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 June 1997]: Information and analysis of the effects of the Budget are widely available by a number of means, in accordance with open Government Principles.

The main source is the Financial Statement and Budget Report (FSBR), but information is also published in a Pocket Budget format, on computer disc and Treasury press releases. All published Treasury material is also available on the Internet. Other Government Departments and agencies also publish relevant Budget Information.

Local Government Finance (Scotland)

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (a) the current formula for the determination of Scottish block expenditure, (b) each area of English expenditure to which it applies, (c) the changes that have been made to the formula since 1978 and (d) the level of Scottish block expenditure (i) planned, (ii) forecast and (iii) outturn, in each year between 1978–79 and 1997–98 at current and constant prices; and what plans he has to review the formula. [4218]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 19 June 1997]: The existing Block arrangements are governed by the Barnett formula established in 1978.

The Scottish Block changes by 10.66 per cent. of any changes made to provision for analogous English programmes in the course of the public expenditure survey and 10.06 per cent. of any changes to provision for analogous programmes which cover England and Wales. The Block covers all expenditure by the Scottish Office and associated Departments except for that on Agriculture and Fisheries and on Nationalised Industries. The areas of comparable English, or English and Welsh, expenditure are: industry enterprise and training; roads and transport; housing; other environmental services; law, order and protective services; education and sport; arts and libraries; health; social work services; other public services; central government support to local authorities.

Since the introduction of the Block the only significant change to the 1991 population based formula was made in 1992 to reflect the 1991 population Census.

The Government will set out its proposals for the future financing of public expenditure in Scotland under devolution, in a White Paper which will be published before the recess.

Information on the Scottish Block from 1985–86 is contained in the Scottish Office Departmental Reports published since 1991. Information for earlier years is contained in the Scottish Chapter in Part 2 of the Public Expenditure White Papers. (It will be noted that the composition of the Scottish Block has changed over time and that the price bases are different).

DEFENCE

Construction Work Contracts

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what use his Department is making of the new engineering contract in construction work for which it is responsible. [3429]

Mr. Spellar: My Department has not let any contracts under New Engineering Contract (NEC) terms to date, but future use of the NEC is being examined as part of a review of our contractual arrangements conducted against the background of the Latham Report.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many series of technical papers or reports have been produced by the Atomic Weapons Research Establishment since 1967; what were the titles of each series; what were the dates of each paper; how many papers or reports were published in each series; and how many of the papers and reports in each series are currently unclassified. [5682]

Mr. Spellar: Because of classification considerations and the volume of documentation it is not possible to respond in precisely the terms asked. However, between 1953 and 1970, the Atomic Weapons Research Establishment produced four main series of technical reports: B, (Bomb); E, (Weapon Effects); 0, (Research); and T, (Trials). Further separate series covered administrative and contractual matters and reports by AWRE Divisions. About 300 reports from the B and E Series from that period are due for transfer to the Public Records Office by October 1997. My noble Friend, the Minister for Defence Procurement will write to the hon. Member at that time with details of these reports and a copy of his letter will be placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Compensation (Credit Cards)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will take action against companies which fail to meet claims for compensation on credit card transactions made overseas. [5690]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: It is primarily a matter for the individual concerned to take action in such circumstances, through the courts if necessary. In so far as there may be a question of a company's fitness to hold a consumer credit licence, I look to the Director General of Fair Trading to act with his usual vigour.

Consumer Protection

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will review the adequacy of consumer protection measures contained in section 75 of the Consumer Credit Act 1974. [5689]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I am considering all aspects of the Consumer Credit Act. The Director General of Fair Trading monitors the working of the Act and administers the consumer credit licensing system, and I have asked him to advise me on this matter.

Ferry Merger

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to make a decision on the proposed merger between Stena and P&O Ferries. [4388]

Mrs. Beckett: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) report on the proposed merger between P&O and Stena will be published as quickly as is practicable. I cannot comment on the likely publication date of the MMC report or its contents, which remain confidential until publication. Copies of the report will be laid before Parliament at the same time as it is published.

Consumer Credit Act

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will consider the application of section 75 of the Consumer Credit Act 1974, to cover credit card transactions made overseas. [5858]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I am considering all aspects of the Consumer Credit Act. The Director General of Fair Trading monitors the working of the Act and administers the consumer credit licensing system, and I have asked him to advise me on this matter.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list each person advising or assisting her Department who has (a) membership of and (b) involvement in (i) the European Round Table of Industrialists, (ii) the European Centre for Infrastructure Studies, (iii) the Competitiveness Advisory Group, (iv) Transatlantic Business Dialogue, (v) the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe, (vi) Union of Industrial and Employers Confederations of Europe, (vii) Europe Bio and (viii) the World Business Council for Sustainable Development. [5311]

Mrs. Beckett: Membership of the European Round Table of Industrialists, the Competitiveness Group and the Transatlantic Business Dialogue is on a personal basis. Sir Peter Bonfield is a member of the European Round Table and also advises the Department as a member of the Table Policy Forum.

Membership of the European Centre of Infrastructure Studies, the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe, the Union of Industrial and Employers Confederations of Europe, Europe Bio and the World Business Council for Sustainable Development is on a corporate basis. Representatives from companies and organisations involved with these groups may advise Departments from time to time.

Indonesia

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to visit Indonesia. [6077]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 1 July 1997]: I have no plans to visit Indonesia at present.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will take steps to ensure that accountancy firms criticised in her Department's inspectors' reports are required to (a) state that they have understood the criticisms and (b) demonstrate that they have taken the required steps to deal with the shortcomings. [4825]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 25 June 1997]: Any consequential and continuing regulation of accountancy firms criticised in Inspector's reports is a matter for the firms recognised supervisory bodies.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if she will list those accountants disqualified from public practice as a result of the criticisms of their conduct in her Department's inspectors' reports; [4818]

(2) if she will list those accountancy firms whose affairs have been investigated following criticisms of their conduct in her Department's inspectors' reports. [4820]

Mr. Griffiths [holding answers 25 June 1997]: The investigation and disqualification from public practice of accountants and accountancy firms is a matter for their recognised supervisory bodies.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will recommend to the European Commission that Cornwall should be designated as a separate NUTS 2 region. [5428]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The Government Statistical Service is this week sending its proposals for the UK's NUTS structure to Eurostat (the European Commission's statistical office). A copy of the full set of proposals will be placed in the Library of the House. The Government Statistical Service's proposals include, amongst others, the suggestion that Cornwall should be a separate NUTS level 2 area.

Mr. George: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many NUTS 2 level regions she will recommend to the European Commission in the present round of negotiations for EU structural funds; [5429]

(2) what efforts she will make to secure Objective 1 status for Cornwall. [5430]

Mrs. Roche [holding answers 1 July 1997]: Eligible areas for the European Structural Funds will not change before the end of 1999. For the period from 2000 onwards, the areas eligible under Objective 1 and the other Objectives depend on Commission proposals for future financing of the EU and for reform of the Structural Funds. These may lead to substantial changes to the current structure, including the system of Objectives. Once the Commission has put forward proposals for reform of the Structural Funds and these have been negotiated and agreed, the Government will then consider proposing particular areas within the United Kingdom.

Patenting of Animals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what studies she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the patenting of animals; and if she will make a statement. [3226]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 17 June 1997]: I am replying because my Department has responsibility for intellectual property matters.

My Department has not yet commissioned studies into the patenting of animals nor I understand has the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Tourism

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 527, on VAT and VAT thresholds, what representations he had made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer in respect of the tourism industry's concerns. [6148]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 25 June 1997, col 527. The Chancellor of the Exchequer is aware of the tourism industry's concerns on VAT-related issues.

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 526, if he will introduce a scheme of statutory registration for all businesses supplying bed spaces for tourists; and if he will make a statement.[6149]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Once we have had the opportunity to consider the results of the ETB's Agenda 2000 consultation exercise on this issue, and the industry has commented on the detail of the proposed rating schemes for serviced accommodation, we shall be in a position to draw up proposals for any further steps needed to achieve our objective of raising the quality of accommodation in England.

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to curb the development of unlicensed and unregistered private households offering bed and breakfast facilities to visitors outside the six bed rule. [5951]

Mr. Clarke: I am aware of the concerns which many hoteliers have about the impact of the six person test for non-domestic rates and the six bed-space exemption for fire certification. Although neither of these is the direct responsibility of my Department, the interests of the tourism industry would of course be taken into account in any review of either.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to ensure that individual hotelier and guest house associations are included in any body charged with overseeing the proposed rationalisation of accommodation grading schemes throughout the United Kingdom. [5952]

Mr. Clarke: The ETB, AA and RAC will be consulting widely on the schemes announced in February this year for the rating of serviced accommodation. I hope that individual hotelier and guest-house associations will take the opportunity to feed in their views when the consultation document is published and to participate in the new schemes when they are launched.

British Library

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if the new building at St. Pancras has now been handed over to the British Library Board. [6735]

Mr. Chris Smith: The new building at St. Pancras and 3.4 hectares of land were transferred to the British Library Board on 1 July.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Water Services

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which water companies (a) have and (b) have not accepted responsibility for a free leak repair service for domestic supply pipes following the recent water summit. [4990]

Angela Eagle: Water companies have generally responded positively and constructively to my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister's call to offer a free leak repair service for household customers' supply pipes. We are pursuing this issue with a few companies who have yet to give a fully satisfactory response and we shall be making a further statement in the next few days.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the replies he has received from the water companies in response to the issues he raised with them at the recent water summit. [4991]

Angela Eagle: We shall publish an analysis of all the responses after obtaining clarification on certain matters from some of the companies. Copies of the responses will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Earth Summit 2

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a copy of all United Kingdom documents submitted to, and ministerial speeches made at Earth summit 2. [5337]

Angela Eagle: The Prime Minister addressed the Special Session of the UN General Assembly on Monday 23 June. A copy of his speech has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Leghold Traps

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to implement European Regulation 3254/91 on leghold traps. [5558]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Council meeting on 19–20 June took no decision on the Commission's proposals for a "Framework Agreement on humane trapping standards", which are not supported by the UK or a number of other Member States. The Commission and the Council will now have to decide whether to pursue the proposals for an agreement which we regard as unsatisfactory, or consider other options, including the implementation of the original EU import ban under Regulation 3254/91 on the import of furs taken in leghold traps.

Sewage Outfall (Falmouth)

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to ensure that water purity is maintained in Carrick Roads, Falmouth following South West Water's proposals for a sewage outfall there; [5482]

(2) what assessment he has made of the likely impact on the Truro oyster fishery of South West Water's plans to site a sewage outfall in Carrick Roads, Falmouth; [5477]

(3) how many representations he has received regarding South West Water's plans for a sewage outfall in Carrick Roads, Falmouth. [5483]

Angela Eagle: It is for the Environment Agency, in the first instance, to protect controlled waters from pollution through the operation of the discharge consents system set out in the Water Resources Act 1991 and other water pollution legislation. In relation to the proposed sewage outfall at Carrick Roads, Falmouth, the Agency has negotiated the scheme with South West Water as an interim measure to secure water quality improvements to meet the requirements of the Bathing Water Directive, pending completion of the full scheme planned for compliance with the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive at the end of the year 2000. The Agency will have had in mind the need to ensure that the discharge meets the water quality requirements of all relevant legislation. This includes the need to meet the requirements of the Shellfish Waters Directive for those designated waters in the Fal estuary at Turnaware Bar and the Percuil River. In addition, the Agency operates a policy whereby, in relation to discharges where the commercial use of an area for harvesting shellfish has been established, no deterioration in water quality should normally be allowed which would be expected to cause a deterioration in the classification of waters at the time of consent determination.

The Agency is minded to allow a discharge consent on certain conditions and subject to post-scheme monitoring of the discharge to demonstrate that its objectives have been met and to request adjustments to optimise the discharge regime in the light of operational experience. However, my Department has received 32 representations regarding South West Water's plans and is currently considering whether the Deputy Prime Minister should call-in for his own determination the associated application for discharge consent.

Gas Safety

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what requirements are placed on gas emergency engineers in respect of the carrying of equipment to trace carbon monoxide. [5431]

Angela Eagle: There are no specific requirements. However, the Gas Safety (Management) Regulations 1996 place a duty on gas transporters and/or emergency service providers to attend the scene of a reported gas emergency and make the situation safe. The Regulations also require those undertaking the work to have the necessary skills, competence and hardware to enable them to discharge their duties effectively and safely.

On the broader issue of gas safety, we are determined to support the Health and Safety Commission/Executive in their policy of raising awareness and encouraging tough enforcement where action is necessary. We have asked officials for advice before the autumn on ways in which a higher profile for gas safety can be achieved.

Diesel (Sulphur Content)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he supported moves by the Dutch Government to lower the maximum permissible level of sulphur in diesel from 2000 at the recent Council of European Environment Ministers meeting; and if he will make a statement. [6166]

Angela Eagle: The UK supported the proposal by the Dutch Presidency that diesel fuel containing an indicative level of 50ppm sulphur should be phased in from 2005. This proposal was accepted as part of the Common Position at the Council of European Environment Ministers. The UK also supported proposals for a level of 350ppm sulphur in diesel as a mandatory standard for 2000. This was proposed by the Commission, supported by the Presidency and accepted as part of the Common Position.

Town and City Centres

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend planning guidance to local authorities in respect of their management of town and city centres; and if he will make a statement. [5055]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government's planning guidance on town centres and retail developments, PPG6, already contains advice on town centre management; we have no current plans to amend it. The Government also provides core funding for the Association of Town Centre Management (ATCM), which has a lead role in the promotion of town centre management. The Government has also provided financial support for three ATCM research projects, two of which I launched on 18 June, "Town Centre Partnerships: A Survey of Good Practice" (undertaken by Hillier Parker and URBED) and "Managing Urban Open Spaces" (undertaken by Chesterton's), and one on "Town Improvement Zones" (undertaken by KPMG) which will report shortly.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with local authorities and their associations, concerning the economic viability of town centres, city centres and local markets. [5056]

Mr. Raynsford: Ministers and officials have regular meetings with the local authority associations, the Association of Town Centre Management and other bodies about town and city centre issues, including their economic wellbeing. I also addressed the Association of Town Centre Management on 18 June and launched two ATCM research projects "Town Centre Partnerships: A survey of Good Practice" (undertaken by Hillier Parker and URBED) and "Managing Urban Open Spaces" (undertaken by Chesterton's), both of which received financial support from the Government.

English Partnerships

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of houses built by English Partnerships in each year since 1993, by local authority; and if he will make a statement. [5721]

Angela Eagle: English Partnerships has not built any houses since it was launched in 1993. The Agency cannot, under Section 160(2) of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993, provide housing itself. It can however, facilitate the construction of housing, both private and social, by others. The amount of housing indirectly created by English Partnerships in this way since it cane into being in November 1993 is as follows:

Estimated number of housing units facilitated

	Number
1993–94 (part)	800
1994–95	2,900

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 23 June, Official Report, column 378, if he will give a breakdown of English Partnerships' spending in each of the last three financial years by standard planning region as covered by Government offices. [6050]

Angela Eagle: The information is not readily available. I have asked English Partnerships to write to the hon. Member with the information in due course. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Development Agency (East Midlands)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the time scale for the creation of the Regional Development Agency for the east midlands. [6219]

Angela Eagle: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Morley and Rothwell (Mr. Gunnell) on 11 June, Official Report, column 473, by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Regions, Regeneration and Planning.

Estates Renewal Challenge Fund

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will be running a further round of the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund; and when he will be inviting local authorities to apply for places on the 1998 Housing Transfer Disposal Programme. [6625]

Ms Armstrong: I will launch tomorrow Round Three of the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund and invite Local Authorities to apply for places on the 1998 Housing Transfer Disposal Programme. Transfer will remain a voluntary process and will take place only with the consent of tenants and the local authority.

Local authorities should consider housing transfer as one of the options when developing their housing strategy. Transfer can provide an effective and value for money means of getting investment into local authority housing. We want to see transfer delivering a high standard of service for tenants, providing decent and good quality homes.

Bids for money form the Estates Renewal Challenge Fund must also be set firmly within the context of authorities' housing strategies, and I am keen for authorities to package better and poorer quality housing together. This will enable more local authorities to revive and renew their worst estates. The Government is committed to improving standards of living and bringing back the sense of community which is so often lacking in large, poor quality estates.

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to extend the scope of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 to incorporate drivers of minicabs and private hire cars. [5847]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We currently have no such plans. The public transport vehicles which are included in the Act are essentially those which offer the opportunity for spontaneous travel. Private hire cars are booked in advance, when customers can specify any particular needs they may have. Our priority is to use the powers which are currently provided by the Act to bring forward accessibility regulations for taxis, buses and coaches and rail vehicles. We hope to begin consultation on draft technical specifications in the next few weeks.

Fuel Lubricants

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into (i) non-lead fuel lubricants and (ii) XPCL in respect of their effect on fuel consumption; and if he will make a statement. [5975]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. Investigation and evaluation of the performance of proprietary fuel additives and non-lead lubricants such as XPCL is not undertaken by the Department.

Inland Waterways (Union Jack)

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the law under which a fine can be imposed for flying the Union Jack on a boat on an inland waterway. [5877]

Ms Glenda Jackson: To change the law in this manner would require primary legislation. Although there are no current plans to review merchant shipping legislation, we will consider this issue the next time an appropriate opportunity arises.

Channel Tunnel

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the report compiled by Channel Tunnel Safety Authority Observers attending the BINAT 7 channel tunnel exercise on 7 and 8 October 1995; [5671]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the report produced by members of the Public Safety Working Group of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority who observed the TABLEX II exercise on 19 May 1995; [5686]

(3) if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the letter sent on 27 February 1996 by the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority to Eurotunnel regarding the BINAT 7 exercise and (b) Eurotunnel's response. [5672]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am not in a position to do so. All three sets of papers contain information supplied by Eurotunnel. Disclosure would be a breach of clause 33 of the Concession Agreement of 1986, covering intellectual property and confidentiality, which includes a requirement on all parties to that Agreement, and also the Intergovernmental Commission and Safety Authority, to hold in confidence all documents and other information supplied to them by, or on behalf of, any other party.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what were the conclusions of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority in relation to (a) alerting and activation, (b) delivery of emergency medical response, (c) evacuation of passengers and (d) Eurotunnel management of bi-national emergencies during the BINAT 7 exercise on 7 and 8 October 1995; [5685]

(2) if passengers were evacuated within the 90 minute guidance during the BINAT 7 exercise undertaken in the Channel Tunnel on 7 and 8 October 1995. [5673]

Ms Jackson: The Safety Authority letter of 27 February 1996, referred to in paragraph 86 of their Annual Report for 1995–96, is addressed to Eurotunnel and contains the key issues which the Safety Authority wished the Company to address following analysis of the outcome of the BINAT 7 emergency exercise.

It is not the practice of the bi-national Safety Authority to release detailed information about emergency exercises conducted by Eurotunnel.

Heathrow and Gatwick Airports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment his Department has made of the reduced final approach aircraft separation trials at Heathrow and Gatwick airports. [5604]

Ms Glenda Jackson: National Air Traffic Services Limited commenced a trial at Heathrow in October 1994 to reduce the distance between aircraft at final approach from 3 to 2.5 nautical miles in certain specific circumstances. Its use has been infrequent as it is confined to daytime and used only when there is sufficient visibility. The trial was monitored continuously and modified from experience gained. A full safety assessment was carried out and is now being considered by the Safety Regulation Group of the Civil Aviation Authority. A similar trial is expected to start at Gatwick soon.

Southport–Preston Train Services

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what provision exists for public subsidy to promote the reinstatement of a train service between Southport and Preston utilising the Burscough Curves. [5958]

Ms Glenda Jackson: As with all "new" services, it would be a matter for the sponsoring body to liaise with Railtrack, the train operating company and any other interested party, for example the relevant local authority, to establish whether such a scheme was viable. The Franchising Director has powers to designate services as experimentals for a period of up to five years. At the end of that time, the Franchising Director would decide whether he was prepared to provide financial support if necessary to secure the continued provision of the service.

Transport Safety

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the relationship between Government spending on transport safety and casualty rates. [6253]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department has not directly commissioned any research of this kind. However, the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents (ROSPA), as part of the work programme for which they receive a grant from the Department, have recently carried out a survey of Local Authorities covering spending on transport safety in relation to accident rates. The results are not yet available and therefore have not been evaluated.

The Department commissioned the Transport Research Laboratory to carry out research into the cost effectiveness of individual local authority safety schemes financed from the local transport capital settlement since 1992–93. The TRL report shows that the overall first year rate of return from 212 schemes in 12 authorities averaged 190 per cent.

Seahorse and Exodus Incident

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the current state of his Department's investigations into the incident involving the flagged vessel "Seahorse" and the Irish vessel "Exodus" in March 1997. [6151]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Marine Accidents Investigation Branch is carrying out an investigation into this tragic accident and its report will be sent to the Marine Safety Agency and forwarded to all involved parties.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

General Affairs Council

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report on the outcome of the General Affairs Council on 26 and 27 June. [6436]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The 24 A points in Document 9256/97, the text of which will be placed in the libraries of the House as soon as it is available, were agreed.

The Council noted the resolutions adopted by the European Parliament listed in Documents 8021/97 and 8773/97. Copies of these documents will also be placed in the libraries of the House as soon as they are available.

Following agreement on the Amsterdam Treaty, the Council noted that legal editing of the text was under way, with a view to signature in Amsterdam in October. COREPER was mandated to consider any necessary preparations before the Treaty entered into force. The Council called on the Secretariat-General to report back after signature of the Treaty on possible organisational arrangements for setting up the CFSP policy planning cell, and integrating the Schengen Secretariat into the General Secretariat of the Council.

The Council reconfirmed the position set out in the December 1996 Common Position on Cuba and approved the Presidency proposals for its evaluation and implementation. The objective of the European Union remains the encouragement of a process of peaceful transition to democracy, respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms, a sustainable economic recovery and an improvement in the living standards of the Cuban people. The Council will re-evaluate the Union's position after a further six months.

The Council agreed conclusions on preparatory work for the extraordinary European Council on Employment.

The Presidency and Commission reported on the Denver Summit of the Eight. Member States took note of the achievements of the Summit, particularly on the environment, financial stability and Hong Kong.

The Presidency and the Commission reported on the EU/Canada Summit held in Denver on 20 June. The Summit reviewed progress on the EU/Canada Action Plan and Political Declaration signed in December 1996. The UK intends to use its Presidency of the EU to build upon Dutch efforts to maintain the momentum of the EU/Canada process.

The sixth EU/Japan Summit was held in The Hague on 25 June. It discussed the importance of a successful ASEM (Asia Europe Meeting) Summit in London in April 1998. Japan confirmed that broad-based deregulation remained an essential part of its structural reform programme. Both sides reiterated support for Chinese and Russian accession to the World Trade Organisation on commercially viable terms.

The EU issued a declaration on the eve of the parliamentary elections in Albania which urged all political parties to participate and to respect the results and accept the OSCE assessment on their validity. The EU reaffirmed its commitment to support the elections including sending monitors, although responsibility for holding free and fair elections remains with Albania. It stressed the importance of consolidating the reconciliation process after the elections and is prepared to support economic recovery in Albania once certain conditions are met. Future relations with Albania depend on the restoration of democratic principles and sound economic practices. The Council agreed that, subject to an agreement with the IMF, it was desirable to hold an International Donors' Conference for Bosnia and Herzegovina at the earliest possible date. Close co-ordination with the High Representative, the World Bank and other donors would be required to achieve this.

The Council discussed the current situation regarding the extension of the UN Transition Administration for Eastern Slavonia (UNTAES) mandate in Eastern Slavonia.

The Council stressed the importance of efforts to conclude negotiations for Association Agreements with Egypt and Lebanon as soon as possible. It agreed to assess how to meet Spanish concerns about a review clause in the EU/Jordan Agreement dealing with the section on agricultural quotas.

The Council discussed the implications for the EU of Burma's accession to ASEAN, underlining concerns about the deteriorating human rights situation in Burma, and calling on the SLORC to allow a visit to Burma by the UN Special Rapporteur. The Council confirmed its commitment to the EU/ASEAN dialogue and reaffirmed that Burma's membership of ASEAN did not automatically imply membership of ASEM. Possible additional measures against Burma will be considered again in September in the light of the forthcoming ASEAN Regional Forum/Post Ministerial Conference (ARF/PMC) meetings and developments in Burma.

A Dutch proposal to solve the impasse in agreeing the mid term review for the Overseas Countries and Territories was opposed. I pointed out that the failure to reach agreement was prolonging the suffering of a number of Dependent Territories, including Montserrat. The UK urged the Council to proceed with discussions on the basis of the Irish Presidency proposal. This view was supported by others. It was agreed that the Netherlands would consult further with the Commission with a view to reaching agreement in July.

The GAC discussed the handover in Hong Kong. A Declaration was agreed, underlining the Council Support for continuing democracy in Hong Kong and calling for free and fair elections to take place as soon as possible, or in any case within twelve months.

The Council discussed recommendations from the EU Special Envoy, Miguel Moratinos, for following up the declaration on the Middle East Peace Process agreed by the Amsterdam European Council. These included support for Egyptian mediation to break the current deadlock on the Palestinian track, action on the economic situation of the Palestinians, on economic assistance to Jordan, and to promote respect for democracy and human rights, and on efforts to build up long term momentum in the peace process. The Council extended Moratinos' appointment for a further year.

The Council discussed the situation in the Democratic Republic of Congo and EU relations with the transitional government. It took note of the intention of the incoming Luxembourg Presidency to send a ministerial troika to Kinshasha. The Council approved the extension for 12 months of the mandate of the EU Special Envoy for the Great Lakes region, Aldo Ajello.

The Council agreed that following the Ministerial Troika meeting in New York on 23 June, dialogue with the Organisation of African Unity (OAU) should be intensified at all levels, particularly regarding the proposed EU/OAU Summit.

The 7th session of the European Economic Area (EEA) Council met on 26 June. All parties were happy with the continued smooth running of the EEA Agreement. The past year had seen important progress, particularly in the field of medicinal products. It was hoped that outstanding work on veterinary matters could be completed by early 1998. The non-EU members of the EEA outlined their interest in the EU gas market directive currently under negotiation. They also expressed their satisfaction that an agreement had been possible in the dispute between the EU and Norway over farmed salmon. A political dialogue covering the Middle East Peace Process, Russia, Albania, Former Yugoslavia and Transatlantic Relations also took place. The official record is contained in document EEE 1603/97, Presse 223.

The EU/Australia Joint Declaration was signed. UK has always advocated a closer EU/Australia relationship—Joint Declaration establishes a foundation for co-operation.

British Council

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future Government funding of the British Council, indicating the split between his Department and the Department for International Development. [6290]

Mr. Fatchett: This Department and the Department for International Development, together with other government departments, are currently examining the deployment of all their resources, including those dedicated to the British Council, as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review. The findings of the review will be submitted to the Cabinet's Committee.

Amsterdam Treaty

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which European Union Governments are planning to put the Amsterdam treaty to a national referendum; and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy. [6104]

Mr. Henderson: Denmark will hold a national referendum on the Amsterdam Treaty in 1998. We are not aware of any other Member State whose Government has announced that it will hold a referendum, though the situation may change. The Government does not intend to hold a referendum on the Amsterdam Treaty.

BBC World Service

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to implement the suggestions for monitoring the effect of restructuring the BBC World Service made by the then Minister of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the Foreign Affairs Committee on 12 November 1996; and if he will make a statement. [5832]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are monitoring closely the effects of the restructuring, and the implementation of the 20 agreed measures contained in this Department's/BBC World Service Working Group Report. We have regular meetings with the World Service to review progress. Diplomatic posts abroad have been asked to monitor World Service broadcasts. The Working Group is due to reconvene in the Autumn.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is he will list the safeguards announced in October 1996 for the protection of the BBC World Service during the period of restructuring, indicating in each case the extent to which it has been implemented; and if he will make a statement. [5831]

Mr. Lloyd: Copies of this Department's/BBC World Service Working Group Report, which contain the 20 agreed measures designed to safeguard the World Service, are available from the Libraries of the House. The Working Group will reconvene in the autumn to ensure that the measures are functioning satisfactorily and producing the desired results.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Caton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what steps his Department takes to ensure the enforcement of the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1994 and directive 91/628/EEC during the import of cattle into the United Kingdom from third countries; and if he will make a statement; [4143]

(2) what assessment he has made of the compliance with (a) the Welfare of Animals During Transport Order 1994 and (b) directive 91/628/EEC in respect of (i) the recent birth of a calf on a sea voyage from Canada to

Bristol, (ii) the transport onward from Bristol of the calf and its mother, (iii) the weather during the voyage and (iv) the containers used for the cattle during the sea voyage. [4722]

Mr. Morley: Enforcement of the legislation concerning the welfare of animals during transport is the responsibility of local authorities, and Ministry staff liaise with them in relation to this work. In April officers from the enforcement authority for the Welfare of Animals during transport Order 1994, (North Somerset District Council), and the Ministry's veterinary service monitored the arrival of 227 cattle at the Royal Portbury Dock which had been transported from Canada. One heifer calved on the dockside and the movement of these two animals was authorised, after their welfare had been assessed, under a statutory notice to specified premises near Chepstow. A subsequent visit was made to these premises when both the heifer and calf were reported to be in good condition. The remaining cattle were reported to be in excellent condition and were transported to their destination. The containers provided suitable accommodation during this, and on other, sea voyages. No incidents of abrasions, lameness or injury to the animals whilst in the containers were reported.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 536, what assessment he has made of the impact of the decrease in the number of abattoirs since 1975 on (a) journey times and (b) distances within England for animals between point of production and point of slaughter. [4145]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 17 June 1997]: Various studies have been made of movement patterns in the British livestock sector. These indicate that a range of factors rather than just distance from the nearest abattoir influence the length of animals' journeys to slaughter.

Fur Farms

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mink and fox fur farms there are in England and Wales by county. [5555]

Mr. Morley: There are currently no licensed mink farms in Wales. At 20 June 1997, there were the following mink farms in England:

County	Number of licensed mink farms
Cornwall	1
Dorset	1
Hampshire	1
Isle of Wight	1
Lancashire	6
Northumberland	1
Staffordshire	1
South Yorkshire	1
Total	15

There is no requirement to register fox fur farms. However, I am not aware of any in England and Wales.

Rare and Endangered Species

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to review agricultural and food policies in order to safeguard rare and endangered species. [5183]

Mr. Rooker: The Government are fully committed to protecting biodiversity and will take account of this when considering all relevant aspects of agricultural and food policies.

Slaughterhouse Pre-stunning Equipment

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he plans to take to ensure compliance by abattoirs with paragraph 9(a)(ii) of Schedule 5 to the Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995; and if he will make a statement. [6066]

Mr. Morley: Recent developments will help both enforcement staff and slaughterhouse operators to ensure full compliance with this requirement. A testing unit has been developed which will confirm whether electrical stunning equipment contains an effective impedance device ("fail-safe"). In addition, a "fail-safe" device which may be fitted into existing stunning equipment is expected to be available commercially later this year. Once this equipment is available, appropriate enforcement action will then be taken when necessary.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he plans to take to reduce the incidence of pre-stun electric shocks experience by turkeys at slaughter; and if he will make a statement. [6065]

Mr. Morley: The Government wish to see the highest standards of welfare at slaughter and this is one area where improvement can be achieved. Research, funded by this Ministry and others, has already suggested ways of reducing pre-stun shocks, and commercial trials on further developments are in progress. We are also supporting proposals issued by the European Commission to amend the present rules on slaughter to require slaughterhouse operators to take measures to prevent pre-stun shocks in turkeys.

Association of Sea Fisheries Committees

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his statutory annual meeting with the Association of Sea Fisheries Committees. [6071]

Mr. Morley: I represented the Minister at the annual statutory meeting with the Association of Sea Fisheries Committees (ASFC) which was held on the afternoon of 25 June. All twelve SFCs were represented, along with officials from their association and the Environment Agency. Officials from this Department and the Welsh Office were also present.

There was a useful discussion of progress on a range of issues which the ASFC has requested for discussion. These included the implications for them of the local government review in England and Wales, the Sea Fisheries Regulation Act 1966, technical conservation, shellfish licensing and bass conservation.

Bees

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what European Commission proposals are currently under discussion in respect of bee health; what estimate he has made of their cost to the British Government; and in what respects they differ from measures already taken on a national level. [6090]

Mr. Rooker: The Commission proposal for a regulation concerning the production and marketing of honey was adopted at the Council of Ministers meeting of 23–25 June. The regulation's main aim is to assist the beekeeping sector in dealing with the burden of the bee disease varroa.

The programme will cost 15 mecu annually from 1998 (£10.81 million using the June 1997 exchange rate of 1 ecu = £0.7208). The gross United Kingdom contribution to this new expenditure would be 2.2 mecu (£1.6 million). However, the regulation will involve 50 per cent. reimbursement of eligible items of expenditure made under approved programmes. There could thus be some receipts from the Commission under the bee programme to set against the expenditure, but no final decision has yet been taken. At present we spend £1.5 million annually on bee health measures, some of which would be eligible for reimbursement.

Ritual Slaughter

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) which religious bodies he has met to discuss proposed legislation to make ritual slaughter more humane; [6239]

(2) what plans he has to proceed with the draft Bill drawn up by the last Government to make ritual slaughter more humane. [6238]

Mr. Morley: The Government has no plans to introduce new legislation on religious slaughter without prior stunning, which is already subject to detailed statutory requirements. We will, however, be looking to discuss the requirements of the religious communities with a view to encouraging, where possible, an increase in the incidence of stunning before slaughter.

SCOTLAND

PFI Projects (Effect on Staff)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure that NHS staff transferred to private sector employers under PFI projects retain the same wages, conditions and rights as when they were directly employed by the NHS. [5863]

Mr. Galbraith: In general terms, NHS employees who transfer to the employment of a private operator are protected by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 (TUPE). TUPE protects the contract of employment at the point of transfer to the new employer. Thereafter, pay and other terms and conditions of service may only be changed as a result of the normal joint process of negotiation between employer and staff, and with the agreement of both sides. Under common law, any significant variance from the terms of an existing contract of employment could represent a breach of contract.

Despite the protection offered by TUPE regulations described above, some staff may be concerned about transferring from the NHS to private sector employment. There are benefits for the NHS in the inclusions of service elements in current models of PFI, but it is also important to take the interests of employees fully into account, and we shall do so in the fundamental review of PFI in Health that is being currently undertaken.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of staff currently directly employed by the NHS who will (a) lose their employment and (b) transfer to private sector employers under the PFI proposal to build the new Edinburgh Royal Infirmary. [5864]

Mr. Galbraith: As a new hospital we expect the new Royal Infirmary to provide considerable efficiency savings particularly as it will be situated on only two sites whereas at present it comprises seven hospitals on four sites. We recognise, therefore, that there will be implications for staffing levels. The Trust will manage this process over a 5 year period and it is expected that excess posts can be shed mainly through natural losses.

Around 190 non-clinical staff will transfer to work for the private sector employer.

Public Appointments

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to include local communities in appointments of board members of non-departmental public bodies in Scotland. [5865]

Mr. Dewar: I believe that local communities should be prominently represented on public bodies whose work affects their areas. I have already announced measures to strengthen local democratic control of the Scottish water authorities. I shall continue to look for further opportunities to strengthen local community representation on the boards of non-departmental public bodies.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to modify public appointment procedures; and if he will make a statement. [5342]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 26 June 1997]: We are committed to full implementation of the Nolan procedures on public appointments. I am considering with colleagues how this might best be taken forward.

Devolution

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his Department plans to spend on advertising the availability of postal votes before the proposed referendum on Scottish devolution. [5856]

Mr. McLeish: The Department plans to run a campaign to alert absent voters to the arrangements for voting in the referendum. The details of the planned campaign are still under consideration.

Foxes

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the benefits to forests of foxes; and if he will make a statement. [5822]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The Forestry Commission will publish a paper later this year setting out the results of its review of the available information on foxes and forestry. Foxes are an integral part of the woodland ecosystem. In particular, they are natural predators of rabbits and voles, both of which can damage young trees.

Museums

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the museums in Scotland which receive non-formula funding from the Higher Education Council. [6319]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 1 July 1997]: Museums which received specific grants for 1996–97 from the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council were the:

Marischal Museum, University of Aberdeen.

Russell Collection, University of Edinburgh.

Collection of Historical Musical Instruments, University of Edinburgh.

Hunterian Museum and Art Gallery, University of Glasgow.

University Collections, University of St. Andrews.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's policy with regard to the funding of university museums; and if he will make a statement. [6309]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 1 July 1997]: University Museums play an important part in maintaining, and enhancing access to, our intellectual and cultural heritage. Responsibility for funding of University Museums lies primarily with the parent universities, together with the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council and The Scottish Office.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to co-ordinate policy with the Department for Education and Employment and the Department of National Heritage with regard to the funding of university museums; and if he will make a statement. [6308]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The Secretary of State for Scotland has responsibility for funding of University Museums in Scotland, and consults on major policy issues with Ministers from the Department for Education and Employment and the Department for National Heritage.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the museums in Scotland (a) owned and (b) managed by universities. [6314]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 1 July 1997]: There are 29 museums owned and managed by universities in Scotland and registered with the Museums and Galleries Commission. A list of registered museums in Scotland drawn up by Museums and Galleries Commission is available in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the religious and political breakdown of the members of the Fair Employment Commission. [5574]

Mr. Ingram: The religious breakdown of the current membership of the Board of the Fair Employment Commission is as follows:

4 Protestants

3 Catholics

2 Other

The information requested on political breakdown is not available.

Fox and Mink Factory Farms

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fox and mink factory farms there are in Northern Ireland by county. [5556]

Mr. Murphy: None.

Sir David Fell

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland from what date the retirement pension of Sir David Fell will be paid. [5571]

Mr. Murphy: Under the terms of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (Northern Ireland) Sir David Fell will receive payment of an annual compensation payment equal to his preserved pension from 1 October 1997 until age 60 at which time his retirement pension will be paid.

Dundonald Training Centre

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which courses are being retained at Dundonald Training Centre; which courses will cease to exist this year; if the training centre will be required to limit the number of trainees it accepts; and if she will make a statement. [5488]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its Chief Executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 27 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about the courses being retained, or not retained, at Dundonald Training Centre and the overall limitation on numbers at the Centre.

In the training year commencing September 1997, Dundonald Training Centre will offer apprenticeship training in Mechanical Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Fabrication, Light Vehicle Repair, Light Vehicle Body Repair, and Contractors Plant Maintenance.

Apprenticeship courses for construction industry trades will not be available to new entrants but the Centre will ensure that trainees in this sector who have completed their training at Dundonald continue to be monitored during their subsequent period of employer based training. The Business Administration class previously offered at the Centre will also cease.

Short term courses to meet the needs of employers and, in particular, courses in natural gas fitting will continue to be offered wherever possible.

All the Agency's Training Centres limit the number of trainees they accept in line with the resources available. Dundonald Training Centre will be limited to 75 new entrants in its Jobskills programme in 1997/98. There is no limit to the number of trainees who may be admitted to courses which are directly funded by employers.

Director of Public Prosecutions

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps her Department is taking to increase the speed at which the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions processes cases to conclusion; and if she will make a statement about its targets. [5573]

Mr. Ingram: The Northern Ireland Office is responsible for providing the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland with staff, accommodation and other resources. The Director, who is independent of government, is superintended in the due performance of his functions under the Prosecution of Offences (Northern Ireland) Order 1972, by the Attorney General for Northern Ireland.

The Northern Ireland Office, both in relation to the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions and, as part of its general responsibility for criminal justice in Northern Ireland, seeks to maintain and improve the efficiency of the criminal justice system as a whole. Measures in hand include responsibility for an administrative time limits scheme, research commissioned in conjunction with other criminal justice agencies on the time taken to investigate and process prosecutions, and, facilitating work by inter-agency working groups tackling delay issues.

Under the administrative time limits scheme, an overall time limit is set for custody cases of 10 months from first remand before the Magistrates' Court to arraignment at the Crown Court. Within this scheme, time limits are set for individual stages; performance in these stages will depend on various criminal justice agencies including the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Northern Ireland Court Service and not solely the Office of Director of Public Prosecutions. The overall target from receipt of a police investigation file by the Director to committal for trial to the Crown Court is 97 days. In 1996, this was met in 73 per cent. of scheduled cases and 86 per cent. of non-scheduled cases respectively.

A number of cases arising in Northern Ireland are of a particularly complex nature, whose investigation and preparation is necessarily prolonged. Nevertheless, it is vital to continue to explore means of avoiding delay. My Department, in conjunction with others more directly involved in the criminal justice process, is continuing to investigate ways in which delay can be addressed at every stage.

Royal Group of Hospitals, Belfast

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations she has received in respect of the recent introduction of car parking charges at the Royal Group of Hospitals in Belfast; and if she will make a statement. [5409]

Mr. Worthington: Representations have been received from the hon. and learned Member for North Down (Mr. McCartney) and the hon. Member for South Down (Mr. McGrady), some local councils and the Trade Unions. The need to expand the car parking facilities has been driven by the loss of some 500 spaces subsumed by the planned development scheme. The Royal Group of Hospitals and Dental Hospitals Health and Social Services Trust considered that the private finance route was the only feasible option to expand and improve the car parking facilities. The Trust thinks that the imposition of a car parking charge is preferable to diverting resources from the provision of patient care. Discussions have taken place with the Trade Union side and I am hopeful that the situation will be resolved to the benefit of patients and staff and all those involved in this matter.

Public Appointments

Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to modify public appointment procedures; and if she will make a statement. [4420]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 24 June 1997]: Ministerial appointments to executive non-departmental public bodies in Northern Ireland have been subject since 1 July 1996 to the Code of Practice and Guidance of the Northern Ireland Commissioner for Public Appointments, whose Office was created on the recommendation of the Nolan Committee on Standards in Public Life. The Government will be seeking opportunities to ensure that the appointments process is as open and inclusive as possible, and will be considering with the Commissioner whether his remit should be extended to other public bodies.

Extradition

Mr. Roy Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in obtaining co-operation from the United States Government for the extradition of George Finbar Ross to Northern Ireland to answer charges relating to the collapse of International Investments Ltd. Gibraltar. [4575]

Mr. Ingram: There has for some time been good co-operation with the United States Government, through the Department of Justice, in the matter of the extradition of George Finbar Ross. Discussions with the United States Government on the case are continuing.

Disturbances (Belfast)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the police costs associated with disturbances in the Limestone road area of Belfast during the past year. [4068]

Mr. Ingram: It is not possible to give separately costs specifically associated with disturbances in the Limestone road area.

WALES

"Welsh Economic Trends"

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish annually "Welsh Economic Trends". [5436]

Mr. Hain: The information previously published in Welsh Economic Trends is now published regularly in other volumes. Data on the Welsh economy are published annually in the Digest of Welsh Statistics; in addition, economic data for local authorities and other areas now appear annually in the Digest of Welsh Local Area Statistics.

Nursery Education

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has to improve nursery education provision in rural areas; [6101]

(2) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of nursery provisions in rural areas. [6102]

Mr. Hain: At January 1996, over 90 per cent. of four year olds were receiving education in state schools. In predominantly rural areas, provision ranged from 70 per cent. in Gwynedd to 100 per cent. in Powys. Resources provided for the 1997–98 financial year are geared to funding at least a half-time place for every four year old in Wales whose parents want this. From April 1998, local authorities will be expected to produce early years development plans. These will address the issues of demand for places, additional provision needed to meet any shortfall, and the quality of provision.

Low Pay Commission

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that the Low Pay Commission consults the small business sector in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6085]

Mr. Hain: I have ensured that the Low Pay Commission will consult widely in Wales; including the Federation of Small Businesses, whom I met recently to discuss this precise matter.

SOCIAL SECURITY

State Retirement Pension

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the annual cost to public funds, net of savings in other social security expenditure, of increasing the basic state retirement pension by £5 per week for a single person, and by £8 for a married couple. [3531]

Mr. Denham: Security in retirement will be one of our key priorities. We will retain the Basic State Pension as the foundation of pension provision, increasing it at least in line with prices. The estimated net cost of increasing the standard rate of Basic State Pension by £5 for a single person and £8 for a married couple in 1997–98 is £2.1 billion.

Notes:

1. Figure is rounded to the nearest £100 million.

2. Calculation assumes that increases apply to Retirement Pension and all linked benefits (i.e.: Widows Benefits, Incapacity Benefit, Non-Contributory Retirement Pension and Industrial Injuries Death Benefits and Adult Dependency Increases paid with these benefits).

Disabled People (Computer Equipment)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what grants and allowances for computer equipment are available to meet the specific needs of disabled people. [4378]

Mr. Field: The Government's overall objective in providing equipment to disabled people is to help them live as fully and independently as possible.

The Department for Education and Employment has the main responsibility for making grants and allowances to disabled people in order to remove barriers to employment. The largest area of support is through the Employment Service's Access to Work programme. Last year the programme helped around 10,000 disabled people with specialist support and equipment, tailored to their individual needs. No details are held on grants given specifically for the purchase of Information Technology.

In addition computers are supplied in some cases by the National Health Service, mainly as communication aids to people with communication difficulties. The National Health Service also supplies electronic environmental controls to help severely physically disabled people operate home appliances, which provide access to computers where necessary.

Grants and allowances for computer equipment are not generally available through the Social Security system.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cold weather payments were made; and how much was spent on cold weather payments in the winter of 1996–97. [4724]

Mr. Keith Bradley: During the winter of 1996–97, almost five million cold weather payments worth over £42 million were issued.

Housing Benefit (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are claiming housing benefit in Portsmouth; and what were the figures for (a) 1974, (b) 1979, (c) 1988 and (d) 1996. [4742]

Mr Keith Bradley: The existing Housing Benefit scheme was introduced only in 1988. In November 1996, the latest date for which figures are available, Portsmouth City Council paid housing benefit to 21,190 recipients.

1. Recipients may be a single person or a couple. 2. The local authority advises that 3,900 of the recipients were tenants of Portsmouth council properties in Havant.

Internet

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what use she plans to make of the Internet to make Government more open. [5100]

Mr. Field: The Government is looking at ways to be responsive and accessible through electronic communication. The Department already has a presence on the Internet World Wide Web with information about Social Security and the work of the Department and its Executive Agencies. We see the Internet as an important tool in our plans to modernise the Social Security system, and in helping us to provide more and better quality information to the public. In developing its use we will have regard to the needs of all our customers (many of whom may not have ready access) and to data protection and other issues.

Child Support

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in respect of how many cases (a) her Department and (b) a Child Support Officer has sought leave to appeal against Child Support Commissioner decisions to the Court of Appeal. [5305]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Chief Child Support Officer has sought leave to appeal the decisions of Child Support Commissioners in five cases. In one case leave to appeal was ruled out of time by the Commissioner. Leave to appeal on three cases was refused initially by Commissioners, but subsequently granted by the Court of Appeal. All four of these cases involved joint applications by the Chief Child Support Officer and the Secretary of State. In the remaining case the Chief Child Support Officer alone applied for leave to appeal, but this was not determined by the Commissioner who invited a late application for the decision in question to be set aside (the application to set aside was made, accepted and the decision duly set aside).

The Secretary of State has made no applications for leave to appeal a Commissioner's decision in addition to those made jointly with the Chief Child Support Officer.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to introduce the penalty for late payments of child support maintenance provided for under section 41A of the Child Support Act 1991; and what form this penalty will take. [5249]

Mr. Bradley: The Government believes that all children are entitled to the support of both parents, irrespective of where they live. We will be looking carefully at the steps that can be taken to encourage absent parents to pay the maintenance they owe and we will consider whether a financial penalty under section 41A of the Act might have a part to play in achieving that aim. In the meantime, administrative arrangements are in place under which persistent non-payers can be required to pay up to 40 per cent. of their net income in current maintenance and arrears, rather than the usual maximum of 33 per cent.

Benefit Entitlement (Capital Limits)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will review the notional income levels from capital for benefit entitlements. [5057]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We want to develop a Social Security system that supports work, savings and honesty. Our first steps are to focus on helping people off welfare and into work and to review the central areas of insecurity for older people. As time and resources permit, we will be examining other aspects of current benefit rules.

The notional (tariff) income from capital attempts to strike a balance between encouraging people to save and an expectation that people with more substantial savings can make some contribution towards their living expenses from those savings. The tariff is currently applied if a person has over £3,000 in capital, unless they are in a residential care or nursing home, or in certain types of residential accommodation, in which case it is applied only on savings over £10,000.

Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the average waiting time between the submission of an appeal and the tribunal hearing in respect of (a) social security appeal tribunals, (b) child support appeal tribunals, (c) disability appeal tribunals and (d) medical appeal tribunals, in (i) Scotland, (ii) Orkney and (iii) Shetland in (1) 1995 and (2) 1996; [6041]

(2) how many applicants who have submitted an appeal to the Social Security Appeal Tribunal since 1 January 1995 in (a) Scotland, (b) Orkney and (c) Shetland have had to wait more than (i) three months, (ii) six months, (iii) one year and (iv) 18 months or more for a tribunal hearing to take place; [6043]

(3) how many applicants who have submitted an appeal to the Disability Appeal Tribunal since 1 January 1995 in (a) Scotland, (b) Orkney and (c) Shetland have had to wait more than (i) three months, (ii) six months, (iii) one year and (iv) 18 months for a tribunal hearing to take place; [6045]

(4) how many applicants who have submitted an appeal to the Medical Appeal Tribunal since 1 January 1995 in (a) Scotland, (b) Orkney and (c) Shetland have had to wait more than (i) three months, (ii) six months, (iii) one year and (iv) 18 months for a tribunal hearing to take place; [6042]

(5) how many applicants who have submitted an appeal to the Child Support Appeal Tribunal since 1 January 1995 in (a) Scotland, (b) Orkney and (c) Shetland have had to wait more than (i) three months, (ii) six months, (iii) one year and (iv) 18 months or more for a tribunal hearing to take place. [6044]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We intend to bring forward legislation to speed up appeals arrangements for all Social Security matters. Further details will be announced shortly.

Questions on the operational performance of the Independent Tribunal Service should be directed to its President, Judge Bassingthwaighte.

Absent Parents

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 24 June, Official Report, column 490, in what circumstances child support assessments may exceed 30 per cent. of an absent parent's net income. [6051]

Mr. Keith Bradley: An absent parent may be required to pay more than 30 per cent. of his net income, as assessed under the maintenance formula, if he is subject to an interim maintenance assessment because he has not co-operated with the Child Support Agency or if he owes arrears. Any absent parent who has co-operated with the Agency will retain at least 70 per cent. of his net income. In exceptional circumstances, an assessment may also exceed 30 per cent. of an absent parent's net income where the £1 de minimis rule on a change of circumstances applies and assessment is not immediately revised; or where the absent parent is required to pay the minimum amount (currently £5 a week) and his total income is £16.66 or less a week.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the rules governing Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit for the prescribed disease occupational deafness. [6084]

Mr. Denham: Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit can be paid if a person has worked for an employer for 10 years in certain jobs where noise is a hazard, and they have suffered a hearing loss of at least 50 decibels in both ears due to damage in the inner ear, and in at least one ear this damage was due to noise at work. A person must have worked in one of the specified jobs at some time during the five years before they make their claim. A wide range of jobs is specified in the regulations, and the Government are advised by the independent Industrial Injuries Advisory Council about those jobs which they consider are particularly at risk and should be added to the regulations. The Council is currently reviewing the list of diseases for which benefit can be paid, including occupational deafness.

The rules for claiming Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit for occupational deafness, and the jobs which are covered, are clearly set out in leaflet NI 207 produced by the Benefits Agency which is widely available.

Departmental Spending Plans

Mr. Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on Her Department's spending plans. [6787]

Ms Harman: My main priorities are to tackle social division and worklessness. Work is the best form of welfare and our New Deal will be an investment in the future of lone mothers, the young jobless and the long-term unemployed. We will also bring forward proposals to extend the New Deal to sick and disabled people. My Department's spending will no longer be used as an alternative to the proper strategy of ensuring that all of our people share in our economic prosperity.

Spending plans for the immediate future, 1997–98 and 1998–99, assume that a number of measures announced in the November 1996 Budget will be taken forward. I have undertaken a rigorous review of this unwelcome legacy and have made some changes. The details of the New Deal for lone mothers and the changes to the proposals I inherited are as follows:

Lone mothers

We have today announced our New Deal for Lone Parents to help them take-up work. We will offer help and advice on jobsearch, childcare and training to 40,000 lone parents this year and half a million next year.

Childcare

The allowance for childcare costs in Family Credit, Housing Benefit, and Council Tax Benefit will be extended and improved to make it easier for lone parents and breadwinners with disabled partners to return to work.

From April 1998 the disregard for childcare costs will be increased from a maximum of £60 to £100 a week where there are two or more children in the family and the maximum eligible age will be increased from 11 to 12.

These measures will be financed from the windfall levy and will cost some £200 million over this Parliament.

Child Support Agency

An additional £15 million a year will be invested from 1998–99 to assist lone mothers. This funding will help them by raising an extra £120 million in maintenance and will ensure that absent parents face up to their obligations.

Housing Benefit

The extension of the single room rent to those aged 25 to 59 will not now proceed in October. The cost of this will be met in part by adjusting the level of non-dependent deductions from next April. We intend to protect the position of those in greatest need.

Jobseeker's Allowance

The previous Government decided that the waiting days before Jobseeker's Allowance becomes payable will be increased from 3 days to 7 days from April 1999. However, by managing the cycle of Jobseeker's Allowance payments, we will ensure that nobody will have to wait more than the current maximum time before they receive their first payment of benefit.

I am committed to keeping my spending within the ceiling for social security expenditure already announced. I am also committed to modernising the social security system. The following measures will ensure that overall spending is contained and represent a step forward in modernising the system.

The time limit of three months for claiming social security benefits will be reduced to one month, in line with the current backdating rules where there is a change of circumstances. These limits will apply to Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit.

The intention is that the new provisions will come into force from June 1998, except for Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit which is subject to necessary legislation and has a planned date of introduction from October 1998.

The alignment of the time limits will be an integral part of modernising and streamlining the social security system and underlines the importance of people making their claims promptly.

In addition improved Social Fund loan recoveries allow for the planned level of gross funding to be delivered with £3 million less net budget, releasing these savings to be used elsewhere. The discretionary Social Fund gross budget for this year remains at £467.5 million, an increase of £27.5 million over 1996–97.

Other measures announced in the November 1996 Budget but not implemented by the time of the General Election will go ahead as planned. They are as follows:

new arrangements for Compensation Recovery;

the abolition of the 50 per cent. top-up which allowed certain rents above the average to be met in Housing Benefit; restricting Council Tax Benefit so that claimants with property in Bands F, G and H, have their Council Tax Benefit restricted to that of Band E; removing the right to claim Disability Living Allowance for those aged between 65 and 66; standardising the date on which child allowances are reviewed in Family Credit and Disability Working Allowance.

Withdrawal of entitlement to Lone Parent Family Premium in Income Support for new claimants will take effect in April 1998. Withdrawal of the lone parent rate of Child Benefit is subject to necessary legislation, and is now expected to come into effect from June 1998.

These measures are necessary to ensure that social security expenditure remains within the previously announced ceilings. The re-prioritising of expenditure in this package is the beginning of an urgent and long overdue reform of the social security system. We have no illusions about the size of the task, but the rewards for getting it right for individuals, for society and for public expenditure are enormous.

Publications (Blind and Partially Sighted People)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of her Department's publications have been available in (a) Braille, (b) audio tape and (c) large print in each year since 1992; and what percentage of the total number of publications this represents in each case. [3604]

Mr. Field [holding answer 17 June 1997]: I am sorry that the information requested by the hon. Member is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is reproduced in the table.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the performance of the Benefits Agency in 1996–97 against its targets for processing claims from newly unemployed people. [5444]

Mr. Field: Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We will streamline services to provide better, simpler more efficient services to clients within this framework. Operational matters of the Benefits Agency are the responsibility of Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive. I have asked him to write directly to the hon. Member and for his reply to be published with the answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Chris Pond, dated 1 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what was the performance of the Benefits Agency in 1996–97 against its target for processing claims from newly unemployed people.

The information is not available in the format requested. Claims made by unemployed people between 1 April 1996 and 6 October 1996 would have been for Income Support and Unemployment Benefit. Performance data on Income Support is not broken down into individual client groups and Unemployment Benefit was administered by Employment Services.

However JobSeekers Allowance was introduced on 7 October 1996. This replaced Unemployment Benefit and Income Support for unemployed people. Details of JSA performance against targets are shown in the attached tables.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

JSA performance and targets—1996–97
(from 7 October 1996–31 March 1997)

Target: JSA claims clearance (BA)

	Per cent.
Percentage of claims to be cleared in 6 days	65
1996–97 performance	84
Percentage of claims to be cleared in 14 days	90
1996–97 performance	96

Target 1: JSA claims clearance (overall)

	Per cent.
Percentage of claims to be cleared in 10 days	65
1996–97 performance	70.2
Percentage of claims to be cleared in 21 days	90
1996–97 performance	94.7

Camborne Benefits Advice Shop

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) on what date the decision was taken to close Camborne benefits advice shop; and when the proposed closure will come into effect; [2174]

(2) which criteria were used in making the decision to reduce the service at Camborne benefits advice shop; and if she will make a statement. [2175]

Mr. Field: One of our key aims is that delivery of service should be simpler and more efficient. No decision about changes will be made until an alternative has been carefully piloted and that the service meets our objectives. Queries on operational matters are for the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Candy Atherton, dated 1 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking on what date the decision was taken to close Camborne benefits advice shop; when the proposed closure will come into effect and which criteria were used in making the decision to reduce the service at that advice shop.

No decision has been made to close Camborne benefits advice shop. However, as you will be aware, following your meeting with the Cornwall Divisional Manager Peter Duke on 30th May, the licence to occupy the advice shop premises expires in December 1997.

Consultation always takes place before a decision is taken to close a Benefits Agency (BA) advice shop. Preliminary consultation with customers and customers' representatives on the future of Camborne benefits advice shop and alternative possible ways of meeting customers' needs has already commenced.

We are running a two month pilot exercise from 9 June to deliver an advice service from Camborne Employment Services Job Centre (ESJ) on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. For the duration of the trial, the advice shop will be closed on those days and open on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The ESJ is situated five minutes walk from the advice shop.

Following the trial, an evaluation of its effectiveness will take place, taking into account views of the public and their representatives. We are directing our resources to where they are needed most and BA Divisional Managers, using their local knowledge, will continue to review the service they provide to ensure that the needs of our customers are met and that the tax payer receives value for money.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefits Agency Staff

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many staff were employed on temporary or fixed-term contracts in the Benefits Agency (a) at the latest date for which figures are available, (b) 12 months before that date and (c) 24 months before that date. [4868]

Mr. Field: Modernising the Social Security system is a key priority of the Government. We will streamline services to provide better, simpler more efficient services to clients. As recruitment into the Benefits Agency is a matter for Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive, I have asked him to write directly to the hon. Member and for his reply to be published with the answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Mark Todd, dated 1 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many staff were employed on temporary or fixed term contracts in the Benefits Agency at the latest date for which figures are available, 12 months before that date and 24 months before that date.

	30 April 1995	30 April 1996	30 April 1997
Casuals	3,978	3,403	4,010
Fixed term appointments	2,608	3,658	4,359

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

CABINET OFFICE

Meetings

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the meetings he has had since 1 May with (a) Cabinet colleagues and (b) others in respect of the Royal Yacht; and if he will make a statement. [6168]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 1 July 1997]: It is not going to be my general policy to announce meetings I have with Ministerial colleagues and others on specific subjects.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Better Regulation Unit

10. Mr. Mike Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the role of the Better Regulation Unit in his Department. [4936]

Dr. David Clark: The Government is committed to ensuring that regulations are simple, helpful and fair for business and the citizen.

The work of the Better Regulation Unit will contribute to my Department's White Paper on "New Government" to be published in the autumn, setting out a unified programme for the renewal of government.

Public Services (Young People)

15. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what initiatives he is taking to consult young people on the use of public services. [4941]

Mr. Kilfoyle: My Department has organised a meeting with school-children from around the country next Monday, when I will be asking these citizens of the future for their views on public services.

Public Appointments (Freemasons)

16. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy that all future applicants for public sector appointments should be asked to indicate if they are members of the Freemasons. [4942]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I see no need to do so as a general rule. The Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice already sets out the seven principles which must be applied to appointments to executive non-departmental public bodies and NHS bodies. All appointments must be governed by the overriding principle of selection based on merit, to ensure that those appointed have the abilities, skills and experience to match the needs of the posts in question.

Quangos

17. Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals he has to improve the accountability of quangos. [4943]

Dr. David Clark: The Government is determined that all public bodies should be held to proper account and the full implementation of the Nolan recommendations, to which we are committed, will make quangos more transparent, accountable and efficient. I will be dealing with these matters in the forthcoming White Paper on Better Government.

27. Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received about changes to the numbers and structures of quangos. [4954]

Dr. Clark: The Government has received no formal representations. However, as was announced to the House on 4 June Official Report, column 192, we propose to undertake a review of quangos with the aim of reducing overall numbers.

Freedom of Information

18. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent discussions he has had with interested groups regarding a freedom of information Bill. [4944]

Dr. Clark: We have recently had useful discussions with the Campaign for Freedom of Information and with the National Consumer Council.

20. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress has been made with regard to a publication date for his proposed White Paper on freedom of information. [4946]

Dr. Clark: Work on the White Paper remains on schedule for publication before the summer recess.

25. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about the time scale for legislation on freedom of information. [4952]

Dr. Clark: We plan to publish a draft Bill for public consultation early in the new year with a view to introducing a Bill as soon as the Parliamentary programme permits.

29. Mr. John Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what consultation process he has set up for the development of freedom of information legislation. [4956]

Dr. Clark: I am keen to ensure full and comprehensive public consultation on this important Bill. I shall shortly be publishing a consultative White Paper setting out the Government's proposals and, in the light of comments received, plan to publish a draft Bill, also for consultation, early in the new year.

Open Government

19. Mr. Rooney: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he has taken to make Government Departments more open. [4945]

Dr. David Clark: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Ellesmere Port and Neston, (Mr. Miller).

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on his policy on open government. [4950]

Dr. Clark: The Government is determined to bring greater transparency and openness to the working of Government and to public services more widely. Our proposed Freedom of Information Act is intended both to ensure people's right to official information and to improve the business of government itself.

Disabled People (Access to Information)

21. Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what consultations he (a) has had and (b) plans to have with organisations of and representing disabled people in relation to the publication of Government information in accessible formats. [4947]

Mr. Kilfoyle: The accessibility of government information for disabled people will be included in the planned consultation with the general public and with disability organisations on what people want from public services.

We welcome the views of all interested groups and individuals on the proposals to be set out in the Freedom of Information White Paper and subsequent draft Bill. The views and proposals of those representing the particular interests and needs of disabled people will, of course, be considered very carefully.

Efficiency and Effectiveness Group

22. Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the role of the efficiency and effectiveness group in his Department. [4948]

Dr. David Clark: The Efficiency and Effectiveness Group comprises Efficiency Unit and the Next Steps Team. It is central to carrying out the Government's programme to provide high quality and efficient public services, at the lowest cost to the taxpayer. The Group supports departments (and their agencies and other public bodies) to improve the management of their business, by maintaining pressure for continuous improvement through the following measures: overseeing the creation and review of Next Steps agencies and monitoring their performance in the annual Next Steps Review; scrutinising departments' efficiency plans; sponsoring efficiency scrutinies, for example the recent scrutiny on prescription fraud, and other special studies. The Efficiency Unit, along with the No. 10 Policy Unit and the Treasury, is fully involved in the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review.

Deregulation

24. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent representations he has received in relation to deregulation. [4951]

Dr. David Clark: I regularly receive representations concerning deregulation and welcome further dialogue from interested parties. I am committed to delivering responsible and responsive regulation, listening to and involving business, particularly small firms, and the citizen in decisions.

New Government

26. Mrs. Humble: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster with whom he intends to consult regarding his Department's New Government programme. [4953]

Dr. David Clark: We intend to consult widely, drawing on views from users of and staff involved in the range of public services, and from small businesses representatives, consumer organisations, academics and other interested individuals and organisations. I would welcome any suggestion my hon. Friend would like to put forward.

Special Advisers

28. Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the role of Special Advisers to Ministers. [4955]

Dr. David Clark: Special Advisers are appointed to provide advice to their Minister in the Development and Presentation of Government policy. They are employed under terms and conditions based on the Model Contract for Special Advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

WALES

Economic Regeneration

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects his review of economic regeneration in Wales to be completed; and if, and in what form, he intends to publish the results. [5161]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend and I intend to publish our proposals for an economic powerhouse for Wales in the White Paper which will issue before the summer recess and certainly well before the referendum. I will also be setting out my strategy for the Welsh economy in the coming months on which I will be consulting widely.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if there will be a requirement in job advertisements for the Welsh Assembly that fluency in Welsh would be essential or desirable. [5299]

Mr. Ron Davies: That will be a matter for the Assembly to decide.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the date of the Welsh Assembly referendum. [6103]

Mr. Davies: The Welsh referendum will follow shortly after the Scottish. Announcements will be made in due course about the precise dates of each referendum.

School Polling Stations

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to avoid the need to close schools for use as polling stations in the forthcoming referendum on devolution. [6073]

Mr. Ron Davies: The organisation of the poll in each local authority area is a matter for the relevant returning officer. Polling places to be used in the referendum are to be the same as those used in council elections, but the returning officer has discretion, if he considers special circumstances exist, to designate some other place for taking the poll. In areas where schools are used for polling, it is therefore open to returning officers, if they consider special circumstances to exist, to designate other places as polling places for the referendum.

Transport Policy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to integrate transport in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6099]

Mr. Ron Davies: I welcome my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister's announcement on 5 June honouring our election manifesto commitment to developing an integrated transport policy. This will, of course, embrace Wales and Welsh Office Ministers and officials will participate fully in drawing-up proposals for implementing the new policy, taking into account the views of a wide range of interested organisations.

We will, in any case, be looking closely at all transport issues in Wales during the course of the next few months, including priorities for the roads programme as part of the strategic review promised in the Welsh election manifesto. I intend to set the strategic review of the roads programme in the broader context of the development of a balanced, integrated transport policy for the Principality. The review will, therefore, consider not only the relative priority of particular routes and schemes within the programme, and the scope for altering those priorities, but wider issues including the need to manage the network more effectively and the scope to promote alternative transport modes where appropriate.

The review will consider afresh all schemes currently in the Welsh roads programme with the exception of the A55 dualling across Anglesey. In that case, I have decided that the strategic importance of the improvement is so great that it must proceed without delay subject, of course, to the successful completion of the legal and statutory procedures.

I will be initiating a process of wide public consultation on the review, and will publish a consultation document shortly. This consultation document will set out the present position, summarise the issues for consideration and suggest possible options for change, and will invite views from the widest possible range of organisations. I hope to announce the conclusions of the review next spring.

Referendum

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if postal votes will be available in the proposed referendum on devolution in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6347]

Mr. Ron Davies: Postal votes will be available in the usual way for those voters who need them for the referendum.

Public Bodies

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been his Department's expenditure in each of the last five years on the boards of non-departmental public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [6323]

Mr. Ron Davies: Details of expenditure are published annually in the Cabinet Office publication, "Public Bodies", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the non-departmental bodies which will be abolished in the event of a Welsh Assembly; what will be the savings to public funds of this process; and if he will make a statement. [6325]

Mr. Davies: Details of our proposals will be included in the White Paper on a Welsh Assembly which we shall be publishing shortly.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the contracts of chairmen and chief executives of Welsh NHS trusts which terminate in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) 1999–2000. [6498]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The appointments of the following chairmen terminate as listed. Details of Chief Executives' contracts are not held centrally but in the NHS generally they have permanent or three year contracts which are rolled forward annually.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Indonesian Military and Police Personnel

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list by name and rank the Indonesian military, police, security and paramilitary police officers in respect of whom visa applications have been made to attend the International Police and Security Expo 97; and if he will identify those which were granted. [5692]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 27 June 1997]: We have not been asked to issue visas specifically for Indonesians attending the International Police and Security Expo 97.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visas have been granted to Indonesian (a) military, (b) security, (c) police, (d) paramilitary and (e) special forces personnel visiting Britain in the last 12 months for which figures are available; for what purpose; and what is the policy of the Government on granting visas to the above categories of personnel. [5693]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 27 June 1997]: The British Embassy in Jakarta issued 29,931 visit visas for the United Kingdom last year. Statistics are not kept for the different categories of applicant and the information requested could therefore only be produced at disproportionate cost. All visa applications are processed in accordance with the criteria contained in the Immigration Rules.

UN (Budget Contributions)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs from what budget the United Kingdom will fund its additional contribution to the UN. [6353]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Negotiations on the level of assessed contributions to be paid by Member States to UN budgets for 1998 and beyond will resume at the UN General Assembly in October. It is therefore too early to predict what change, if any, there might be in the level of the United Kingdom's assessed contribution.

The United Kingdom's assessed contribution to the UN Regular Budget will continue to be met from Vote 2 of this Department's budget.

Security Policy

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the relationship between United Kingdom membership of (a) the WEU and (b) NATO in respect of United Kingdom security policy. [5723]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: NATO is the foundation of our defence and security. The Western European Union (WEU) is developing its capacity to contribute to European security and plays a key role in building the European Security and Defence Identity (ESDI) within the Alliance. It is pursuing its operational development as a means for Europeans to run crisis management operations, including operations using NATO assets and capabilities. The requirement that full members of the WEU are also NATO members, and the role of WEU in the arrangements for ESDI in the Alliance, mean that action taken by the WEU must be consistent with obligations in NATO.

Mr. Peter Lowes

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to answer the letter from the hon. Member for Aldershot, dated 13 May, concerning Mr. Peter Lowes. [6562]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The subject matter of the hon. Member's letter of 13 May was complicated and required wide consultation. A substantive reply has been sent by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, and a copy will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Human Rights

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to accede to those international human rights instruments to which the United Kingdom is not yet party. [6915]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We will review over the next year the United Kingdom's position under various international human rights instruments. This will include the question of accession to Protocols to the European Convention on Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and acceptance of the rights of individual petition under other UN human rights treaties. We shall also examine whether any of the United Kingdom's reservations to human rights treaties can be withdrawn.

UN Register of Conventional Arms

Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Kingdom submitted its 1996 return to the UN register of Conventional Arms; and if he will place a copy of the submission in the Library. [6916]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The UK's return to the UN Register covering calendar year 1996 was submitted to the UN Secretary General on 29 April 1997. A copy of the return has been placed in the Libraries of the House and is available to members of the public on request.

As part of our commitment to increasing transparency in the field of defence exports, we shall work to strengthen the UN Register of Conventional Arms, encouraging greater disclosure of information on arms exports and arms transfers by all countries. We hope that the work of the UN Panel of Experts currently reviewing the operation and development of the Register will contribute to achieving this objective.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Better Regulation

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about better regulation. [7045]

Dr. David Clark: The Government is committed to making government work better. My Department's White Paper on 'New Government', to be published later this year, will set out a unified programme for the renewal of government. Better regulation is an integral part of this renewal. Our aim is to ensure that regulations are simple, helpful and fair for business and the citizen.

It is essential that we involve those who are affected by regulation. We are committed to giving small business and ordinary citizens a greater voice on the Better Regulation Task Force. I have today appointed Christopher Haskins, Chairman of Northern Foods plc, to chair the Task Force. Their terms of reference are to advise the Government on action which improves the effectiveness and credibility of government regulation by ensuring that it is necessary, fair and affordable, and simple to understand and administer, taking account of the needs of small business and ordinary people.

We will find practical measures that will respond to people's needs. For example, I have set up a cross-departmental initiative called 'Access Business' to assist small business. This will draw together regulatory advice and forms into a simpler, more unified service, in particular using modern technology. For the citizen we will look at key groups like the elderly, the young and the voluntary sector and identify how we can make improvements.

I will take the opportunity presented by the EU Presidency next year to promote better quality regulation at the European level. I am planning a centrepiece Better Regulation Presidency event in March looking at improving access to Government for citizens and business, keeping legislation simple and improving consultation. And we are working with the Austrian government to provide a sustained push to improve the quality of EU legislation throughout our consecutive Presidencies.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid (Personal Injury Litigation)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellors Department what was (a) the annual cost of legal aid for personal injury litigation before cost recovery and retention of contributions, (b) the amount of costs recovered, (c) the amount of contributions retained and (d) the net cost after deduction of costs recovered and contributions retained, for (i) all personal injury litigation, (ii) medical negligence cases only and (iii) personal injury cases only, excluding medical negligence, in each of the last four financial years. [5808]

Mr. Hoon: A breakdown of legal aid expenditure and receipts in respect of personal injury litigation in each of the last four years for which information is available, in respect of cases that were closed in each year, was as follows:

£ million

	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
Gross payments
All personal injury litigation	143.5	195.6	238.2	284.7

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) management, (b) teaching and (c) support staff (i) were employed in 1992–93 and (ii) are employed in the current financial year by further education colleges in England and Wales. [5326]

Dr. Howells: Comprehensive information on the number of full and part-time further education staff for academic year 1992–93 is not available. The total "full-time equivalents" of further education lecturers in FE and sixth form colleges, as well as HE institutions, in England for 1992–93 are shown below.

Full-time equivalent lecturers providing FE in FE or HE institutions (including sixth form colleges)

Academic	Number
1992–93	67,700

The figures available for 1994–95 and 1995–96 academic years for full-time equivalent staff in further education (including sixth form) colleges in England are shown below. Management staff are included in "other support" but cannot be identified separately. These figures are based on incomplete data sets: the number of colleges included for each year are noted.

1994–95	Full-time equivalents (FTEs)
Teaching and learning	56,000
Supporting teaching and learning	12,000
Other support	34,000
Total	102,000

Based on data from 374 out of 446 colleges.

1995–96	Full-time equivalents (FTEs)
Teaching and learning	56,000
Supporting teaching and learning	13,000
Other support	37,000
Total	106,000

Based on data from 342 out of 452 colleges.

Youth Service

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are his proposals for the youth service; and if he will make a statement. [6078]

Dr. Howells: The Government is committed to raising the profile of the youth service which it values as an important provider of personal and social education for young people. Details about our proposed legislation to place the youth service on a clearer and more specific statutory basis will be included in the White Paper on Lifelong Learning.

We are taking forward proposals for an audit of youth service provision in local authorities and are also considering how the youth service can contribute to educational policies more generally.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Commission and Lottery Awards

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the awards made to date by (a) the Millennium Commission and (b) the Heritage Lottery Fund in the constituency of Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland. [5559]

Mr. Banks: The Heritage Lottery Fund has made one award of £77,000 to Cleveland county council for the Margrove Heritage Centre. The Millennium Commission has made no awards in the Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland constituency.

McDonald's (Advertising)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will meet representatives of the Independent Television Commission to discuss the implications of the recent High Court ruling on the impact of advertising by McDonald's on children. [5852]

Mr. Fisher: The Commission maintains and enforces a code of advertising standards and practice for broadcasters, which includes detailed guidance on advertising and children, and which is from time to time reviewed to ensure it reflects current best practice. I understand that the Commission has no plans to revise the code in light of the judgment referred to, though it would naturally consider carefully any complaints made to it concerning particular advertisements and their potential impact on children. The Government recognise their special responsibility to protect children from exploitation, but the existing Code allows the ITC scope to act in their defence.

County Record Offices

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of the impact of unitary authorities on the future funding and operation of county record offices and the Victoria County History. [5953]

Mr. Fisher: My Department has issued guidance on the care and maintenance of local authority archives to every local authority affected by local government reorganisation, and monitored closely the effect of reorganisation on archives services, to help ensure that standards are maintained.

I am aware that the Victoria County History project has experienced difficulties due to the reduction or withdrawal of local authority funding in some cases. The National Heritage Act has widened the scope of the Heritage Lottery Fund to include support for the compilation and maintenance of archives. I understand that Victoria County History intends to bid for Lottery funds next year to support its important work.

Digital Broadcasting

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of the availability of suitably qualified candidates from colleges and universities for the new jobs in broadcasting that may be expected from the advent of digital broadcasting. [6147]

Mr. Fisher: The Government are committed to the objective that all new entrants into the industry should have a suitable qualification by 2000. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment and I will be working closely with broadcasters and training providers to ensure that this target is met.

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate he has made of the number of jobs which will be created as a result of the successful bid by British Digital Broadcasting in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Greater Manchester. [6146]

Mr. Fisher: It is not possible at this stage to identify the number or location of new jobs which will be created. Undoubtedly, however, the successful launch of digital television in the UK offers the prospect of a large number of jobs across the country, in broadcasting, production, equipment manufacturing and associated services.

Sport Sponsorship

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate his Department has made of the extent of sponsorship by drink manufacturers of (a) sporting events in the United Kingdom, (b) United Kingdom sportsmen and women competing abroad and (c) arts events and institutions in the United Kingdom in each of the last three years. [6302]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 1 July 1997]: Total reported sponsorship of sport in the UK by alcoholic drink manufacturers was an estimated £23½ million in 1994, £27½ million in 1995, and £22 million in 1996. My Department has made no estimate of the extent of sponsorship by alcoholic drink manufacturers of United Kingdom sportsmen and sportswomen competing abroad or sponsorship by other sorts of drinks manufacturers.

Figures for sponsorship by drink manufacturers of arts events and institutions are unavailable. However, the amount of sponsorship matched by all drinks companies under the National Heritage Arts Sponsorship Scheme was £1,182,277 in 1996–97; £774,375 in 1995–96; and £516,500 in 1994–95.

Museums

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his Department's policy with regard to the funding of university museums; and if he will make a statement. [6317]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 1 July 1997]: My Department is keen to support and enhance the vitality of the cultural sector in this country and museums, including university museums, form a valuable part of that sector. Several university museums were included among those museums recently given designation status. Responsibility for the funding of university museums lies with their parent universities, together with the Higher Education Funding Councils and the appropriate Government Departments.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals he has to co-ordinate policy with the Department for Education and Employment and the Scottish Office with regard to the funding of university museums; and if he will make a statement. [6305]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The Department for Education and Employment, the other education departments and the Department of National Heritage work together closely on policy for funding university museums. Funding for university museums in Scotland and Wales is the responsibility of my right. hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the museums in England and Wales registered under the Museums and Galleries Commission's registration scheme. [6313]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 1 July 1997]: There are about 1,000 museums in England and Wales which are currently registered under the Museums and Galleries Commission's registration scheme. Copies of the list have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the museums in England and Wales (a) owned and (b) managed by universities. [6315]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 1 July 1997]: A list of university museums in England and Wales owned or managed by universities, and registered with the Museums and Galleries Commission, has been placed in the Libraries of the House. The list contains nearly 60 such museums. The Commission are in the process of completing a survey of all university collections in this country.

Digital Terrestrial Television

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who will be responsible for supplying digital terrestrial television signals to those segments of the United Kingdom population what are most expensive to reach. [6356]

Mr. Fisher: The BBC and Independent Television Commission are responsible for television transmission arrangements in the UK. The invitation to apply for the digital multiplex service licences issued by the Independent Television Commission set out the predicted coverage for each of the six digital multiplexes as a percentage of the total UK population. The multiplex service licensees must ensure that the ITC coverage requirements are met, and the BBC is committed to achieving similar targets on the multiplex awarded to it.

The planned transmission coverage of digital terrestrial television does not at this stage extend to 100 per cent. of the UK population because of technical constraints. However, the Government are considering how the delivery of digital services to viewers (through whatever technical means) might be expedited and extended.

Millennium Commission

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the names, designations and salaries of the Members of the Board of the Millennium Commission. [6127]

Mr. Chris Smith: The names of the Millennium Commissioners, who are unpaid, are as follows:

Millennium Commission

Role	Name	Start date of present term	Expiry date of present term

HEALTH

Haemophiliacs

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to promote greater use of recombinant Factor 8 clotting products for haemophiliacs. [5124]

Mr. Boateng: We have no plans to recommend the greater use of recombinant Factor 8. The Department of Health has advised health authorities that they should weigh the claimed benefits of recombinant Factor 8 against the high costs, bearing in mind the good safety record of the plasma-derived product since the introduction of viral inactivation processes in 1985.

We have made clear our policy that treatment decisions should focus on high quality research evidence about clinical effectiveness, safety and long-term patient outcomes.

GPs (Home Visits)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many home visits were made by general practitioners during each of the last three years in the United Kingdom. [5478]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available on a United Kingdom basis. However, sample information is available within the General Household Survey (conducted by the Office for National Statistics), which gives the proportion of National Health Service general practitioner consultations within Great Britain. In the last three years for which information is available—1993, 1994, and 1995—the proportion of NHS GP consultations at patients' homes as a percentage of total NHS GP consultations was 9 per cent., 10 per cent. and 9 per cent. respectively. Copies of the report on the 1995 General Household Survey—entitled "Living in Britain"—are available in the Library.

Adoption

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the reform of adoption law to address (a) the problem of drift for children in care and (b) issues arising from inter-country adoption and the United Kingdom's responsibilities under The Hague convention. [5940]

Mr. Boateng: Preparation has already begun to mount a series of national seminars towards the end of the year which will focus on improving the quality of management within the adoption service; the seminars will address important issues such as delay in placing children and preventing children from drifting within the care system. We are currently considering a number of possible options which will enable the Government to ratify the 1993 Hague Convention and address issues arising from intercountry adoption.

Bed Blocking

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to reduce the incidence of bed blocking in hospitals. [5976]

Mr. Boateng: We shall explore proposals to address the difficulties around hospital discharge procedures and the problems which are caused by ensuing delays. We acknowledge that there are concerns about the current level of delayed discharges in some areas. Responsibility for hospital discharge delays rests with one agency but sometimes delays occur through the local authority or the health authority and sometimes in meeting the particular needs of the individual patient and their family.

Ill Health Costs

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to assess the cost to the economy of a period of serious ill health of men and women (a) in full-time employment and (b) not in paid employment. [6079]

Ms Jowell: No such assessment has been made by the Department of Health. The Health and Safety Executive estimate that the total cost to the economy of work-related ill health was between £2 billion and £2.5 billion in 1990. The next updating of these costs by the Health and Safety Executive will be in 1998. The updating will cover costs for 1995–96, using the necessary data from the Labour Force Survey.

Television Programme Sponsorship

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make representations to the Independent Television Commission urging it to give prominence to public health considerations in its code of programme sponsorship. [5853]

Ms Jowell: The Independent Television Commission's code of programme sponsorship already takes account of health considerations and the Commission keep the code under regular review. For instance, companies are prohibited from sponsorship if their name is known to the public chiefly through their tobacco business, even if they also market other non-tobacco goods and services. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage, whose Department has policy responsibility for broadcasting, has noted the hon. Member's suggestion on public health considerations for programme sponsorship.

Workshop on Sexuality

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the material used in the workshop on sexuality supported by the European Commission, as detained in COM(96)720; and what funds were used to support the project. [6095]

Ms Jowell: We understand that the workshop on sexuality was a project submitted in 1993 to the European Commission by a Spanish non-governmental organisation, and that it received funding in 1994 of 61,301 ECU (£43,830 at current exchange rates). From the information available, the purpose of the project was to train instructors in providing sex education for 13 to 21 years olds with the aim of preventing HIV/AIDS and of enabling young people to discover values to assist them in their personal sexual development. The materials used included three videos about love and sexuality and a guidebook for trainers. We are informed that 56 people were trained under the project in Spain, and 10 in the United Kingdom.

As we have not been able to obtain much information about the project in the time available, I will write to the hon. Member shortly with further details.

Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Brand: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies his Department has undertaken on the outcome of the contracting out of NHS trust non-clinical services to private sector providers; and what assessment he has made of (a) those studies and (b) the experience of contracting out for the PFI programme. [6162]

Mr. Milburn: National Health Service trusts have supplied the NHS Executive with information on the outcome of market tests. In the areas covered by compulsory market testing (cleaning, catering and laundry services) about 30 per cent. of contracts by value have been awarded to commercial contractors. Overall some 86 services have been market tested and about half by value have been awarded to commercial contractors. A review of the operation of the market testing policy is currently being undertaken by Departmental officials. In drawing up our programme for the review of Private Finance Initiative we have taken into account the experience of market testing in the NHS.

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 10 June, Official Report, columns 427–28, if he will make a statement about the PFI in the NHS. [7128]

Mr. Milburn: In my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Fiona Mactaggant) I announced my intention to review the 43 major acute sector Private Finance Initiative (PFI) schemes in the National Health Service. I have today arranged for copies of the full results of the review to be placed in the Library. I have also written to all Members and stakeholders in health PFI, enclosing copies of the results. Fourteen major acute schemes have been selected, representing almost £1.3 billion of new capital investment in NHS hospitals.

The review was undertaken by officials and all schemes were graded according to three criteria: (i) their service need; (ii) status—how far and well negotiations have progressed and (iii) "PFI ability"—how well the scheme fits with the PFI process and hence its likelihood of delivering a successful outcome.

This process was both fair and open. Officials from the Department shared with the trusts the criteria against which the projects were judged and their relative markings. I, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health as far as the schemes in the Northern and Yorkshire region are concerned, examined the gradings and the reasons why officials recommended schemes either be included or excluded. We also received representations from many Members.

The 14 schemes which most successfully met the three criteria will be asked to continue with their PFI proposal, with the objective of reaching an early and acceptable financial close over the next 18 months. A complete table listing all the scores, along with a note explaining the criteria, has been placed in the Library. We have instructed officials to prepare programmes and milestones for every successful scheme. The schemes will be subject to the normal rigorous approval processes and any of these 14 schemes that subsequently fail to deliver to time or price will be cancelled.

Those schemes not selected will be asked to cease any further action on their contract. They should stand down their partners if they have selected one and cancel all tendering procedures.

Any trust or consortium whose scheme has to met the three criteria and which wishes to make representations to the Secretary of State should do so within the next 10 days. Otherwise such trusts should now take steps to stand down their partners or cancel the tendering procedure.

Those schemes not selected will be eligible for consideration as part of a national capital prioritisation exercise by the NHS Executive's Capital Prioritisation

Advisory Group. This group will review major acute schemes for health service need and will recommend those which should go forward either as part of the next tranche of PFI schemes which we plan to announce in spring 1998, or for funding from the public sector capital that is available.

The exercise did not consider the schemes affected by the London review which is due to report in the Autumn. These schemes are also listed in papers deposited in the Library.

The longer term review of the PFI product and process will report its recommendations later this year. This will look to consolidate the improvements in the PFI begun with this prioritisation exercise.

Turner Village Hospital, Colchester

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will ensure that Turner Village mental hospital, Colchester, is retained and upgraded; and if he will make a statement; [6279]

(2) what representations he has received concerning the future of Turner Village mental hospital, Colchester. [6280]

Mr. Boateng: We are not aware of any such representations. Decisions about services for people with learning disabilities are for local determination. We understand that North Essex Health Authority has consulted on and agreed proposals which will provide the patients of Turner Village with a choice over where they are to live including community homes and an existing village community.

CS Gas

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment of the health effects of the CS gas solvent, methyl isobutyl keytone, has been made by the medical officers of his Department since 1990; how many (a) published and (b) unpublished reports have been written by his Department's medical officers since 1990; and how many of these reports are currently unclassified. [6361]

Ms Jowell: Medical officers of the Department have not made any assessment of the CS gas solvent, methyl isobutyl ketone.

General Social Services Council

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which organisations he will be consulting in developing his proposals for a General Social Services Council; [5883]

(2) when he expects to publish his proposals for a General Social Services Council; [5884]

(3) what is his policy in respect of procedures for involving users, carers and the public in a General Social Services Council; [5885]

(4) if he will consult (a) by way of survey and (b) by other means, the opinions of the work force who will come under the General Social Services Council. [5886]

Mr. Boateng: We expect to publish our proposals for a General Social Services Council in a consultation document in autumn 1997. We intend to consult all those with an interest in such a Council including employers, users and carers, staff and the wider public. Our proposals will outline how the essential interest of those who use social services, their carers and the general public will be secured in the arrangements for a Council.

PRIME MINISTER

Minister without Portfolio

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister what additional responsibilities he has given to the Minister without Portfolio since 2 May. [5424]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 June 1997]: I have asked my hon. Friend to take responsibility within Government for the Millennium Experience at Greenwich. My hon. Friend is also now the shareholder for the operating company, Millennium Central Limited, thus ensuring the position of the shareholder is clearly separated from that of my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for National Heritage as Chairman of the Millennium Commission. My right hon. Friend retains overall responsibility for matters relating to the Millennium Celebrations.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those projects for which the Minister without Portfolio has specific responsibility; and if he will make a statement. [6167]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 July 1997]: My right hon. Friend has specific responsibilities in relation to the implementation and presentation of Government policy, and the Millennium Experience at Greenwich.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what factors underlie the allocation of new responsibilities for specific projects to the Minister without Portfolio. [6141]

The Prime Minister [holding reply 1 July 1997]: I invite my hon. Friend, the Minister without Portfolio, to take responsibility for specific projects if I consider him to be the most appropriate person within Government to do so.

Intelligence and Security Committee

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to appoint the member of the Intelligence and Security Committee. [6292]

The Prime Minister: I will be consulting the Leader of the Opposition shortly under the terms of the Intelligence Services Act 1994 and will appoint members to the Committee after that.

Ministers (Transport Costs)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy with regard to securing value for money in respect of transport costs for Ministers attending overseas engagements. [6285]

The Prime Minister: Ministers attending overseas engagements are under a responsibility to ensure that their travel arrangements represent best value for money consistent with propriety.

Policy Reviews

Mr. Luff: To ask the Prime Minister, if he will list (a) the departmental policy reviews established by the Government and (b) the names of those individuals other than civil servants and Ministers assisting those reviews (i) as chairman and (ii) in other capacities. [4002]

The Prime Minister [pursuant to his answer, 26 June 1997, c. 605–607]: The following reviews, which were also initiated before 20 June, should have been included:

A fundamental review of transport policy in Scotland leading to the publication of a White Paper on our long-term strategy for an integrated transport policy.

A review of the Scottish roads programme.

A review of the Crown Prosecution Service.

Chairman: The right hon. Sir Ian Glidewell, retired Lord Justice of Appeal, Sir Geoffrey Dear, retired HM Inspector of Constabulary Mr. Robert McFarland, former senior executive, British Oxygen.

A review of the tax and benefits system.

Chairman: Martin Taylor, Chief Executive Barclays Bank.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the outcome of the United Nations General Assembly Special Session on Sustainable Development. [6460]

The Prime Minister: The Special Session reviewed the progress made on sustainable development since the Rio Earth Summit in 1992. One of the most important problems discussed was the need to take action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, and thus limit the problems caused by climate change. In my address to the General Assembly, I urged other developed countries to recognise their responsibilities in this area, by pointing to the example that the United Kingdom and other European Union countries have already set. Later in the week, President Clinton acknowledged the role of the European Union in focusing the debate on this issue, and gave his personal commitment of significantly reducing greenhouse gas emissions. I expect this to be translated into action at Kyoto. Unfortunately, the agreement at Special Session on climate change did not have the specific commitment to reductions that we had sought. Much hard negotiating work remains to be done, but the UK will continue to make every effort to get developed countries to agree legally binding targets for significant reductions in greenhouse gas emissions at Kyoto in December.

I also emphasised the UK Government's commitment to reversing the decline in Britain's development assistance and improving its quality by refocusing our efforts in eradicating poverty. Although some other developed countries could not go as far as the UK, the meeting stressed the need to increase aid towards the UN target of 0.7 per cent. and pledged to negotiate a satisfactory replenishment of the Global Environment Facility. We cannot expect the poorest countries to take action themselves, if the developed world is not more constructive about its aid programmes.

The continuing threat to the world's forests was a key issue for the Special Session. Although the European Union pressed hard for a Convention on forests, we were unable to secure agreement from other major countries. Nonetheless the establishment of an Intergovernmental Forum on Forests is a good step forward. The Forum will report in 1999 on the possible elements of a Forest Convention, and will also consider finance and trade issues. In addition it will monitor implementation of the Intergovernmental Panel on Forests 1997 report, which contained over a hundred action points. As the United Kingdom's contribution to this effort, I announced that the United Kingdom intended to adopt a new Forest Standard to provide a benchmark for the regeneration of our forests. I also promised an increase in our development assistance for forestry management.

Together with our partners from the European Union, we have secured agreement for a plan of action to provide universal access to clean water and sanitation. One fifth of the world has no access to clean water and one half has no proper sanitation, so a new initiative is urgently needed. A series of meetings will take place to prepare for the 1998 meeting of the Commission on Sustainable Development when there will be negotiations on the plan. A successful outcome of these negotiations will be a key objective for our presidency.

The European Union pressed for international action on sustainable energy management, and was successful in securing commitment to preparatory discussions in advance of the debate on energy in the 2001 session of the Commission on Sustainable Development. There was also agreement on the importance of energy management for both developed and developing countries, and on the need for energy prices to reflect their true environmental costs, as well as a gradual elimination of subsidies that inhibit sustainable development. The Special Session confirmed the importance of promoting integrated transport policies, since transport is the largest end user of energy in developed countries and the fastest growing one in most developing countries.

Under strong pressure from the European Union the Special Session agreed that the possibility of an aviation fuel tax should remain on the international agenda. Studies will continue in international fora, especially the International Civil Aviation Organisation, on the use of economic instruments for the mitigation of the negative impacts of aviation.

Lastly, the European Union ensured that there would be further work at a global level to address the problems facing the world's oceans, especially the depletion of fish stocks.

There were also discussions on the financial implications of the Convention on Desertification. We supported the conclusion that the Convention should help channel existing resources more effectively, but should not create a new and dedicated fund.

In conclusion a number of modest but positive steps were made at the Special Session. Nevertheless much remains to be done, and the UK will continue to use its best endeavours to pursue these issues in the months to come.

The United Kingdom delegation included people representing the broad range of sustainable development interests in the UK, and dependent territories. As a result of our strong commitment and constructive approach, the UK has now established itself as one of the leading players in international negotiations on sustainable development.

I will place a copy of the final text of the document in the Library as soon as it is available.

Single Market

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral statement of 18 June, Official Report, column 314, concerning the outcome of the European Council Meeting in Amsterdam, what further Community legislation is required to complete the single market. [6484]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the Single Market Action Plan agreed at Amsterdam, setting out a programme for improving and completing the single market. A copy of the Plan has been deposited in the Library of the House.

NATO Summit

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the agenda of his visit to Madrid between 8 and 9 July for the NATO summit. [6918]

The Prime Minister: I plan to join the other NATO Heads of Government in Madrid on 8 July. We will discuss the enlargement of NATO and expect to announce that a small number of countries should be invited to begin accession negotiations. I would be content for the number of countries to be set at three. We will also review progress on the development of the European Security and Defence Identity in NATO, following the decision taken by NATO Foreign Ministers at Berlin in 1996; and on the development of a new NATO Command Structure.

On 9 July we will sign with President Kuchma of Ukraine the NATO/Ukraine Charter which will symbolise Ukraine's importance to European security and provide for increased NATO/Ukraine co-operation.

Heads of Government will also discuss greater co-operation with NATO's partner countries in the EURO-Atlantic Partnership Council, including military co-operation through NATO's programme of Partnership for Peace.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Victims

Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the position of victims within the criminal justice system. [5566]

Mr. Straw: The Government are committed to improving the position of victims and those who give evidence to the police and in court. Our election manifesto said: "Victims of crime are too often neglected by the criminal justice system".

Therefore, I am pleased to announce today the following measures which will give victims a greater priority within the criminal justice system:

- an extra £1 million to Victim Support to provide further court-based and local scheme support for victims of crime and for witnesses, and to provide a national telephone helpline for victims:
- an inter-departmental review to look at further ways of assisting vulnerable witnesses—such as victims of rape or of domestic violence—and providing witnesses with greater protection from intimidation;
- an examination of measures to ensure that the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is more responsive to the needs of victims as part of the independent review of the CPS under the chairmanship of Lord Justice Glidewell.

Victim Support

Victim Support receives the Government's full support for the dedicated work it does helping victims of crime. Its 365 local schemes and branches support more than a million victims a year, and there is now a witness support service at all the 77 Crown court centres in England and Wales. Despite this, the previous Government froze the £11.7 million grant to Victim Support and made it clear that no more money would be forthcoming. However, support for victims of crime is a top priority for this Government. I have therefore decided to make an additional £1 million available to Victim Support to re-inforce both its court-based and local scheme support for victims and witnesses. It will also establish a new national telephone helpline to provide an easy source of help and information to victims of crime.

Vulnerable witnesses and witness protection

Many victims and witnesses find the criminal justice process daunting and stressful, particularly those who are vulnerable because of personal circumstances or the nature of certain serious crimes, such as rape. Some witnesses are not always regarded as capable of giving evidence while others are in fear of intimidation. Our manifesto stated that "greater protection will be provided for victims in rape and serious sexual offence trials and for those subject to intimidation, including witnesses". The Government have therefore established an inter-departmental group to undertake a wide-ranging review. It will have the following terms of reference:

- to identify measures at all stages of the criminal justice process to improve the treatment of vulnerable witnesses, including those subject to intimidation;
- to encourage such witnesses to give evidence of crime and enable them to give best evidence in court;
- to consider which witnesses should be classified as vulnerable;
- to identify effective procedures for applying appropriate measures in individual cases; and
- to make costed recommendations.

The group will have regard to the interests of justice, the importance of preventing and detecting crime, the needs of witnesses and cost effectiveness; and take into account the National Standards for Witness Care in England and Wales.

Crown Prosecution Service

Our manifesto also said:

"We will ensure that victims are kept fully informed of the progress of their case, and why charges may have been downgraded or dropped".

My right hon. Friend the Attorney-General has already announced the creation of local Chief Crown Prosecutors for each police force area as part of his reforms to the CPS. The Government believe this will ensure that prosecutors are more sensitive to the needs of victims, particularly on decisions to discontinue or downgrade cases. My right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General has also established an independent review under the chairmanship of Lord Justice Glidewell which will examine how the CPS can be made more aware of the needs of victims and witnesses.

Sex Offenders

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to prevent people with convictions for serious sexual offences involving children and teenagers from being accepted as volunteers to work with young people. [5876]

Mr. Michael: The Sex Offenders Act 1997 requires people convicted of serious sexual offences to register their address and any change of address with the police and we are working on plans to ensure that this information is used effectively, principally for the protection of children and vulnerable adults. In addition, part V of the Police Act 1997 provides a statutory basis for criminal record checks to be carried out on any person applying for a position, paid or as a volunteer, which will involve regular contact with children and young people under the age of 18. We are currently considering how best to implement the provisions of this part of the Act. In addition, a consultation paper was issued in January 1997 setting out options for making it an offence for a convicted sex offender to seek work with or offer services to children. The responses are currently being analysed. It is intended that new vetting arrangements should complement good practice in respect of the recruitment, supervision and management of volunteers set out in the Home Office guidance "Safe from Harm".

Identity Cards

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to introduce ID cards. [6161]

Mr. George Howarth: We have yet to decide whether national identity cards should be introduced in the United Kingdom.

Fire Stations, Wales

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of call-outs that (a) Cefn Forest fire station, (b) Abercarn fire station and (c) Risca fire station in Islwyn received in each year since 1990. [6250]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is not available centrally.

Cookham Wood Secure Training Centre

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for Cookham Wood secure training centre. [6736]

Mr. Straw: The Government are committed to ensuring, as a priority, that courts have appropriate powers to deal with the small group of persistent young offenders who wreak havoc in their communities. Our aim is to provide the courts with a more coherent and flexible set of powers to deal with persistent juvenile offenders than those left by the previous Government.

In the meantime, the Government have inherited a contract signed by the previous Government in March 1997 for a secure training centre at Cookham Wood, Kent, for persistent offenders aged 12 to 14. The contract involves significant monthly payments to the contractor from April 1998 whether the facility is used or not.

To avoid the waste of public money which would be involved in withdrawing form the previous Government's commitment, and to enable the courts to deal with those persistent young offenders who fail to respond to community sentences, I intend to continue with the contract to develop Cookham Wood. This will involve introducing the secure training order provided in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 and taking forward plans to procure four other centres to provide facilities across England and Wales. However, I am determined to ensure that Cookham Wood provides a high standard of education and training and that it helps young offenders to face up to their crimes and address their offending behaviour.

I am commissioning a review of the whole range of secure accommodation for young offenders, and I will be receiving advice on this issue, and on the nature of the custodial penalties available to the courts, from the new Youth Justice task Force. I shall ensure that plans for the four other secure facilities, and the use of Cookham Wood, are sufficiently flexible to be consistent with the outcome of this review.

The Government remain committed to ending prison remands for 15 and 16-year-old boys as quickly as possible and hope that their review of secure accommodation will help in this regard. The original commitment was made in February 1991. Although a building programme of 170 new secure local authority places is nearing completion, the number of 15 and 16-year-old boys held in prison has increased substantially since 1991. This makes implementation of the provisions in the Criminal Justice Act 1991 for court-ordered secure remands, which would end the need for prison remands for juveniles, much more difficult.

Alcohol (Minors)

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to (a) reduce the consumption of alcopops, particularly by those under the age of 18, (b) persuade more retailers to stop stocking alcopops and (c) encourage voluntary changes of behaviour by the advertising and brewing industries in respect of alcopops. [6581]

Mr. George Howarth: As chairman of the Ministerial Group on Alcopops, I have had urgent talks with the drinks industry and other interests about under-age drinking. I expect to make an announcement later this month.

Electoral Register

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will commission a comparative study of the forms of electoral registration used (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) overseas. [6023]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: We have no immediate plans to do so but we will keep the matter under consideration.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the factors underlying non-registration on the electoral roll; and if he will make a statement. [6018]

Mr. Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: Research commissioned by the Home Office after the 1991 Census indicated that a number of groups were less likely to register than others. These included people aged under 30, those living in private rented accommodation and inner city areas, people who changed addresses frequently, and members of ethnic minority communities. We are considering how best to publicise this autumn's canvass for electoral registration to encourage members of such groups to register.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of numbers and percentage of people missing from electoral registers who are entitled to be registered (a) in total and (b) in the categories (i) those living in private rented accommodation, (ii) residents of inner London, (iii) 21 to 24-year-olds, (iv) attainers, (v) ethnic minorities, (vi) new commonwealth citizens, (vii) those who moved in the year before a general election, (viii) homeless people and (ix) disabled people. [6011]

Mr. Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: On (a), I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 2 June, Official Report, columns 90–92. On (b), the most recent material on which to base estimates for most of the categories listed is the study carried out after the last census by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys on behalf of the Home Office and the Scottish Home and Health Department, entitled "Electoral registration in 1991". No information is available on homeless or disabled people.

General Election

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the turnout at the last general election as a percentage of those able to vote. [6009]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The turnout at the last general election has been reported in the media as around 71 per cent. Official figures provided by acting returning officers will be published in due course, together with information on election expenses.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the electoral participation rates of (a) those living in private rented accommodation, (b) residents of inner London, (c) 21 to 24-year-olds, (d) attainers, (e) ethnic minorities, (f) new commonwealth citizens, (g) those who moved in the year before a general election, (h) homeless people and (i) disabled people. [6012]

Mr. Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: No estimates have been made of the extent to which members of any of these groups take part in the electoral process. 521,083 attainers were included in the 1997 Electoral Register but information on the other categories listed in the question is not required by the electoral registration officers.

Deportation

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he will take to ensure that (a) illegal immigrants and (b) overstayers in the United Kingdom who have children born and raised in the United Kingdom are not separated from their families by being deported. [5464]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The existence of children is always taken into account when considering whether a person should be deported or removed as an illegal entrant. Where, in the light of all the circumstances of the case, it is decided to proceed with deportation or removal, it is our practice to offer to meet the costs of departure for any dependants who wish to accompany the person abroad.

Abdul Onibiyo

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to allow Abdul Onibiyo to re-enter the United Kingdom. [5465]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is open to any person to apply for an entry clearance for the purpose of seeking entry to the United Kingdom and a decision to refuse such a request, other than as a visitor, attracts a right of appeal to the independent Immigration Appeals Authority. The details of applications from individuals are normally treated in confidence unless the applicant initiates or consents to their disclosure.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the time scale for the present review of detention of asylum seekers and immigration detainees. [5467]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The review is being conducted internally in the Home Office. We expect the results to be available by the autumn.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Railings (World War II)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will reimburse local authorities in England and Wales for the loss of railings removed form council land during world war II. [5461]

Mr. Raynsford: We have no plans to make such reimbursements.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions through what mechanism regional development agencies will take into account environmental considerations. [5836]

Angela Eagle: On 11 June the Government launched a wide ranging consultation on our proposals for regional development agencies in England. As we take forward these proposals in the light of the consultation, we will want to ensure that regional development agencies take proper account of environmental considerations.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will introduce measures to assist councils to obtain the matched funding necessary to access ERDF grants. [6160]

Angela Eagle: European Structural Funds, including the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF), make an important contribution to economic development in the regions. The issues behind matched funding requirements for ERDF and the need for synergy between European and domestic regeneration programmes are being considered in the comprehensive review of regeneration expenditure in England now underway. However, as a net contributor to the EU budget, the UK also has an interest in ensuring that the best value for money is obtained from Structural Funds' expenditure. Requiring applicants to provide some level of matching funding gives them a strong incentive to produce projects which do represent good value for money and to make a real choice between competing priorities.

Recycling

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the impact of (i) recycling and (ii) burning secondary fuels; and if he will make a statement. [6245]

Angela Eagle: My Department has not commissioned any research on these subjects. However, both the recovery of solvent waste to make fuel and the burning of secondary liquid fuels (SLF) are regulated by the Environment Agency under the Integrated Pollution Control (IPC) regime. Each application for authorisation to burn SLF requires assessment of the likely environmental impacts. Details of these assessments must be placed in public registers in the relevant locality.

In addition, on 14 June, the Agency published the results of an extensive air monitoring study in the Clitheroe area of Lancashire. This study comprised emissions monitoring from industrial sites including Castle Cement's Ribblesdale cement works—which burns blended waste solvents together with traditional fuels—together with ambient air quality testing. The full results of the study have been forwarded to the Department of Health for evaluation.

The Environment Agency's response of 16 June to the House Environment Committee's report on the Environmental Impacts of Cement Manufacture also commits it to carry out further research and to publish guidance in respect of appropriate disposal routes for waste solvents.

Affordable Housing

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to ensure that affordable housing continues to be available following transfers of council housing stock. [6163]

Mr. Raynsford: Local authority housing will be transferred to registered social landlords only on the basis that it will remain in the social rented sector with affordable rents. Following transfer the Housing Corporation proposes to monitor the rents charged by the new landlord to ensure they remain affordable.

Area Cost Adjustment

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to set up a commission to review the area cost adjustment; what time scale he proposes; and if he will make a statement. [6154]

Mr. Raynsford: The work of the review of the area cost adjustment during 1996 provided an examination of the issues, though not one which the local authority associations wanted implemented for 1997–98 SSAs. The Department has recently commissioned research to examine some of the concerns of local government about the review's proposals. It will report this month and we shall discuss with local government both the findings and the way forward on the area cost adjustment.

English Partnerships

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much grant has been given to English Partnerships in each year since 1993; and if he will make a statement. [5720]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 2 July 1997]: The grant given to English Partnerships in each year since 1993 is as follows:

£ million

Year	Grant-in-aid	Derelict Land Grant[1]
1993–94	21.728	Nil
1994–95	118.306	72.079
1995–96	155.721	54.391
1996–97	[2]190.965	13.002

[1] English Partnerships acts as the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions' agent for making Local Authority Derelict Land Grant payments on projects approved before 1 April 1994. The number of projects remaining to be completed is declining quickly.

[2] Excludes funding for the Greenwich project.

Mobile Homes

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to amend the Mobile Homes Act 1983 in respect of the entitlement of the owners of the land on which mobile homes are sited to deduct 10 per cent. of the sale price of a home. [6227]

Mr. Raynsford: This is one of a number of issues relating to mobile homes which my Department is currently reviewing at the instigation of the all party working group on mobile homes. At this stage, it is too early to say what will be the outcome of that review.

Public Buildings (Access)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions by what means a disabled person will be able to challenge an approving body's assessment of a public building designated as providing reasonable access. [5845]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 2 July 1997]: Part M of schedule 1 to the Building Regulations 1991, which is applicable to most new building work other than dwellings, requires that reasonable provision shall be made for access and facilities for disabled people. Building work to which the regulations apply will be subject to building control by either the local authority or an approved inspector. With regard to these approving bodies, the Building Act 1984 provides for action to be taken against an approved inspector who recklessly gives a final certificate. Section 113 of the Act allows proceedings in respect of an offence under the Act to be taken by a party aggrieved. Whilst there is no parallel provision to challenge local authorities within the Building Act, they are subject to action for judicial review.

There is no requirement for public buildings to be assessed by an approving body under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the relationship between Part M of the Building Regulations 1991 and proposals contained in the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [5846]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 2 July 1997]: Part M of the Building Regulations applies only to the control of new building work. The DDA places duties on employers and service providers to make adjustments to existing premises which are reasonable in all the circumstances of the case. There is no requirement for such adjustments to comply with Part M.

Under the Disability Discrimination (Employment) Regulations 1996 employers cannot be required to alter any physical characteristic which satisfied the requirements of Part M of the Building Regulations at the time building works were carried out, and which continues to meet those requirements. This protects employers against being required to meet differing requirements in respect of the same physical feature under different regulations. Similar protection for service providers will be considered when regulations for implementing that part of the Act are prepared.

Building Regulations

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library a copy of the completed study carried out by his Department and the Housebuilders Federation into the costings of extending Part M of the Building Regulations to include new residential dwellings. [5848]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 2 July 1997]: This study had not yet started. Before deciding whether or not to let this I want to see the results of some work done jointly by the Joseph Rowntree Foundation and the House Builders Federation. If the study does go ahead, it should provide additional information for the compliance cost assessment which will be prepared to accompany our proposals to amend Part M of the Building Regulations. The finalised compliance cost assessment will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament at the time any amending regulations are laid.

Watercraft

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to restrict the use of personal watercraft (a) along Britain's beaches and (b) on inland waters. [6321]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 2 July 1997]: Section 76 of the Public Health Act 1961 provides for local authorities to make byelaws to regulate seaside pleasure boats for the prevention of danger, obstruction or annoyance to persons bathing in the sea or using the seashore. It is likely that personal watercraft can be regulated as pleasure boats under this Act, although a definitive interpretation is a matter for the courts.

My Department is leading an inter-departmental working party which is undertaking a review of byelaw powers for the coast. A discussion document issued in December 1996 identified coastal recreation management as a major issue and the many responses to this document are being analysed. The working party will meet again before the end of the year to consider this analysis and agree an appropriate way forward.

Local authorities, water companies and some navigation authorities have powers to regulate the use of inland waters to ensure their safe use and enjoyment. There are no plans to amend the powers.

Planning Appeals (Fast Food Restaurants)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the planning appeal decisions by his Department in the last three years where his inspectors have upheld a planning authority's decision to refuse permission for drive-through, fast food restaurants; and what planning reasons were upheld in each case. [6052]

Mr. Raynsford: The provision of information on planning appeals is the responsibility of the Planning Inspectorate. I have asked the Inspectorate's Chief Executive, Mr. Chris Shepley, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Shepley to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 3 July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about appeal decisions for drive-through, fast-food restaurants.

I enclose details of 9 planning appeals for such developments which have been dismissed, i.e. the decision of the local authority upheld (except in one case which the local authority failed to determine), since 1 April 1994. I believe this list to be exhaustive but I cannot be certain, especially when such uses may have been combined with others. The details include the issues considered to be relevant to the inspector's decision.

I am arranging for copies of the inspector's decision letters to be sent to you. From these you will be able to see whether the inspector agreed or disagreed with any reasons for refusal by the local authority.

Decision issue 1	Traffic: highway safety, congestion, access

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has evaluated on the effect on the environment of pressurised gases in training shoes. [6346]

Mr. Meacher: Sulphur hexaflouride, a powerful greenhouse gas, is used as a cushioning agent in some training shoes.

My Department recently published information showing that the major man-made sources of sulphur hexafluoride in the United Kingdom contribute just 0.1 per cent. to the current global warming from all national greenhouse gas emissions. Any additional contribution due to emissions of sulphur hexafluoride from the disposal of training shoes is likely to be very small, but this source will be evaluated in more detail in the near future.

Pressurised Drink Containers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evaluation has been undertaken by his Department of the effects of HFC coolants in pressurised drink containers. [6343]

Mr. Meacher: Last month's meeting of the EU Environment Council noted with concern reports about the development of self-chilling drinks cans using certain substances which have a high global warming potential, including HFC—134a which has a global warming potential 1,300 times greater than carbon dioxide. The Council invited the European Commission to investigate this situation and its possible implications for global warming and to bring forward proposals for appropriate action.

My Department has estimated that if self-chilling drink cans using HFC—134a captured 10 per cent. of the UK market by 2000, they would produce emissions equivalent to around 43.6 million tonnes of carbon dioxide: equivalent to over half the projected reduction in UK greenhouse gas emissions by 2000.

Arctic Warming

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the global effects of Arctic warming on world temperature. [6344]

Mr. Meacher: Global surface temperature records are maintained by the Hadley Centre, on behalf of the Government. They take account of the effects of Arctic warming when calculating world temperatures by including long-term observations from nearly 60 land-based monitoring stations in the Arctic in their records. Additional ship-borne measurements from the Arctic are also incorporated.

Observed temperature trends vary significantly between different regions of the world, but the general trend in Arctic surface temperatures over the past century is similar to that for the global average. In particular, there has been a period of rapid warming in recent decades.

Local Government Pension Scheme

Mr. Tony Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to issue new regulations to govern the local government pension scheme in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6495]

Ms Armstrong: I have placed in the Library of the House today new regulations for the local government pension scheme (the LGPS) to apply in both England and Wales with effect from 1 April 1998. They provide less central control of pension arrangements, increase the scope of local decision-taking and offer improved flexibility in pension provision.

The Local Government Pension Scheme Regulations 1997 are the product of careful preparation, consultation and discussion with many interested parties. They provide a modernised legal framework and give local government employers greater scope to manage pension scheme benefits. They offer new pension flexibility to both employers and employees while continuing to provide secure, statutory-based pensions for all scheme members and pensioners. Employers will be able to offer members a shared-cost additional voluntary contributions arrangement to improve their pensions. Improved death benefits and spouses pensions have been added to the scheme's benefit package and new options have been added to allow employers and employees greater scope in the provision of retirement benefits, including new criteria to decide when pension benefits may be paid early. New standardised employees' contribution rates, to apply from 1 April 1998, are also included in the package.

The improved regulations ensure that the scheme provides the right qualities and benefits to meet the pension needs of local government employees and pensioners into the next century. The new regulations create a more accountable administrative and benefit framework for local authority employers who are responsible for the scheme's day to day management. They also provide a basis for considering with all the interested parties further scheme developments.

To allow scheme managers and other interested parties sufficient time to adapt their existing policy and administrative procedures to the new arrangements, the regulations come into force on 1 April 1998. My Department's Local Government Pensions Unit will continue to work closely with the interested parties to explain the purpose and operation of the regulations and to monitor their effectiveness. The unit is producing guidance material for scheme members to explain the new provisions and assisting the United Kingdom Steering Committee on Local Government Pensions in the production of explanatory material for local authority employers and other LGPS users.

New regulations governing transitional arrangements to protect the benefit rights for existing scheme members and draft proposals for the management and investment of local authority pension funds will be issued shortly.

Home Insulation Grants

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to review the (a) administration of and (b) expenditure on home insulation grants; how much his Department has given in home insulation grants in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [6324]

Angela Eagle: We have no plans to review the administration of the home energy efficiency scheme (HEES), which is carried out by Eaga Ltd. of Newcastle upon Tyne, and which is monitored by my Department. Expenditure on HEES is considered, along with that for all the Department's programmes, as part of discussions on public expenditure.

Expenditure on HEES grants over the last four years is as shown, for Great Britain as a whole and for Wales. The figures for the current year are estimates.

£ million

Year	Great Britain	Wales
1993–94	38.3	1.8
1994–95	77.0	3.7
1995–96	99.7	5.2
1996–97	68.2	3.4
1997–98 (estimated)	69.0	3.8

Major changes to HEES, which were made by the previous administration, came into force on 1 July. I shall take an early opportunity to review the operation of the scheme in order to check that it is meeting the needs of customers.

European Funds

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the Government are to implement the revised arrangements for administering the European Regional Development Fund and the European Social Fund in England announced by the previous Administration. [6917]

Mr. Caborn: I have reviewed the proposed new arrangements, which are based on action plans, in the light of representations made to me. I recently met Commissioner Wulf-Mathies to hear the Commission's views.

The Government's view is that the action plan approach provides a real opportunity to improve the administration of the structural funds in England. Action plans will allow partnerships to bring together individual projects in a way which reflects regional priorities, tackles issues in a coordinated way and streamlines bureaucracy. However, we recognise that circumstances vary across the country and between regions and we do not wish to impose a uniform system. We have decided, therefore, that it will be for each programme monitoring committee to decide to what extent it wishes to adopt the new action plan approach.

A concern of local partners is that resources should be available to assist with management and administration costs. The Commission has agreed that technical assistance funds could, in principle, be available for partnerships where it was clear that they were taking on an additional role which added to the quality and effectiveness of implementation.

I am today writing to the chairmen of the programme monitoring committees to let them know of the Government's decision and to encourage them to take advantage of the potential offered by the new action plan arrangements.

Channel Tunnel

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the length of time before (a) the loss of a door and (b) the collision between another train and the door, referred to in paragraph 75 of the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority Report 1995–96, were reported; and what factors underlay the length of time taken. [5873]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Channel Tunnel Safety Authority Report for 1995–96, paragraph 66, says that arrangements for formal reporting by Eurotunnel of incidents and accidents were concluded during the year covered by the report. These arrangements cover the detailed circumstances where Eurotunnel is required to make immediate reports, reports within 72 hours or regular daily, monthly, half yearly and annual reports.

The incident involving the loss of the emergency door from a tourist shuttle on 28 April 1995 occurred before the formal reporting arrangements were in place. The incident was reported in Eurotunnel's daily report received on the day following the incident and a detailed report was received from Eurotunnel on 2 May 1995.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to limit the use of mobile phones in cars. [6226]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Failure to have proper control of a vehicle is already an offence and the police can and do successfully prosecute driving offences that arise from the use of mobile phones while driving. My noble Friend Baroness Hayman will be meeting representatives of the police this month to consider whether additional measures are required. These are likely to include strengthening the advice in the Highway Code and good practice guidelines for drivers and for employers. Discussions are also being held with the mobile phone industry on how best to publicise the potential dangers of this practice.

Mixed Oxide Fuel

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what forms mixed oxide fuel is transported by (a) road, (b) air and (c) sea. [5460]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Mixed oxide fuel (MOX) is normally transported by all modes in the form of fuel rods, consisting of ceramic pellets encased in metallic sheaths, or as finished fuel elements, consisting of a bundle of such rods in a supporting structure. MOX fuel is carried in packages approved by this Department.

Roads Programme Review

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans the Government have to provide funding for alternative measures to address the environmental and transport problems which originally gave rise to road schemes dropped following the roads programme review; what the priorities will be for transport expenditure in that respect; and if he will make a statement. [5962]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are currently taking forward our review of the roads programme. No decisions have yet been taken on specific schemes. The review will be very closely co-ordinated with the work on an integrated transport policy and the comprehensive spending review. Future funding of transport will be a major consideration of this work.

Traffic Accidents (Alcohol)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people (a) who died in road traffic accidents were found to have been driving with excess blood alcohol levels and (b) tested positive for driving with excess alcohol in respect of fatal road traffic accidents in England and Wales in each of the last three years. [5966]

Ms Glenda Jackson: (a) Rounded estimates of drivers or riders of motor vehicles killed in road accidents in Great Britain with illegal blood alcohol levels are shown in the following table. Estimates for England and Wales are not available separately.

1996 320 (provisional).

	Great Britain	England and Wales
1994	123	115
1995	128	119
1996	117	111

Traffic Enforcement Officers (Powers)

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will remove the limitations on the powers of traffic enforcement officers to seize driver and vehicle records. [6243]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government accept that there is scope for clarifying the powers of enforcement officers to inspect and remove tachograph charts as well as to search for other evidence and will promote amending legislation when a suitable opportunity arises.

Driving Hours

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that United Kingdom drivers are immediately prohibited from driving when they are found to have exceeded permitted driving hours. [6242]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Where the driver of a UK registered vehicle is found to have exceeded permitted driving hours, or taken inadequate rest, he or she would normally be advised to take the rest or face the prospect that any refusal to do so would be reported to the court in any subsequent prosecution, or cause possible further charges to be brought. Although there is no evidence that this procedure is inadequate, the Government accept that there is a case for a power to prohibit the drivers of UK registered vehicles and will promote amending legislation when a suitable opportunity arises.

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that United Kingdom domestic drivers' hours regulations are as stringent as those obtaining in the European Union. [6251]

Ms Jackson: The United Kingdom legislation on drivers' hours pre-dated the European Union rules and now applies only to certain types of vehicle operation which are exempt from European Union rules. We shall be considering the practical and legal implications of bringing some or all of those types of operation within the European Union rules. Such a change would require primary legislation and we would consult operators and their employees before making it.

Liz Blackman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the (a) United Kingdom and (b) EU regulations governing HGV drivers' hours; and if he will make a statement on areas of disparity between (a) and (b). [6249]

Ms Jackson: The United Kingdom regulations on drivers hours are contained in part VI of the Transport Act 1968 as amended. The European Union regulations are contained in Council Regulation (EEC) 3820/85. The main differences between the UK and EU rules for goods vehicle drivers are:

	UK rules	EU rules
Continuous driving (max)	No limit	4½ hours (after which a break of 45 minutes must be taken)
Daily driving (max)	10 hours	9 hours (10 hours twice a week)
Fortnightly driving	No limit	90 hours
Daily rest (min)	None but there is a daily duty limit of 11 hours	11 hours (reducible to 9 hours 3 times a week)
Weekly rest (min)	None	45 hours (after 6 days)

Dartford Crossing (Toll)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will meet the Dartford Crossing operators to discuss the advantages of avoiding an increase in the toll being triggered under the Dartford-Thurrock Crossing Act 1988. [6288]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have no immediate plans to discuss with the operators of the Dartford Crossing changes to their current entitlement to toll increases in line with the RPI.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects tolling to end on the Dartford Crossing. [6282]

Ms Jackson: The current legislation requires tolling to end when the concessionaire has achieved its financial objectives and a fund for future maintenance has been accumulated. On current projections that point would be reached in 2001.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was (a) the total received in tolls on the Dartford Crossing and (b) the number of vehicles using the crossing in each year since 1988. [6284]

Ms Jackson: The information is as follows:

Year to	Vehicles (000)	Revenue (£000)
2 months to 30 September 1988	5,252	4,330
30 September 1989	28,735	26,642
30 September 1990	30,386	28,230
30 September 1991	29,361	29,952
30 September 1992	34,798	35,966
30 September 1993	37,385	40,952
30 September 1994	39,947	44,849
30 September 1995	42,557	48,320
30 September 1996	44,364	51,749

M25 Widening

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Regional Director for the Government Office for the South East will reply to the letter of 21 April from Mr. Chris Fisher on behalf of FLAME relating to air quality within the vicinity of the proposed widening of the M25 in Surrey. [6341]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The Government Office for the South East acknowledged Mr. Fisher's letter on 23 April, explaining that the letter had been forwarded to the Highways Agency as the agency responsible for this scheme, but that it would not be possible to respond before the general election.

The scheme in question now falls within the roads review announced by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of Transport, on 19 June 1997 and is one of those that are subject to the accelerated review procedure. The outcome of the accelerated review will be known by the end of July and the Highways Agency will respond once this is announced.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will refer the representations he has received from FLAME to those bodies charged with assessing the proposed widening of the M25 under the accelerated highways review. [6338]

Ms Jackson [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The proposed widening of the M25 between junctions 12 to 15 has been included in the accelerated review of urgent schemes which is currently taking place. In the course of that review, account will be taken of views that have been expressed about the schemes under consideration.

Aircraft Noise, Heathrow

Mr. Tony Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on aircraft noise monitoring on the Heathrow flight paths. [6420]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Noise from aircraft taking off from Heathrow has been monitored successively by Government Departments, the British Airports Authority, and by Heathrow Airport Ltd. (HAL) on behalf of the Government.

The Government also undertake annual surveys of aircraft noise around Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports, which are published in the form of noise contours for the 16-hour day. The most recent available are for 1994.

Special noise monitoring exercises are also carried out from time to time to collect data on particular aspects of airport operations.

DEFENCE

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the policy baseline for the Strategic Defence Review will be completed; and if it will be published. [5568]

Dr. Reid: The Strategic Defence Review is foreign policy led. Its first stage will reassess Britain's essential security interests and defence needs in the changing international environment. This work is expected to be completed during the Summer and will provide the policy baseline for the Review. We shall consider then whether anything should be published in advance of the completion of the Review.

Trident

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to order Trident missiles before the Strategic Defence Review is concluded. [5608]

Mr. Spellar: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence told the House on 16 June, (Official Report, Columns 9 and 10), procurement business will proceed as normally as possible during the Strategic Defence Review. Where procurement decisions on major equipment programmes are required before the Review is concluded, and this will include the seven Trident missiles planned to be ordered in US Fiscal Year 1998, they will be considered on their individual merits and in relation to progress with the Review.

Gulf War Veterans

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, when he last met representatives from the Gulf War Veterans Association to discuss Gulf War Syndrome. [2054]

Dr. Reid [pursuant to his answer, 16 June 1997, c. 76]: I regret that there was an erroneous reference to chemical warfare which should have been to biological warfare. For convenience the full corrected answer should have been as follows: As part of our commitment to listening to their concerns, the Secretary of State for Defence and I met veterans' representatives, including members of the Gulf Veterans Association, on 29 May. I was encouraged by the welcome extended by veterans to the new measures I announced last month, including new research on the effects of vaccines, additional resources for the medical assessment programme and a full and open explanation of the scientific basis in which our troops were protected against biological warfare in the Gulf.

Logistic Information Systems Agency

Mr. Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the key targets for the Logistic Information Systems Agency for 1997–98. [7060]

Dr. Reid: The Chief Executive of the Logistic Information Systems Agency has been set the following key targets for 1997–98.

To deliver the agreed levels of service whilst achieving a 2.5 per cent. cut in unit costs for LISA output in FY 1997–98.

To achieve a 10 per cent. improvement in delivery performance to customers' requirements.

To secure the benefits of the Partnership at 10 per cent. above contractual commitment.

To achieve Investors in People accreditation by April 1998.

To improve LISA recruitment levels such that 95 per cent. of funded posts are filled with appropriately qualified personnel.

Gordon Foxley

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about negotiations with the companies involved in the payment of commissions to Gordon Foxley relating to defence companies. [7090]

Mr. Spellar: Following the settlement reached with my Department in June 1996, under which Raufoss AS of Norway paid an agreed sum in redress, the company became eligible from that time to be considered for Ministry of Defence orders, but normal commercial relations were not to be resumed for some months while the operation of the agreement was monitored. I am pleased to report that the company has continued to co-operate fully with my Department since that date, including provision of full access to their relevant accounting records, and has satisfied my Department in respect of its management arrangements and approach to future contracts. We have therefore decided to resume normal commercial relations with the company.

Discussions are continuing with the other companies involved in the Foxley case, against whom proceedings are still in train.

Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the key targets for the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency for 1997–98. [7091]

Dr. Reid: The Chief Executive of the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency has been set the following key targets for 1997–98.

1. Under Competing for Quality, to expose £2 million of Agency business to competition.
2. Under the Private Finance Initiative, to pursue the automation of Forces Post Office counters world-wide with Post Office Counters Ltd., the Benefits Agency and Industry by March 2001.
3. To complete the implementation of the Triennial Review by 31 March 1998.
4. To identify the ratio of overheads to outputs (1996–97) and establish savings targets (1997–98) and achieve targets by 31 March 1999.
5. To rationalise the technical funding and responsibility for Postal and Courier Service Units across MOD Top Level Budgets following the Triennial Review.
6. To benchmark the unit costs of output over a 3 year period ending 31 March 1999.

TREASURY

Domestic Fuel (VAT)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the impact on the index by which the state retirement pension is uprated of a reduction in VAT on domestic fuel to 5 per cent.; [5999]

(2) if he will estimate what the effects on the retirement pension would have been at the last uprating if VAT on domestic fuel and power had been reduced to 5 per cent. in September 1996. [6000]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 30 June 1997]: The state retirement pension is uprated in April of each year by the annual Retail Prices Index (RPI) inflation rate for the preceding September. The effect of reducing VAT on domestic fuel from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent. would be to reduce RPI inflation.

Building Society Conversions

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce a moratorium on further building society conversions. [6225]

Mrs. Liddell: No.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of the recommendations contained in chapter 10 of the report by Senators Kerry and Brown on the closure of BCCI, he has (a) implemented and (b) rejected. [6476]

Mrs. Liddell: The recommendations to the Government and the Bank of England in the report of the Bingham Inquiry into the supervision of BCCI have all been implemented.

Banking Ombudsman

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to regulate the Banking Ombudsman by statute. [6633]

Mrs. Liddell: There are no plans at present.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases were dealt with by the Banking Ombudsman each year, over the past five years; and what percentage each year were found in favour of the claimant. [6632]

Mrs. Liddell: This information is provided in the Annual Reports of the Banking Ombudsman Scheme, copies of which are in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sheep Scab Order 1997

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the Sheep Scab Order 1997 to come into force; and if he will make a statement. [3804]

Mr. Rooker: The Sheep Scab Order 1997 was made on 19 March 1997 under the previous Government and came into force on 1 July 1997. The order is designed to support the majority within the sheep industry who take their welfare responsibilities seriously and treat their animals against sheep scab.

It is intended to enable local authorities to order the treatment of sheep which are visibly affected with sheep scab. Local authorities will also be able to assist farmers deal with confirmed sheep scab on common land by ordering the clearance of the commons and requiring that sheep are treated for sheep scab before they are permitted to return. We shall be monitoring the operation of the order against its objectives.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each person advising or assisting his Department who has (a) membership of and (b) involvement in (i) the European Round Table of industrialists, (ii) the European Centre for Infrastructure Studies, (iii) the Competitiveness Advisory Group, (iv) Transatlantic Business Dialogue, (v) the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe, (vi) Union of Industrial and Employers Confederations of Europe, (vii) Europe Bio and (viii) the World Business Council for Sustainable Development. [5307]

Mr. Morley: Membership of the European Round Table of industrialists, the Competitiveness Advisory Group and the Transatlantic Business Dialogue is on a personal basis. We have no central record of whether each person advising or assisting the Minister is a member of, or involved in, these groups.

Membership of the European Centre for Infrastructure Studies, the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe, the Union of Industrial and Employers Confederations of Europe, Europa Bio and the World Business Council for Sustainable Development is on a corporate basis. Representatives from companies and organisations involved with these groups may advise this Ministry from time to time.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the special advisers in his Department, the Minister to whom each is responsible, the subjects on which they advise and the number of advisers in his Department in the year up to 1 May. [5346]

Mr. Morley: This Department has two special advisers who are employed under the terms and conditions based on the model contract for special advisers, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Ms Cathy McGlynn and Mr. Tim Walker advise my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in accordance with Schedule 1 (Part 1) of the model contract. Their subjects are:

Cathy McGlynn	Tim Walker
Fisheries	Food safety and standards
Countryside matters	Meat hygiene
Forestry	Animal health (including BSE)
Agricultural policy and the CAP	Pesticide safety
Production and trade in agricultural commodities	Veterinary medicines
External trade	Plant health
Food and Drinks Industry	Research
Competition issues	Animal welfare
Export promotion	Flood defence

During the year up to 1 May 1997, this department employed one special adviser. His employment ended on 31 March 1997.

Sewage Outfall, Falmouth

Ms Atherton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the likely impact of South West Water's plans for a sewage outfall in Carrick Roads, Falmouth, on the quality of (a) oysters and (b) other shellfish. [5476]

Mr. Morley: The Department has made a partial assessment of the impact of the plans for a sewage outfall and has asked for further information to allow this assessment to be completed.

Animal Slaughter

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) pigs, (b) cattle, (c) sheep, (d) broiler chickens and (e) turkeys were slaughtered in (i) the last available 12 months period and (ii) the previous 12 months period; and if he will make a statement. [6064]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is available from the United Kingdom Slaughter Statistics notice and the Poultry and Poultrymeat Statistics notice, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Minestone Tipping (Northumberland)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the licensing of minestone tipping in the sea of Lynemouth, Northumberland. [6333]

Mr. Morley: The deposit of material anywhere below the mean high water mark requires a licence under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. Licences for the disposal of minestone as waste on to beaches and into the sea have not been issued since 1995.

The deposit of minestone has been authorised since 1995 for the purpose of coast protection at Lynemouth, Northumberland. The licensee, R. J. B. Mining, has recently submitted a report on the agreed programme of monitoring on the environmental effects of the use of this material which is at present under consideration by the Department.

Green Pound

Mr. Green: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to compensate farmers for the recent revaluations of the green pound. [6158]

Mr. Rooker: Payment of the aid available, as agreed by the March Agriculture Council, would have significant implications for UK public expenditure. We are considering carefully the case made by interested parties for payment.

Beef Assurance Scheme

Mr. Green: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will simplify the requirements of the Beef Assurance Scheme. [6152]

Mr. Rooker: The Beef Assurance Scheme rules are strict in order to command the confidence of consumers. They were written in consultation with the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC) and minimise any risk of BSE occurring in a scheme herd. The scheme rules are kept under review, but the Government have no present plans to amend them.

Cohesion Cod

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the definition of the term cohesion cod in EU documentation. [6150]

Mr. Morley: This term is not defined in EU legislation. However it is commonly understood to refer to a quota to fish cod in Norwegian waters north of 62°N, granted to the EU by Norway as part of the European Economic Area Agreement, which is allocated among those Member States eligible for cohesion funds: Greece, Ireland, Portugal and Spain.

Sand Eels

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans he has to control industrial fishing for sand eels off the British East Coast; and if he will make a statement; [6264]

(2) what representations he has made to his European colleagues concerning measures to control industrial fishing for sand eels in the North Sea; and if he will make a statement; [6265]

(3) if he will ban the industrial fishing for sand eels in the Wee Bankie area; [6266]

(4) if he will make a statement on the measures being taken to implement section 9.2 of the Statement of Conclusions of the March 1997 Intermediate Ministerial Meeting of the North Sea Conference. [6267]

Mr. Morley: The Government believe that all industrial fisheries should be subject to the same requirement as other fisheries to operate on a sustainable basis. We remain concerned that the present restrictions on industrial fisheries may not adequately protect some particularly sensitive areas. As there have been no meetings of the Council of Fisheries Ministers since 1 May I have not had the opportunity to raise this issue there. However, discussions at official level with the Danish Ministry led to their facilitating scientific observation by the Scottish Office Marine Laboratory of this year's sand eel fishery by the Danish fleet off the British East Coast, where the observed catch was more than 99.6 per cent. sand eels.

The Sea Mammal Research Unit, along with the Danish Institute of Fisheries Research, the Natural Environment Research Council, the Scottish Office and others, is undertaking a collaborative three-year project (ELIFONTS), ending in 1999, to examine the impact of industrial fishing on sand eel abundance and the effects of variations in that abundance on predators in the Wee Bankie and neighbouring fisheries. The contractors have undertaken to give early warning of any interim results which show that the fishery is having adverse effects on the various species. We are also funding Newcastle University's research vessel to carry out sampling of sand eel populations within the study area as part of the project.

Section 9.2 of the Statement of Conclusions of the Intermediate Ministerial Meeting on the Integration of Fisheries and Environmental Issues, invites the competent authorities to consider (inter alia) restrictions on fishing in any areas where it is judged the ecosystem requires protection. The European Commission will decide in the light of the ELIFONTS project and other research, what action is appropriate to propose to the Council of Ministers. We would expect them to consider options for introducing quantitative restrictions or complete bans in particularly sensitive areas, always bearing in mind the need to avoid displacing fishing effort in a way that has a net adverse effect.

The Wee Bankie lies outside UK territorial waters and the Government are unable to take unilateral action to restrict fishing there.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

European Assistance (Cornwall)

26. Ms Atherton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to secure objective 1 status for Cornwall. [5230]

Mrs. Roche: Eligible areas for the European structural funds will not change before the end of 1999. Once the Commission has put forward proposals for reform of the structural funds and these have been negotiated and agreed, the Government will then consider proposing particular areas within the United Kingdom.

My hon. Friend was part of the delegation of Cornish members of the House who came to the Department of Trade and Industry on 18 June while I was in Brazil, and I can assure her that the Government will pay close attention to the needs of Cornwall along with other areas of the United Kingdom.

Competitiveness

27. Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps her Department is taking to improve the competitiveness of British companies. [5231]

Mrs. Heal: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps her Department is taking to improve the competitiveness of British companies. [5241]

Mrs. Beckett: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave in response to my hon. Friends the Members for Dundee, West (Mr. Ross) and for Lincoln (Gillian Merton) earlier today.

29. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to promote the competitiveness of small British companies in export markets; and if she will make a statement. [5235]

Mrs. Beckett: My noble Friend the Minister for Trade announced on 22 May that the Government would be setting up an Export Forum, with representation from business as well as from Whitehall. The Forum's remit will be to review the effectiveness of current official export promotion programmes and report to Ministers by the autumn with recommendations for a new export initiative.

Child Labour

28. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals she has to prevent the import of goods produced by child labour; and if she will make a statement. [5234]

Mrs. Roche: The Government are firmly committed to using our best endeavours to eliminate the exploitation of child labour around the world. We intend to increase our financial support for the International Labour Organisation's International Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour and we welcome the proposal for a new ILO Convention on this issue. We will also explore how the processes of the World Trade Organisation can contribute to achieving our objective.

Clean Coal Technology

30. Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new steps she intends to take to promote clean coal technology. [5236]

Mr. Battle: Over the next few months we will be conducting a detailed review of the UK's future clean coal technology requirements. As a key part of this review we have recently agreed to contribute some £50,000 to an industry led study as part of the Foresight exercise. The current plans will be included in the Comprehensive Spending Review announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 1 June 1997.

We are working closely with industry to promote UK expertise in clean coal technology for the substantial world export market that exists for these technologies. Already the Department has led one clean coal technology trade mission to India and an inward mission from China will take place in the autumn. Further outward and inward missions are planned for 1998. We are also working closely with the International Energy Agency to promote the development of clean coal technologies in developing countries which are expected to be the main market for these technologies over the next decade and beyond.

Partnership in Industry

31. Mrs. Osborne: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her policy on social dialogue and partnership in industry; and if she will make a statement. [5237]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government support social dialogue and partnership in Europe, at the national level and in individual undertakings. Social partnership is the best means of identifying and pursuing common objectives. It can make a real contribution to improving economic performance and social equity. The Government are looking for ways to develop social partnership at all levels.

Manufacturing Investment

32. Mr. Rendel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to encourage manufacturing investment in the United Kingdom. [5238]

Mrs. Beckett: Increased investment will come only with economic stability, an appropriate tax regime and the pursuit of competitiveness through partnership. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor has laid the foundations for economic stability and introduced tax changes to encourage business investment in the Budget. I have established an agenda for pursuing competitiveness through partnership starting with a Competitiveness summit on 23 July.

Greenpeace

33. Mr. McAllion: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she next intends to meet Greenpeace to discuss oil exploration licences. [5239]

Mr. Battle: I have no immediate plans to meet Greenpeace.

Late Payment of Bills

34. Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research she has evaluated into comparisons carried out between the countries that make up the European Union over the effect of a statutory right of interest on late payment. [5240]

Mrs. Roche: My Department has closely analysed the findings of research into late payment problems across Europe and the effect of a statutory right to interest, including recent surveys carried out by NOP and Grant Thornton.

Research undertaken by Grant Thornton identified that those Member States where businesses use legislation for statutory interest most frequently had much quicker payment periods. Additionally the research undertaken by NOP showed that 80 per cent. of British businesses wanted a statutory right to interest.

We are determined to end the culture of late payment in the UK and will introduce the Fair Payment of Commercial Debts Bill to give businesses a statutory right to claim interest on the late payment of commercial debts. We will consult on the most appropriate way of introducing legislation and will issue a Green Paper soon.

Aerospace Industry

36. Mr. Jack: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her Department's assessment of the key factors which will affect the prospects for the aerospace industry in the next decade. [5242]

Mr. Battle: The key factors that will influence the aerospace industry over the next decade are likely to be competitiveness on a global scale and a commitment to excellence. The Department will be actively supporting the UK aerospace sector in these areas.

Gas and Electricity Industries

37. Mr. Watts: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she has taken to encourage greater competition in the gas and electricity industries. [5344]

Mr. Battle: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow).

Sustainable Energy

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on her plans for encouraging research and development in sustainable energy technology. [5207]

Mr. Battle: The Government are undertaking a new and strong drive to develop renewable energy options as a means of ensuring diverse secure and sustainable energy sources.

I shall also examine the role of research and development to maximise the benefit to the economy of the emerging new environmentally friendly energy industries.

Post Office

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the future of the Post Office. [5218]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Our policy on the future of the Post Office, in accordance with our election manifesto commitment, is to grant it greater commercial freedom, to take advantage of new challenges and opportunities. A consideration of options for implementing this commitment is now under way.

Inward Investment

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to match inward investment to the United Kingdom to (a) the available skills and (b) regional needs. [5219]

Mr. Ian McCartney: It is the needs of individual inward investors and projects including skill requirements that will influence which regions are most attractive from case to case. The Government's role is to ensure that across all regions we have a skills base and other features which help maintain the UK's competitive position as an inward investment location.

Small Businesses

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to improve support for small businesses. [5225]

Mr. Cotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to make business support and advice more accessible to small businesses. [5227]

Mrs. Roche: Business Links are central to our strategy for delivering business services to small businesses. Improving the Business Link service to small and medium sized businesses is one of my key priorities. I am committed to ensuring that all Business Links deliver a service which is of the highest quality. Many are already doing so, and I am discussing with the national Business Link partners and others how we can ensure that all Business Links are brought up to the standard of the best.

Defence Industry

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the annual cost of export credit guarantee certificates to the arms export industries in each of the past 10 years. [4752]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 23 June 1997]: The Export Credits Guarantee Department has paid to date the following claims on guarantees related to business with Defence Ministries underwritten in the last 10 years.

Year of underwriting	£ million
1987–88	48.3
1988–89	76.7

Edgware Sorting Office

Mr. Dismore: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will investigate the adequacy of the postal service given by Edgware Sorting Office; and if she will make a statement. [5661]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Operational responsibility for postal services rests with the Post Office. I understand that Royal Mail has experienced problems at Edgware because of staff shortages but a revision of staff duties planned for the autumn is expected to resolve the problems. In the meantime, Royal Mail has introduced interim measures to improve the quality of service which customers in Edgware receive.

Electrical Goods

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will discuss with representatives of the electrical goods industry the public response to their recommended retail price regime. [4605]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: As the MMC report is currently being considered by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade it would not be appropriate to comment.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received from the electrical goods industry concerning profitability, profit margins and manufacturing costs of goods supplied by the industry; and if she will make a statement. [4603]

Mr. Griffiths: My Department has received representations on these issues from the electrical goods sector. However since the MMC report is currently being considered by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade it would not be appropriate to comment.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list those investigations currently being carried out by her Department under the Companies Act, Financial Services Act and Insurance Companies Act legislation, indicating the cost of each investigation, the manner in which the costs are being apportioned between inspectors and the likely date of publication. [4821]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 25 June 1997]: The Department carries out a number of enquiries under the Companies, Financial Services and Insurance Companies Acts, most of which are confidential. There are currently five Companies Act inspectors which were publicly announced. The information requested by the hon. Member in respect of these is as follows:

Company	Inspectors	Accountant inspector's costs (including support staff and VAT) £(000)	Legal inspector's costs (including support staff and VAT) £(000)	Total costs of inspection to date (including disbursements) £(000)

[1] Excludes departmental staff costs. A decision on publication cannot be made before inspectors submit their report.

Office of Science and Technology

Dr. Starkey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many full-time equivalent staff were employed at the Office of Science and Technology on (a) permanent and (b) temporary contracts, in each year from 1994 to 1997 broken down by grades. [6156]

Mr. Battle: The average number of full-time equivalent staff employed in the two groups within OST in the years requested was as follows:

The Transdepartmental Group numbers include the secretariat of the Chief Scientific Adviser (CSA) and the Management Support Unit for all of OST, and reflect the initiation and development of the Foresight Programme, the transfer of a section from elsewhere in DTI into the Group's International Directorate, the establishment of the secretariat for the Human Genetics Advisory Commission and, in 1997, a temporary increase in staff for the 1988 UK presidency of the EU and Framework V negotiations. The Science and Engineering Base Group includes the Director General of Research Councils (DGRC) and is responsible for the Science Budget and the Research Councils. Its numbers take into account the transfer in January 1996 of the Development Unit for Women in Science, Engineering and Technology from the Transdepartmental Group, and an increase in the number of Research Councils from six to seven.

The permanent staff figures in each year include about 20 staff on secondment from other Departments and Non Departmental Public Bodies including the Research Councils, and four secondees from private companies.

Trade and Aid

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the loss of business and jobs in the United Kingdom as a result of ending the link between trade and overseas aid. [5717]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 1 July 1997]: I expect there to be no significant effect on business or jobs in the UK following the Prime Minister's announcement that the UK would untie all of its pledge to the fourth phase of the Special Programme of Assistance to Sub-Saharan Africa.

There is no change to the tying status of the rest of the aid programme and thus there would be no effect on business or jobs.

Social Chapter

Mr. Paterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the Benefits for industry from the United Kingdom's adoption of the social chapter. [5233]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Decent minimum standards for workers in Europe will promote good working relations. That can only be good for business. By ending the last Government's futile opt-out, we will play a full part in negotiations and ensure that the Social Chapter promotes flexibility and employability, but not unnecessary social costs.

Machine Tool Industry

Mr. Purchase: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement about her plans to support the machine tool industry. [5208]

Mr. Battle: I met the Machine Tool Technologies Association on 20 May and am aware of its concerns. The machine tool industry will continue to be eligible for the range of Government support services to industry.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Mineral Exploitation

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the protection of (a) the environment and (b) indigenous tribes in areas of the world vulnerable to mineral exploitation; and if she will make a statement. [6244]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development (DFID) is committed to the sustainable eradication of poverty. Protection of the environment is an essential requirement for this. All bilateral DFID projects are appraised to ensure they take full account of environmental issues and many directly contribute to environmental protection. In 1995–96, expenditure on projects which contributed to conserving the environment as an objective totalled £196 million.

DFID seeks to ensure that, through their enhanced participation, indigenous people and ethnic minorities benefit from those projects and programmes, including mineral projects, which affect them and that any adverse effects upon them are minimised.

DFID also seeks to ensure that multilateral organisations such as the EC and the World Bank pursue development policies consistent with our own objectives.

Philippines

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has received from organisations expressing concern at the mining activities of RTZ in the Philippines. [6277]

Clare Short: We have received no such representations and have no involvement with the mining sector in the Philippines.

Financing Institutions (Development Criteria)

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what social and human development criteria she intends to ask the International Monetary Fund to use when assessing countries requesting funding. [6367]

Clare Short: I regard it is as important for all multilateral financing and development institutions to be guided in their operations in developing countries by the need to create economic conditions and local capacity which will enable each developing country to meet the social and human development objectives launched by the Development Assistance Committee of the OECD, with the key objective of reducing and eventually eliminating poverty.

Aid Projects

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what new criteria she will use to assess projects seeking development aid. [6369]

Clare Short: We will ensure that all projects are not just developmentally sound, but contribute directly or indirectly to our core policy objective of eliminating poverty.

Poverty

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what are her Department's targets for the number of people living in absolute poverty by 2015. [6371]

Clare Short: The Government is committed to the internationally accepted development target of reducing the proportion of people living in extreme poverty by half by 2015.

Debt Burden

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures the Government took to reduce the debt burden on the poorest countries between 9 April 1992 and 1 May 1997. [6392]

Clare Short: I have already acknowledged the good record the previous government had on introducing measures to reduce the unpayable debts of the poorest countries, pushing for the introduction both of Naples Terms for the rescheduling of government to government debts, and the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries debt initiative which will tackle the problem of unpayable debt owed to all creditors, including the multilateral institutions. The previous government also continued the policy of forgiving the development loans of the poorest countries, a policy introduced under the last Labour government in 1978.

We welcome the progress made so far, but believe that much remains to be done, and are pressing the international community collectively to provide further debt relief. We need to make sure debt relief is implemented flexibly to reflect individual country needs, that it is accompanied by policies in debtor countries which are targeted on poverty elimination and that countries which are burdened with debt but have demonstrated their commitment to such policies get the relief they need as soon as possible.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to encourage small and medium businesses in developing countries. [6372]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development is actively promoting micro, small and medium enterprise development to create jobs, especially to improve poor people's access to income earning opportunities. The Department is seeking to develop local capacity to deliver cost effective business development and financial services. We place a particular emphasis on micro-finance. Approved commitments to 190 current projects exceed £95 million.

Developing Countries (Investment)

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to encourage British investment in developing countries. [6374]

Clare Short: The Government wishes to work more closely with the private sector to promote economic growth in developing countries. Improving the investment climate is a key target. We are seeking to improve our partnership with the private sector and consulting all interested groups. I will be setting out some thoughts on this in a speech at the Institute of Directors next week.

Functions Transfer

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was the cost to public funds of transferring functions formerly carried out by the Overseas Development Administration to the Department for International Development. [6370]

Clare Short: There was no cost to public funds associated with the transfer of functions formerly carried out by the Overseas Development Administration to the Department for International Development.

United Nations Industrial Development Organisation

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she has reached a decision on United Kingdom membership of UNIDO. [6640]

Clare Short: I have today informed the UN Secretary-General of our decision to remain a member of United Nations Industrial Development Organisation (UNIDO). We will work within the organisation in order to demonstrate the Government's strong commitment to support the United Nations and its agencies and reforms which increase their effectiveness. This decision recognises both the changes made so far in UNIDO and the UN Secretary-General's efforts to bring about a more effective UN.

SCOTLAND

EU Afforestation Budget

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the European Union afforestation budget for 1993 to 1997. [6092]

Mr. Chisholm: The European Union's afforestation budget for the period 1993 to 1997 was 1,340 million ecu.

GP Fundholding

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to abolish general practitioner fundholding in Scotland. [5861]

Mr. Galbraith: The Government intend to publish a White Paper on the Scottish Health Service in the Autumn which will set out the options for new models of involving GPs in the design and delivery of patient care services. In the meantime, steps have already been taken to change the financial regime for GP fundholders to ensure the patients of non-fundholding GPs are not disadvantaged.

Ferry Services (Orkney and Shetland)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 16 June, Official Report, column 55, how many tenders are currently being evaluated in respect of (a) the passenger ferry service to Orkney, (b) the passenger ferry service to Shetland and (c) a passenger ferry service for both Orkney and Shetland; and if he will make a statement. [6002]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 30 June 1997]: Tenders for a block grant subsidy for the operation of passenger ferry services to Orkney and Shetland are currently being considered by Ministers. A number of options have been proposed for the operation of these services. Three proposals were made in respect of the services to Orkney, two of which also made proposals in respect of the services to Shetland. An announcement on the outcome of the tendering exercise will be made shortly.

Pyrethroid Sheep Dips

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the effect of pyrethroid sheep dips on aquatic life in rivers and streams in Scotland. [6157]

Mr. Chisholm: I understand from the Scottish Environment Protection Agency that much of the impact in watercourses affected by the disposal of spent pyrethroid sheep dip has been on aquatic invertebrates such as river insects, although there have been a number of reported cases of significant fish kills.

There are serious practical difficulties in disposing of spent pyrethroid sheep dip particularly in the more remote areas of the Highlands and Islands. However, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency considers environmental risks can be greatly reduced by the adoption of good farming practice. Comprehensive advice can be found in The Scottish Office Code of Good Practice for the Prevention of Environmental Pollution from Agricultural Activity, a revised edition of which will be available at the end of this month. The Scottish Environment Protection Agency actively promotes such good practice through the publication of educational material and undertaking farm visits.

Legal Services (Orkney and Shetland)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in how many cases in (a) Orkney and (b) Shetland the Procurator Fiscal proceeded by way of a fiscal fine in each year since 1992. [6049]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 2 July 1997]: The numbers of criminal reports concluded by way of a fiscal fine by the Procurator Fiscal at Kirkwall (Orkney) and Lerwick (Shetland) are as follows:

Year	Kirkwall	Lerwick
1992–93	41	145
1993–94	27	50
1994–95	32	43
1996–97	76	67

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in how many cases reports were submitted to the Procurator Fiscal in (a) Orkney and (b) Shetland marked for no proceedings in each year since 1992. [6048]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 2 July 1997]: The information is as follows:

Year	Kirkwall		Lerwick
	Total reports received	No proceedings	Total records received	No proceedings
1992–93	742	89	870	86
1993–94	708	81	794	143
1994–95	715	94	758	167
1995–96	704	38	768	60
1996–97	786	46	854	80

RAF Edzell

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by what means he will support the economic development initiatives proposed by the RAF Edzell Task Force, in their bid for Challenge Funding in early 1997; and if he will make a statement. [6378]

Mr. Chisholm: Four million pounds is being made available through the Central Challenge Fund over the next three years for a package of measures put forward by Angus and Aberdeenshire Councils, with the support of the Edzell Task Force, to strengthen the local economy following the withdrawal of the US Navy from RAF Edzell.

Skye Bridge

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the Lord Advocate to reply to the requests from the hon. Member for Ross, Skye and

Inverness, West for a meeting to discuss the Skye Bridge tolls non-payment campaign; and if he will make a statement. [6496]

Mr. McLeish: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has asked the Procurator Fiscal at Dingwell to undertake a review of pending cases. The Lord Advocate will write to the hon. Member once the review has been completed.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Gallaher (Subsidy Payments)

Ms Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on her plans for future subsidy payments to Gallaher's tobacco company in Northern Ireland. [2440]

Mr. Ingram: Any future application for financial assistance by Gallaher under programmes of support for industry in Northern Ireland will be considered against the normal criteria of eligibility for such support.

Ice Making Plant (Portavogie)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals there are to provide a new ice making plant at Portavogie; and if she will make a statement. [5593]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Approval has been given for grant aid to the Northern Ireland Fishery Harbour Authority towards the cost of constructing a replacement ice-making plant at the fish auction hall in Portavogie. Consideration of the possible replacement of the other, larger ice plant at Portavogie Harbour is being given in the context of the Authority's Development Plan, which is currently under preparation.

Water Meters

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of properties in (a) North Down and (b) Northern Ireland have water meters; how many were charged for excess use and how much was collected in each of the last three years; and when she expects metering to become universal. [5638]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Water Service under its Chief Executive, Mr. H. R. F. Plester. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from H. R. F. Plester to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 30 June 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply your recent Parliamentary Question asking what percentage of properties in Northern Ireland and North Down have water meters, how many were charged for excess use and how much was collected in each of the last three years, and when water metering is expected to become universal.

In Northern Ireland domestic properties are unmetered. Domestic customers pay for water and sewerage services through their contribution to the regional rate. Water supplies to non-domestic properties, mainly in the commercial, industrial and agricultural sectors, are metered where it is assessed that consumption may exceed the domestic property allowance of 100 cubic metres in any six month period. A farm with a metered supply, which also includes a domestic household, is given the domestic usage allowance for that proportion of the property comprised by the household. All supplies serving properties on which full rates are not payable are also metered.

There are currently 68,787 metered water supplies in Northern Ireland of which 51,562 are chargeable. There are a number of reasons why a property may be metered but not charged including usage recorded below the domestic allowance level, test metering for leakage control purposes, etc. Income received in the last three financial years was £26.5 million in 1994–95, £27.7 million in 1995–96 and £29.4 million in 1996–97.

There are no charges levied for excess use. Metered water customers are responsible for paying for all water recorded by their meters as passing from the public water supply network to their private pipework. If a metered water customer encounters very high demand because of a burst, or fittings failure, or their private pipework, they may apply for a reduction on their bill. Such an allowance is, however, granted on a strictly 'once only' basis. The experience of one such episode of exceptional use or wastage is considered to have put a customer on guard that they are in future responsible for all water their meter records as being used on their property. They should, thereafter, put in place appropriate monitoring to identify at an early stage any unexplained rise in consumption on their premises.

Records maintained by the Water Service relate to the numbers of metered supplies rather than properties supplied. A metered supply may service more than the property to which it was initially provided and, therefore, it is not possible to determine the number of individual properties which are provided for by metered supplies. The North Down constituency boundaries do not equate to Water Service metering areas and information on the number of water meters in this area, or on the income received from them, is not available.

The Water Service has no plans to introduce universal water metering in Northern Ireland.

Trade Union Subscriptions

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make it her policy to have Northern Ireland included in the proposed amendment of legislation to permit trade union subscription to be paid by check-off without regular reballoting of members. [5640]

Mr. Ingram: Any amendment of legislation in Great Britain to permit trade union subscriptions to be paid by check-off without regular reballoting of members will be replicated in Northern Ireland.

Traffic (Bangor)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what steps she is taking to provide adequate car-parking spaces near Bangor station; and what plans she has to charge for car-parking at Bangor market; [5642]

(2) what is her policy with respect to road traffic reduction on the Rathgael and Balloo roads in Bangor and promotion of the use of the existing Bangor dual-carriageway ring road. [5643]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from G. P. Fraser to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 30 June 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked the Chief Executive to respond to your recently tabled PQs about traffic reduction on the Rathgael and Balloo Roads and car parking in Bangor. In the Chief Executive's absence, I will reply on his behalf.

Rathgael Road/Balloo Road acts as a distributor road serving the housing developments on the eastern side of Bangor. It is complementary to, rather than an alternative for, the Bangor Ring Road and there are no plans to reduce traffic on it.

Roads Service has 393 car park spaces in close proximity to Bangor Station (232 free) and is working closely with Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company to encourage the use of bus and train.

Finally, charging is being introducing at the Castle Square car park (Bangor Market) before the end of July. Charging will be implemented in approximately 50% of the car park with the remainder being free.

Departmental Mergers

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to integrate the functions of the various Northern Ireland departments and to merge some into her own Department; what advice she has received on this issue; and if she will make a statement. [5637]

Mr. Paul Murphy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 6 May that my hon. Friend the Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) would take Ministerial responsibility for both the Training and Employment Agency and the Department of Education, but without integrating their functions. She has no other plans to integrate any functions of the Northern Ireland departments or to merge some into the Northern Ireland Office. She has neither sought nor received any advice on these issues.

Pension Schemes

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) percentage of the expenditure of the five largest public sector pension schemes and (b) amount was received from (i) the employer and (ii) investment proceeds last year. [5641]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The information requested is listed:

	(i) Employer expenditure		(ii) Investment proceeds expenditure
	(a)	(b)	(a)	(b)
	Percentage	Amount £ million	Percentage	Amount £ million
Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (NI)	72.5	81.2	Nil	Nil
Health and Personal Social Services Superannuation Scheme (NI)	23.9	21.9	Nil	Nil
Northern Ireland Local Government Officers Superannuation Scheme	23.5	12.0	38	19.5
Teachers Superannuation Scheme	40	41.5	Nil	Nil
RUC Pension Scheme	100	41.8	Nil	Nil

Figures for financial year ended 31 March 1997.

Scrabo High School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils applied for places in Scrabo High School, Newtownards for the academic year 1997–98; how many of these were new applicants; how many were accepted; and if she will make a statement. [5683]

Mr. Worthington: A total of six pupils applied as new entrants for places in Scrabo High School in the 1997–98 academic year. All the applicants would have been accepted if the school had remained in operation.

I have recently approved a proposal by the South Eastern Education and Library Board to close Scrabo High School. This decision was taken after very careful consideration of all relevant information, including the school's existing and projected enrolments, the enrolment capacities of neighbouring schools, and financial, community and educational factors. Account was taken also of the various representations which were made to the Department of Education during the statutory objection period. I concluded that the school was financially and educationally unviable and that closure was in the long-term interest of the children concerned.

Teachers and Lecturers

Mr. Roy Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) teachers in schools and (b) college and university lecturers in Northern Ireland are employed on one year contracts of employment. [6294]

Mr. Worthington: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, 614 teachers in schools and 35 lecturers in colleges and universities were employed in a full-time temporary capacity for the 1996–97 school year.

Social Security Agency

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Social Security Agency for the current financial year. [6913]

Mr. Worthington: The targets are in line with the objective of improving the service provided to customers and fully support the standards established in the Northern Ireland Citizen's Charter. I am satisfied that the targets represent a demanding challenge for the Agency. The targets will be included in the Agency's 1997–98 Strategic and Business Plan, which is due for publication in July. A copy of the Plan will be placed in the Library. The targets are as follows:

1. Benefit clearance times'

Jobseeker's Allowance claims:

71 per cent. in 10 days

93 per cent. in 21 days.

Faster Family Credit:

93 per cent. in 5 days.

2. Benefit accuracy

Income Support:

to pay the correct amount in at least 87 per cent. of cases.

Incapacity Benefit:

to pay the correct amount in at least 98 per cent. of cases.

Family Credit:

to pay the correct amount in at least 93 per cent. of cases.

Disability Living Allowance:

to pay the correct amount in at least 99 per cent. of cases.

Jobseeker's Allowance:

to pay the correct amount in at least 87 per cent. of cases.

3. Customer satisfaction[2]

90 per cent. of customers to regard the Agency's service as satisfactory or better.

4. Financial recovery

recovery of Social Fund loans—£27.17 million recovery of overpayments—£4.6 million[3] benefit savings from detection and prevention of fraud—£15.00 million sign-offs as a result of anti-fraud activity—5,500 sign-offs as a result of anti-fraud activity—5,500

Class 1 contributions identified as underpaid to the National Insurance Fund—£1.65 million

Collection of Contributions owing to the National Insurance Fund[4]—£1.4 million

Contributions identified as underpaid to the National Insurance Fund—to provide a return on Challenge Fund investment of 9:1[5].

5. Resource Management to live within a gross allocation of £40.34 million for Social Fund loans and Community Care grants to live within the Agency's gross running cost budget allocation to achieve cash efficiency savings of the order of £5.50 million.

[1] Clearance time is measured from the date of receipt of a claim or application in the office to the date on which the claim or application is decided. The measure, therefore, excludes the time taken to issue notification of the decision and any payment.

[2] The customer satisfaction target is presently measured by independent survey and usually covers a two year period, in this case 1997–98.

[3] It has been decided to combine the previous figures for Income Support Centralised Benefits and Unemployment Benefit with the new figure for Jobseeker's Allowance into one overall Overpayment Recovery Target. This target is based on a percentage of the overall outstanding debt, which will be much more challenging than the existing system. The yield in 1996–97 was £2.56 million.

[4] This was an internal target in 1996–97, but has been raised to Ministerial status in line with the Contributions Agency in GB.

[5] This is a new target for the Agency.

Public Record Office

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland in 1997–98. [6914]

Dr. Mowlam: For 1997–98 the following performance targets have been set for PRONI:

Financial Performance

To meet the challenge of managing the Agency's workload by:

(a) absorbing a 13.3 per cent. reduction in staff numbers;

(b) providing for an estimated 4 per cent. increase in readers;

(c) maintaining extended opening hours;

(d) ensuring that expenditure is within the financial limits approved.

Output

1. To appraise at least 4,000 linear metres of records, including the reappraisal of records so as to eliminate low-grade material.

2. To list and index at least 500 linear metres of records, including ensuring that 100 per cent. of all new "open" material is thus processed within one year of receipt.

Quality of service

1. To survey the conditions in which 10 per cent. of 33,360 metres of records are stored; and, in a related exercise, to take remedial action on upgrading c.1,800 linear metres of records as presently stored on mobile shelving at Balmoral Avenue so as to bring them up to defined standards of archival protection.

2. With the help of the computerised document request system, to improve the speed of on-site production to the public by reducing waiting time from 40 minutes to 37 minutes or less in 90 per cent. of cases.

3. To process customer queries within 10 working days of receipt in 90 per cent. of cases and within 14 working days in 96 per cent. of cases, thus improving PRONI's Citizen's Charter commitment.

4. To ensure the smooth completion of the annual release for 1998—c.680 files, but with the possible addition of court records—as well as the ongoing release of identified blocks of records at earlier than 30 years.

Efficiency

1. To reduce PRONI's composite Unit Cost in the areas of selecting and accessioning, records listing, records storage, document production and reader service by 3 per cent., from £99.95 to £96.95.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Late Claims

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will make a statement on the legislation relating to late claims for benefit; [2236]

(2) what plans she has to review the three-months limit on the backdating of benefits; and if she will make a statement. [2235]

Mr. Bradley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 2 July, Official Report, columns 207–209.

Benefit Claimants (Motherwell and Wishaw)

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the number of claimants for each benefit in the Motherwell and Wishaw Benefits Agency district in the most recent year for which figures are available. [5014]

Mr. Field: One of our key aims is to improve the service provided to claimants and other customers. Particular queries on Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive. I have asked him to write directly and for his reply to be published with the answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Frank Roy, dated 2 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the number of claimants for each benefit in the Motherwell and Wishaw Benefits Agency District in the most recent year for which figures are available.

Motherwell and Wishaw benefit offices are part of the Benefits Agency Clyde Valley District which also includes offices at Hamilton, Lanark and Shotts. The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is shown in the attached Annex.

Information for Child Benefit, Child Benefit (Lone Parent), Guardians Allowance and Invalid Care Allowance is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Annex: Number of benefit customers for Clyde Valley district April 1996–March 1997

Benefit	Number of customers
Incapacity Benefit	9,878
Maternity Benefit	273
Severe Disablement Benefit	697
Retirement Pension	4,317
Widow's Payment	317
Widow's Benefit	232
Income Support	13,364
Job Seekers Allowance[1]	7,441
Disability Living Allowance[2]	5,200
Attendance Allowance[2]	2,400
Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit	503
Disability Working Allowance[3]	32
Family Credit[4]	1,562

Figures are provisional and subject to change.
[1] Figures are from the introduction of the benefit—October 1996 to March 1997.
[2] Figures are estimates based on 5 per cent. data sample of successful claims and are rounded to the nearest hundred. The figures relate to a "snap shot" of customers receiving benefit at 28 February 1997. Details of unsuccessful claims are not available.
[3] Figures are only available as cumulative for successful claims for the period 1992 to date. The figures are for Motherwell and Wishaw benefit offices.
[4] Figures are for Motherwell and Wishaw benefit offices. The figures show the number of families in receipt of Family Credit at 27 March 1997.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance is issued to the Child Support Agency in cases where parentage is contested and the courts have not ruled on such a dispute. [5058]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We believe that children are entitled to the support of both parents wherever they live. It is important that the Child Support Agency effectively and efficiently establishes paternity where this is in dispute.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 2 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency procedures concerning disputed paternity.

The guidance followed by Child Support Officers in cases where paternity is disputed is contained in the Child Support Agency Paternity Guide (which will shortly be available in the Library of the House). Officers are first advised to interview the parent with care; this is necessary to establish certain facts and whether the parent with care is willing to undergo DNA testing to resolve the dispute. Depending on the outcome, an interview with the alleged absent parent is arranged.

If the alleged absent parent continues to dispute paternity, it is then considered whether the case is suitable for court proceedings and whether the alleged absent parent should be offered a DNA test to be arranged through the Agency.

Once the issue of paternity has been satisfactorily resolved, then a maintenance assessment is completed as soon as possible.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what efficiency targets she has set for the Child Support Agency to respond to inquiries from parents (i) with and (ii) without care and their representatives. [5059]

Mr. Bradley: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients throughout the child support assessment process. We are looking for substantial and sustained operational improvements from the Agency, in particular on getting more maintenance paid, reducing the backlog and improving customer service.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 2 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about targets for answering enquiries to the Child Support Agency.

The Agency Charter sets out the standards the Agency aims to achieve for answering the telephone, written enquiries and visits to local offices by customers and their representatives. I have listed below the targets and the Agency performance against each standard during 1996/97.

We aim to answer general telephone enquiries (through the Agency's National Enquiry line) within 20 seconds during normal working hours. Performance against this standard was 64%. Case specific enquiries are handled through the Agency's Client Helplines. The Agency has no target which covers this area, but it is clear that this is an area where the service offered by the Agency has not fully met its customers needs.

I am committed to improving this and plans are in place to improve the service. The Agency plans to employ staff to work a wider more flexible range of working patterns over six days a week. This will provide more opportunities for customers to contact the Agency and vice versa, and will enable the Agency to deliver a better standard of customer service through greater use of the telephone. The Agency has also recently initiated an Early Positive Customer Contact project which will increase the use of the telephone by Agency staff at an early stage in our dealings with customers. The aim is that much more of our business will be conducted over the telephone rather than by correspondence, giving customers more opportunity to raise any issues or concerns earlier than at present.

We aim to reply to letters within 10 working days of receiving them. If we cannot send a full reply within 10 days, we aim to send an initial reply within 10 days and confirmation of when we can send the full reply. Performance against this standard was 52 per cent.

We aim to see customers within 10 minutes of their appointment time. Performance against this standard was 100 per cent.

We aim to acknowledge complaints within two working days and aim to send a full reply within ten working days. Performance against this standard was 92 per cent. for acknowledgements and 62 per cent. for full replies.

Whilst some of the results against our Charter Standards are encouraging, I am very conscious that there are still far too many justified complaints about the standards of basic customer contact and the service we provide. Over the next few years, I am committed to bringing high quality levels of performance to every part of our operation as a matter of routine, thereby reducing the number of complaints received and enhancing the public perception of the Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Citizens Advice Bureau

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what circumstances Benefits Agency staff are required to ask for faxed authority from a citizens advice bureau adviser before discussing a specific client's case; and what plans her Department has to review the procedures to reduce the time required of citizens advice bureau advisers. [5722]

Mr. Field: One of our key aims is to improve the service provided to claimants and other customers as well as to protect the confidentiality of customers. Questions on Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive. I have asked him to write directly to the hon. Member and for his reply to be published with the answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 2 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question in what circumstances Benefits Agency staff are required to ask for faxed authority from a Citizens' Advice Bureau adviser before discussing a specific client's case; and what plans her Department has to review the procedures to reduce the time required of Citizens' Advice Bureau advisers.

There are no national instructions in place within the Benefits Agency which require staff to request a faxed authority from Citizens' Advice Bureaux advisers before a customer's case can be discussed.

However, the Benefits Agency has a duty to ensure that confidential customer information is not disclosed improperly. In dealing with any enquiry from a customer's representative, Agency staff should confirm that both the enquiry and the person making it are genuine, and that the enquiry is being made on behalf of the customer. However, the method by which this is achieved is subject to local procedures, forming part of local liaison arrangements between the Benefits Agency and other welfare organisations.

I meet the Chief Executive of the National Association of Citizens' Advice Bureaux on a six monthly basis. Local managers are also encouraged to maintain regular liaison with local Citizens Advice Bureaux and the Agency has produced guidance for field staff entitled 'Building Effective Relationships with Citizens Advice Bureaux'. Using their established liaison channels, the Benefits Agency will keep under review the operation of the arrangements for the disclosure of information to Citizens Advice Bureaux.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to restore social security benefits to destitute asylum seekers; and if she will make a statement. [5466]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We are committed to a wide ranging review of Social Security. With the Home Office, the Department of Health and other Departments we will consider all arrangements for asylum seekers to ensure they are dealt with fairly and promptly.

Under current rules, asylum seekers who make their asylum application immediately on arrival are eligible to claim benefit. In addition following the Home Secretary's declaration on 1 July 1997 of Sierra Leone as a country of upheaval, a Sierra Leonean national who entered the country previously and applies for asylum within three months of the declaration being made is eligible to claim income support, income based jobseeker's allowance, housing benefit and council tax benefit while their asylum application is considered by the Home Office. Zaire was also declared a country of upheaval on 16 May 1996 and Zairean nationals have three months from the date of the declaration to apply for asylum and thereby become eligible to claim benefit.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Young Offenders

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) girls and (b) boys aged under 18 years were sentenced to prison custody by each magistrates court and Crown court area in England and Wales by (i) offence and (ii) length of sentence for the last four years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [6330]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the tables show in less detail the number of offenders aged 10 to under 18 sentenced to immediate custody for all offences by sex, type of court, type of offence group and length of sentence in England and Wales from 1992 to 1995. Copies of these tables have been placed in the Library.

Offenders of this age are not committed to prison but to young offender institutions or to secure child care establishments.

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) girls and (b) boys aged under 18 years have been placed into local authority secure accommodation in England and Wales following sentence or remand into custody by (i) age of the offender and (ii) category of offence for the last four years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [6327]

Ms Joyce Quin: The placement of juveniles in local authority secure accommodation on remand by a court is a matter for individual local authorities. The Department of Health collate statistics on such placements. They are published annually and are available in the Library.

Statistics on the placement of juveniles in local authority secure accommodation following sentence by a court are not recorded centrally on the basis of sex or category of offence and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. A breakdown of such placements by age is given in the following table.

Placement of offenders in local authority secure accommodation

Prisoners (Self-harm)

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the rate of incidents of self-harm which have occurred in women's prisons and female young offender institutions in England and Wales in each establishment for each year since 1990. [6332]

Ms Joyce Quin: The information is not available in the format requested. The attached table shows the incidents of self-harm which occurred in each prison holding female adult prisoners and young offenders in England and Wales for each financial year since 1990.

Incidents of self-harm 1990-91–1995-96

Total female prison population	1,560	1,590	1,510	1,640	1,870	2,010

Note:

The increase in the number of incidents of self-harm between 1992–93 and 1993–94 coincided with the introduction of an improved reporting procedure and mirrors an increase in the overall total for Prison Service establishments as a whole.

Abbas Radiom Case

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the implications of the Abbas Radiom case at the European Court of Justice for future rulings by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [6596]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The implications of this judgment will be taken into account by the High Court when it resumes its consideration of Mr. Radiom's application for judicial review of the decision to exclude him from the United Kingdom.

Mobile Phones (Drivers)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the adequacy of police powers to take action against drivers using mobile phones whilst driving. [6228]

Mr. Michael: The Government and the Association of Chief Police Officers consider that existing powers in road traffic legislation enable the police to deal properly with enforcement issues arising from the use of mobile phones when driving.

Under regulation 104 of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986, the police can prosecute or issue fixed penalty notices to drivers who do not exercise proper control of their vehicles. Use of a mobile phone when driving can also result in prosecution for the offence of careless and inconsiderate driving or dangerous driving.

The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions is considering measures to raise drivers' awareness of the danger associated with using mobile phones.

Prisoners (Deaths)

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to publish reports into the deaths of prisoners held in prison custody in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6295]

Ms Joyce Quin: We care currently reviewing our policy on the disclosure of investigation reports.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary for the Home Department if he will estimate the savings to central Government funds from transferring responsibility for that part of Elmbridge currently in the Metropolitan police area to the Surrey police area. [6222]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner informs me that in view of the complexity and the number of factors and underlying assumptions which would need to be taken into account, it is not possible to make such an estimate.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many places, at what schools and at what cost, were provided under the assisted places scheme in Leicestershire in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [6221]

Mr. Byers: The number of assisted places taken up and the cost of those places for each participating school in Leicestershire in academic years 1995–96 and 1996–97 are given in the following table:

Assisted Places Scheme: Leicestershire

School name		Academic year 1995–96	Academic year 1996–97
Dixie Grammar School	Number of assisted pupils	0	7
	Cost of places £000s	0	22
Leicester Grammar School	Number of assisted pupils	53	65
	Cost of places £000s	172	225
Leicester High School for Girls[1]	Number of assisted pupils	0	13
	Cost of places £000s	0	43
Loughborough Grammar School	Number of assisted pupils	123	140
	Cost of places £000s	345	390
Loughborough High School	Number of assisted pupils	94	103
	Cost of places £000s	231	269
Oakham School	Number of assisted pupils	33	39
	Cost of places £000s	160	196
Ratcliffe College	Number of assisted pupils	80	80
	Cost of places £000s	362	345

[1] These schools joined the Assisted Places Scheme in September 1996.

Religious Schools

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applications his Department has received from religious schools requesting Government funding in the last 12 months; when he received a request from the Islamia Schools Trust for grant-maintained status; and if he will make a statement. [6582]

Mr. Byers: In the last 12 months, fourteen applications have been received from independent religious schools to enter the maintained sector of education—twelve to become grant-maintained (GM) schools, and two to become voluntary aided (VA). Of these, five GM proposals and one VA proposal have been approved, and one GM proposal has been rejected. The remaining seven proposals are under consideration. The proposal from the Islamia Schools Trust was published on 9 January 1997. We shall be making a decision on this and the other proposals as soon as we can.

SCOTLAND

Skye Bridge

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his plans in respect of the Skye Bridge tolls, following his recent meeting with the Highland Council. [6497]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 3 July 1997]: We have looked carefully at the full range of options for making the toll regime for the Skye Bridge fairer. In doing so we have had to take account of the fact that we inherited the contractual commitments which the previous Government had entered into with Skye Bridge Limited. Those commitments guarantee Skye Bridge Limited a specific financial return on the bridge. Therefore any action by the Government in relation to toll levels which leads to a reduction in the revenues which would flow to the company renders the Government liable to compensate the company for that reduction in revenue.

This makes affordability a key issue. Simply buying out the contract is estimated to cost around £30 million. We cannot justify that in the face of the many pressing needs for future expenditure within my public expenditure programme. Spending on education and health, for example, has a higher priority in deciding how to deploy any public expenditure which we can free up by reordering priorities or improving the efficiency of programmes.

The idea of removing tolls completely through 100 per cent. shadow tolls is no less expensive than buying out the contract. Nor in public expenditure terms does it have the effect of spreading the cost over a number of years, as people have tended to assume. The full cost of the project would be a public expenditure charge immediately because of the absence of the transfer of risk to the private sector, which is what justifies the phased public expenditure cost for DBFO roads contracts entered into before construction has begun.

We looked at the option of partial shadow tolling. However, we concluded that this was not the fairest means of alleviating the impact of tolls. We consider that the impact of the tolls is most severe on local people and others who use the bridge most frequently. We can halve the car and motorcycle tolls for frequent users for almost the same cost as would be involved in reducing tolls across the board by only 10 per cent., through partial shadow tolling.

We believe that halving the discounted tolls for cars and motorcycles paid by frequent users would be a very significant benefit. Frequent users make 40 per cent. of all car crossings at present and most of them will be inhabitants of Skye or the surrounding area. This change will produce a toll of £1.25 compared to the current discounted ticket cost of £2.51 and the current cost to casual users of £4.40 in the low season and £5.40 in the high season. At the suggestion of Highland Council, I propose that the number of crossings necessary for car and motorcycle owners to qualify for the discounted toll should be increased from 10 to 20.

Highland Council put to me the case for some reduction in tolls for commercial vehicles. I looked very carefully at several options which they put to me and concluded that, since over 70 per cent. of commercial vehicles take advantage of discounted tolls at present, I should focus any reduction on these tolls as I have done for car users. A reduction of 25 per cent. in discounted tolls for large heavy goods vehicles will reduce the cost of each crossing by £6.32, from £25.27 to £18.95, which should produce very substantial cumulative benefits to the businesses concerned. I hope this will benefit the local economy either through the effect on consumer prices or by helping companies retain or increase employment.

Highland Council also made a case for a reduction in the toll for service buses, and I have decided to reduce the discounted toll for these by 25 per cent. from £15.27 to £11.45. This should enable bus operators to reduce fares and will, I hope, encourage the use of public transport.

I wish to assist the health of the local economy. The changes in tolls which I propose to make are likely to cost me a very substantial amount of money over the life of the contract. That will be matched by savings to bridge users, who will be free to spend that money in other ways. Since the benefits will be concentrated on local people, as a result of the approach which I have chosen, the extra spending power is more likely to flow to the local economy.

My officials are now in discussion with Skye Bridge Ltd. to agree the precise details and the arrangements to ensure that the effect of these changes on the Company's revenue is neutral. The timing of these changes will depend partly on the need to promote a variation to the Toll Order, which will have to be approved by Parliament, and on the need to complete the discussions with the Company. They will, however, be implemented as early as practicable.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Lottery Bids (Stoke-on-Trent, North)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if he will list the successful national lottery bids in Stoke-on-Trent, North, by category of national lottery funding, indicating the percentage they comprise of the total sums awarded nationwide in each category; [6281]

(2) how many applications for each category of national lottery funding have been received from Stoke-on-Trent, North; and how many of these have been (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful, indicating for each successful scheme the value of the award, in each year since the inception of the national lottery. [6248]

Mr. Banks: To date over £3.7 billion has been awarded to 23,570 projects throughout the UK. Twelve of these awards are to projects in Stoke-on-Trent, North worth £2,938,508. The first table lists these together with the percentage they represent of the total sums awarded across England and the UK. The second table shows the number of applications received from Stoke-on-Trent, North.

Lottery Awards (Conflicts of Interest)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to introduce restrictions on members of the bodies allocating lottery funds from taking jobs with organisations to which they have been making allocations. [6062]

Mr. Banks: Non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), including those which allocate Lottery funds, are covered by the guidance on business appointment rules set out in the Treasury/Office of Public Service's "Non-Departmental Public Bodies: A Guide for Departments", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. This requires NDPBs to consider whether they need to adopt rules comparable to those that apply to Crown servants in the light of their functions and of any potential for conflict of interest which might give rise to public concern. My Department has reminded those NDPBs for which it is responsible of this requirement, and asked them to consider whether appropriate clauses might also be inserted into the contract of employees in especially sensitive positions.

Staff of NDPBs generally were reminded of the need to observe the business appointment rules of their organisation in the model "Code of Practice for Staff of Executive Non-Departmental Public Bodies" published by the Office of Public Service in August 1996, a copy of which is also in the Library of the House. My Department's NDPBs have all adopted, or are in the process of adopting, the model Code.

Disabled People (Sports)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to increase sports facilities and opportunities for those with disabilities; and if he will make a statement. [5820]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 1 July 1997]: This Government is determined to promote sport for people with disabilities. It is our aim to maximise opportunity for all people, no matter what their ability. There is an enormous amount of untapped talent, which given the right opportunities and encouragement could become our next generation of successful Paralympians.

I am taking a particular interest in disabled sports events. In the last two months, I have opened the World Blind Sailing Championships and the British disabled water skiing facilities at Heron Lake. I have attended disabled rugby at Loughborough University, a coaching session by the London Community Cricket Association for the disabled, fundraising for the Special Olympics organised by Sainsbury's and been to the British retinitis pigmentosa awards. I shall also be opening the Special Olympics in Portsmouth later this month.

We as a nation should take pride in the achievements of our disabled sportspeople. The success of our Paralympic team in Atlanta last year, winning 122 medals in total, 39 of them gold medals, was a considerable achievement and shows what can be done with effort and determination. As I said in the sport for all debate last week, we need more media coverage of these international events.

To ensure we build on this success, the British Academy of Sport and the regional centres of sporting excellence will address the provision for people with disabilities as an integral part of our overall strategy.

Melbourne Sports Stadium, Chelmsford

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if an application for Lottery funding for the Melbourne Sports Stadium in Chelmsford has been granted; and if he will make a statement. [6005]

Mr. Banks [holding answer Tuesday 1 July 1997]: The English Sports Council is the statutory distributor in England of Lottery funds for good causes in sport. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State does not have any role in the decision-making process on individual applications. The English Sports Council has, however, advised me that the application referred to is still being processed and no decision has yet been taken.

NESTA Programme

Mr. Alan Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement about the NESTA programme. [5232]

Mr. Banks [holding answer Thursday 3 July 1997]: The Government has announced its intention to establish a National Endowment for Science and the Arts (NESTA) to be funded initially from the National Lottery. NESTA's purpose will be to find innovative ways to support talent and new ideas in science, technology and the arts. Our proposals for NESTA will be set out in a White Paper which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be publishing shortly and which will initiate a wide consultation on the activities which NESTA might undertake.

Seaside Piers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage which seaside piers have applied for national lottery funding; which have been successful; and what amount has been allocated to each successful applicant. [6289]

Mr. Banks: Twelve applications have so far been made to the Heritage Lottery Fund in respect of funding for seaside piers. Of these, seven have been successful and five are still being considered. It is the Heritage Lottery Fund's policy not to release details of applications for funding before a decision has been made. The successful projects are:

Clevedon Pier	1,195,045
Swanage Pier	700,000
Bo'ness Harbour Pier	250,000
Penarth Pier	1,101,000
Southport Pier	34,000
Brighton West Pier	[1]1,025,500

[1] Brighton West Pier has received two awards of £968,000 and £57,500.

The Millennium Commission has received three applications in respect of funding for piers. Two of these, in respect of Bognor and Minehead piers, are still being considered. A third application by the Hastings Pier Consortium, for a grant of £43.4 million to construct a Millennium Pier, was not selected for detailed appraisal

Minimum Wage

Mr. Norman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his Department's estimates of the impact of different levels of a minimum wage on tax yields. [3709]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to say what the impact of the minimum wage on tax yields will be without knowing the level it will be set at. This is a matter for the Low Pay Commission to advise the Government on, taking into account the wider effect on the economy.

PRIME MINISTER

Officials (Transport Costs)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the names of those of his officials who accompanied him on his air travel (a) to the G7 Economic Summit and (b) between Denver and New York. [6286]

The Prime Minister: I was accompanied to (a) The Economic Summit in Denver by: my wife; my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and the Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir John Kerr, HM Ambassador, Washington; Alex Allan—Principal Private Secretary; Jonathan Powell—Chief of Staff; John Holmes—Private Secretary; Alastair Campbell—Press Secretary; plus ten No. 10 support staff; 13 officials and support staff from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; six officials HM Treasury; four members of the Royal Military Police; 17 members of the media; and one US security official.

(b) Between Denver and New York by: my wife; my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs; Sir John Kerr, HM Ambassador, Washington; Alex Allan—Principal Private Secretary; Jonathan Powell—Chief of Staff; John Holmes—Private Secretary; Alastair Campbell—Press Secretary; plus 12 No. 10 support staff; 17 officials and support staff from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; six members of the Royal Military Police; 17 members of the media; and three US security officials.

This is the usual size of delegation to Summits of this nature.

Monarchy

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister what communications have been received in the past two years from other Governments under the Statute of Westminster Act 1931 authorising the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland to enact legislation relating to the succession to the throne. [6561]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 3 July 1997]: As far as I am aware, none, although I cannot answer for the previous Administration.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6027]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 July 1997]: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is considering how best the advice of government departments on Freedom of Information should be treated in a way which contributes to public debate while at the same time preserving the necessary collective responsibility needed in the preparation of major legislation.

WALES

Drugs

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total amount (a) spent and (b) allocated by his Department on tackling the problems relating to drugs in respect of (i) improving international co-operation to reduce supplies from abroad, (ii) increasing the effectiveness of police and Customs enforcement, (iii) maintaining effective deterrents and tight domestic controls, (iv) developing prevention publicity, education and community action and (v) improving treatment and rehabilitation; for (a) 1994, (b) 1995, (c) 1996 and (d) 1997. [4799]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The information is not available in the form requested. The Welsh office is not responsible for all the activities listed. However the total estimated expenditure by the Department on drug and alcohol misuse initiatives is as follows:

Estimated expenditure (£000's)

	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Welsh Office	783	460	378	750
Allocation to health authorities	2,600	[1]2,600	—	—

[1] Health Authority allocations for drug and alcohol misuse ceased to be separately identified from 1995–96.

These figures do not include local authority expenditure and figures for Grant for Education Support and Training (GEST) which cannot be separately for identified.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what review he has undertaken of the benefits of the Cardiff Bay Barrage. [7315]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have undertaken a thorough review of the Cardiff Bay Barrage project. In the course of this review I have received and considered legal opinion and an analysis of the economic impact of the Barrage. In the light of their advice I have concluded that the Barrage should be completed.

Staff Commission for Wales

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of the Staff Commission for Wales. [7316]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Staff Commission was established on the 5 July 1994, under section 40 of the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994, for a period of 3 years. It was established to safeguard employees' interests during local government reorganisation.

The Commission will wind up today under the terms of the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994 (paragraph 13 of Sch. 14).

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Parliamentary All-party Groups

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the Parliamentary all-party groups which the Foreign Office assists financially, indicating the amounts. [6298]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 1 July 1997]: This Department does not assist any Parliamentary all-party groups financially.

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the Treaty agreed at Amsterdam on 17 June to be signed by Ministers; what ratification procedures are necessary in each Member State; and what is the planned date of the Treaty taking effect. [6480]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We expect the Treaty agreed at the Amsterdam European Council to be signed in October of this year. We expect other Member States to ratify the Treaty in accordance with their respective constitutional procedures. In Denmark the ratification process will include a national referendum. The Treaty will enter into force once it has been ratified by each of the Member States.

Qualified Majority Voting

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answers of 16 June, Official Report, columns 14–16, which of the proposals (a) for extension of qualified majority voting in the Council of Ministers and (b) for powers of co-decision with the European Parliament were agreed by the Heads of Government meeting in Amsterdam on 16 to 17 June. [6549]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 23 June at columns 346–47 to the hon. Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) and the answer I gave on 30 June at column 38 to the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley).

Libya

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his response to the motion by the 33rd Conference of the heads of the member states of the Organisation of African Unity calling for the lifting of sanctions against the Libyan people. [6087]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 3 July 1997]: It remains the view of the government that since this crime was committed over Scotland, Scottish jurisdiction is entirely appropriate to deal with it. The quickest way to expedite matters would be for the Lockerbie accused to be handed over to the Scottish jurisdiction.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Tariff and Non-tariff Barriers

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what representations she has received about the reduction of tariff and non-tariff barriers in developing countries. [6373]

Clare Short: Developing countries consistently stress the importance they attach to improved access to EU markets. We are committed to the further opening of markets and we are pressing for improved access both within the EU and in the WTO and other appropriate international fora.

Cash Transfers

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of GNP was transferred to developing countries from the United Kingdom in respect of (a) public and (b) private money in (i) 1992 and (ii) 1996. [6366]

Clare Short: The following table shows details of the percentage of GNP (to nearest 2 decimal places) disbursed as public and private flows to developing countries in 1992 and 1995 (the latest year for which full data are available). The provisional estimate for official development assistance in 1996 is £2,041 million representing 0.27 per cent. of GNP. It should be noted that according to the World Bank, 140 out of 166 developing countries receive a mere 5 per cent. of global private flows.

	1992		1995
	£ Million	Percentage of GNP	£ Million	Percentage of GNP
Public flows	2,010	0.33	2,135	0.30
official development assistance	1,841	0.31	2,000	0.28
other official flows	169	0.03	135	0.02
Private flows	3,443	0.57	5,968	0.84
on market terms	3,100	0.52	5,661	0.80
voluntary grants	343	0.06	307	0.04
Total resource flows	5,453	0.91	8,103	1.14
GNP	601,414	100	709,698	100

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Cull Cow Compensation

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the reduction in farmers' incomes that will result from the most recently announced reduction in the cull cow compensation rate. [6687]

Mr. Rooker: The reduction in farmers' income from compensation resulting from the reduction in the compensation rate for cull cows slaughtered under the Over-Thirty Months Scheme (OTMS) will depend on the number of animals coming forward for slaughter at the end of their productive lives and the weight of such animals. However, for an average dairy farmer culling out 10 cows per year, the reduction in income is likely to be of the order of £375.

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations he had with representatives of the farming industry before his recent announcement of a reduction in the cull cow compensation rate. [6688]

Mr. Rooker: My colleagues and I have had several meetings with representatives of the farming industry since 1 May. While there was no specific consultation on the cut in the compensation rate for cull cows before the announcement, my colleagues and I are fully aware of beef farmers' concerns over the state of the industry, and their views on the Over-Thirty Months Scheme in particular.

Food Labelling

Mr. Tony Colman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that labelling of nutritional information on food packaging by supermarkets is accurate. [6421]

Mr. Rooker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon Friend the Member for Cleethorpes (Shona McIsaac) on 16 June, Official Report, column 69.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Royal Observatories

Ms Hodge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement about the future of the Royal Observatories. [7314]

Mr. Battle: The Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council (PPARC) has decided to concentrate the work it funds at the Royal Greenwich Observatory (RGO), which is based at Cambridge, and the Royal Observatory Edinburgh (ROE) in a new UK Astronomy Technology Centre (UKATC) at Edinburgh. This new name will better reflect the fact that the Royal Observatories are now really observatories in name only. Their main function is to provide technological support for the telescopes operated by PPARC on behalf of British astronomers.

A substantial amount of money will be freed up as a result of this decision amounting to £2.4 million per annum over the next four years and at least £4 million per annum thereafter. This sum, which is equivalent to approximately 20 per cent. of the budget for astronomy grants, will be re-invested in basic science. It will fund grants to astronomers doing exciting new science in our universities. In addition, I am confident the new UKATC will benefit greatly from the increased efficiency and better co-operation between scientists which will result from combining the RGO and ROE programmes.

This decision will allow PPARC to reorganise the Royal Observatories in the way which best meets their scientific requirements. I believe that, as the responsible Research Council, they should have the freedom to manage their research facilities efficiently and effectively. PPARC will develop this in consultation with the unions and other interested parties. Under the previous administration, PPARC was bound to implement the conclusions of the 1995 Prior Options Review of the Royal Observatories that the management of the United Kingdom telescopes and the delivery of the instrumentation programme currently provided by the Royal Observatories should be subject to competitive tendering. PPARC have reviewed the situation in the light of developments since then and have advised me to release them from this obligation. I have decided to follow this advice in line with our long-standing opposition to dogmatic privatisation.

The concentration at Edinburgh will take place over some years. The RGO is an historic institution with a great tradition that has already survived two changes of location. I am asking PPARC to explore every possible avenue for keeping the institution alive. Nevertheless, this decision will lead to some job losses. Therefore I have asked PPARC to make every effort to help anyone who loses their job to find alternative employment.

I have laid a copy of the report on which PPARC's advice was based and a copy of my letter to the Chairman of PPARC in the Library of the House.

Task Forces

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the task forces established by her Department or in co-operation with her Department, together with their responsibilities and compositions. [5996]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 30 June 1997]: The following task forces have been established by the DTI since 1 May:

Interdepartmental Task Force on Competitiveness in Europe

Responsibilities: To advise on the implementation of the Government's manifesto objectives to complete the Single Market and promote flexible labour markets across the EU.

Composition: Chaired by Lord Simon of Highbury (Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe), and including Ministers and officials from the Department of Trade and Industry, HM Treasury, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the Department for Education and Employment, the Ministry of Defence, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Scottish Office, the Home Office and the Department of Social Security.

Low Pay Commission

Responsibilities: To examine the options for the nature and level of a national minimum wage.

Composition: Chaired by Professor George Bain. Other members to be decided.

Export Forum

Responsibilities: To review the effectiveness of current official export promotion programmes and to make recommendations.

Composition: Chaired by Director General Export Promotion, DTI, with representatives from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, HM Treasury, Departments of Health, Environment, Transport and the Regions, and National Heritage, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Export Credits Guarantee Department, the British Council, the British Overseas Trade Board, the Confederation of British Industry, the Trades Union Congress, the DTI Overseas Projects Board, British Chambers of Commerce, British Invisibles, the Chemical Industries Association, Business Links and three small exporting companies.

In addition to participating in task forces, the Department uses a variety of methods for developing its policies and for cooperating with other government department.

Arms Sales (Saudi Arabia)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many swords have been exported to Saudi Arabia since 1992. [5504]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 26 June 1997]: The information requested is not available because the system of classification used to record trade does not separately identify swords.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what reports her Department has received from British Energy on the immobilisation strategy for separated plutonium. [6408]

Mr. Battle: None. This is a commercial matter for British Energy—subject to complying with the relevant regulatory safeguards.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of the payments covered by the contract between BNFL and British Energy announced on 4 June relates to (a) spent fuel charges and (b) fuel fabrication charges. [6406]

Mr. Battle: Details of the contracts between BNFL and British Energy are commercially confidential and are a matter for the companies involved.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of the spent fuel covered by the contract between BNFL and British Energy announced on 4 July will be (a) stored, (b) wet stored and (c) reprocessed. [6405]

Mr. Battle: Details of the contracts between BNFL and British Energy, which was announced on 4 June, are commercially confidential. I understand, however, that initially an estimated 800 tonnes will be reprocessed. How the remaining spent fuel will be dealt with is a matter for the companies involved although it will include a mixture of reprocessing and storage.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans BNFL has notified to her Department relating to the use of plutonium not produced at Sellafield in the proposed Sellafield MOX plant. [6404]

Mr. Battle: The Sellafield MOX plant is designed to produce Mixed Oxide (MOX) fuel for BNFL's customers from the recycled plutonium and uranium separated during reprocessing. In the main, it is envisaged that the Sellafield MOX Plant will utilise plutonium arising from reprocessing of spent fuels at THORP which belong to overseas customers. The Sellafield MOX plant has the capability to blend uranium and plutonium which has been separated at other reprocessing plants. I understand, however, that there are no current plans to utilise this capability.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated annual cost of storing (a) a cubic metre of vitrified high-level waste and (b) a container of vitrified high-level waste in the vitrified product store at BNFL's Sellafield site. [6412]

Mr. Battle: Once spent fuel has been reprocessed and the reusable uranium and plutonium extracted the small proportion of high level waste can be vitrified. The cost and subsequent charge to customers for storing vitrified waste is a commercial matter between BNFL and its customers.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what cash resources are held by BNFL to meet its share of the nuclear liabilities arising at its sites. [6411]

Mr. Battle: Details of the funding currently held by BNFL to meet its nuclear liabilities are published in the company's Annual Report and Accounts. The last available figures from the 1995–96 report are given as £1.12 billion. The difference between this and the discounted figure of £1.58 billion, given in the report, will be provided over remaining plant lives. Full details are provided in the Company's Annual Report and Accounts, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if BNFL makes cash payments into a segregated fund for the purpose of meeting its share of the nuclear liabilities arising at its sites. [6410]

Mr. Battle: BNFL, which is a publically owned company, does not make payments into a segregated fund for its nuclear liabilities. The company is, however, required to ensure that the resources called for will be available. Investment and management of these funds is carried out by BNFL in accordance with Treasury guidelines. Details of, and information relating to, provisions for total liabilities for which BNFL is liable are published in the Company's Annual Report and Accounts, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the funding arrangements established by BNFL to enable it to meet its share of the nuclear liabilities arising at its sites. [6409]

Mr. Battle: BNFL is required to make full and adequate provision for its liabilities. The Company undertakes an annual review of its waste management and decommissioning liabilities and then ensures that, in the light of this, it makes proper provision for the resources estimated. BNFL's published accounts for 1995–96 indicate the BNFL's share of the costs of nuclear liabilities was £2.6 billion (undiscounted) or £1.6 billion (discounted), of which £1.1 billion has been provided for to date in the Company's accounts.

The provisions are expressed at current price levels and are based on the latest technical assessments of the processes and methods likely to be used in the future. They represent estimates derived from a combination of the latest technical knowledge available, existing legislation and regulations and commercial agreements.

Full details of future liabilities for which BNFL are liable and the basis of providing for them, are contained in the Company's Annual Report and Accounts, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Post (Thefts)

Dr. Vis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the figures for theft of post entrusted to the Royal Mail in each of the last five years; what steps are being taken to prevent such theft; how many prosecutions there have been in each year; and if he will list the figures for the Finchley and Golders Green constituency. [6293]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I understand from the Post Office that Royal Mail handles in excess of 17.5 billion items of mail each year of which only a tiny fraction is claimed not to have been delivered. That tiny fraction includes mail which has been delivered but subsequently stolen, mail which has been delivered but fraudulently claimed not to have been, misdelivered mail and incorrectly addressed mail delivered as addressed.

Theft of mail is a criminal offence which Royal Mail takes very seriously. For security reasons, it would not be appropriate to disclose the active measures which Royal Mail undertakes, and continually reviews, in order to prevent the theft of mail.

Figures for the number of mail items stolen and the number of prosecutions is a commercial matter for Royal Mail. This is not information which other mail companies would disclose.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Middleton Review

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on what date he expects to receive Sir Peter Middleton's review of civil justice and legal aid reforms; and if he will make a statement. [5971]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has asked Sir Peter Middleton to produce a preliminary report by the end of September.

House Purchase

Mr. Todd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he plans to take to improve the protection of purchases and sellers of homes in England and Wales from (a) gazumping and (b) late withdrawals before contract. [6070]

Mr. Hoon: Work will shortly be under way across a number of Government Departments co-operating together which will look closely at the problem of gazumping and will lead to detailed proposals which will be in the interests of everyone involved in the sale and purchase of homes.

DEFENCE

Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Strategic Defence Review will include the science and technology division of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency. [6842]

Dr. Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Colchester (Mr. Russell) on 24 June 1997, Official Report, columns 422–23.

Asbestos

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what has been the (a) highest, (b) lowest and (c) average award of compensation before repayment of any DSS benefits to the Compensation Recovery Unit in respect of asbestos-related claims by MOD (i) civilian and (ii) former civilian staff in the last five years for (1) pleural plaques, (2) diffuse pleural thickening, (3) asbestosis, (4) mesothelioma and (5) lung cancer; [6492]

(2) how many claims by MOD civilian or former civilian staff are outstanding in relation to illnesses resulting from alleged exposure to asbestos during their service with (a) the Royal Navy, (b) the Royal Air Force and (c) and Army; [6489]

(3) how many claims made in the last 15 years in respect of MOD civilian (a) staff and (b) former staff have resulted in financial compensation for (i) pleural plaques, (ii) diffuse pleural thickening, (iii) asbestosis, (iv) mesothelioma and (v) lung cancer attributable to exposure to asbestos during their service with (1) the Royal Navy, (2) the Royal Air Force and (3) the Army. [6487]

Dr. Reid: My Department's computer records do not show the particular asbestos-related disease or diseases that claimants have allegedly contracted, or whether a civilian or former civilian member of staff claiming compensation was ever in the Armed Forces, or if employed in support of the Armed Forces, with which Service. The claimants' employment status at the time the claim was submitted and at the time settled is not readily available. Information on employment history and status could only be provided in respect of the more recent claimants and then only at disproportionate cost. Documentation on claims from civilian and former civilian employees is routinely destroyed three years after the claims has been settled.

Computer based information in respect of the number of claims received from civilian or former civilian staff only goes back to 1 April 1985. In the period 1 April 1985 to 30 April 1997, my Department received 2,286 claims for compensation for asbestos-related disease alleged to have been caused by asbestos exposure while the claimants were employed as MOD civilians. Of these claims, 1,797 have resulted in the payment of compensation. On 30 April 1997, 303 claims were outstanding.

In the five years since 1 May 1992, the highest amount paid in compensation before repayment of DSS benefits, in respect of a single claim to a civilian or former civilian MOD employee was £298,500; the lowest was £110; and the average is £20,344.

Defence Spending

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is his policy to follow the previous Government's defence spending plans for the year 1999–00. [6355]

Dr. Reid: The Government has said that it is committed to living within the spending plans of the previous administration for the first two years. No decisions have been taken for 1999–00.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the annual saving to public funds of bringing the United Kingdom's defence spending as a percentage of gross domestic product into line with the average of European countries which are members of NATO. [6838]

Dr. Reid: To bring the percentage of gross domestic product accounted for by defence spending to the level of the average for the European members of NATO would require a reduction of around £5 billion a year in the UK defence budget.

Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what meetings he has had with representatives of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament. [6423]

Dr. Reid: Mr. Dave Knight, Chair of CND, attended a Seminar on the policy baseline for the Strategic Defence Review in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 3 July at which both my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Defence and the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs were present.

Regimental System

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider changes to the regimental system as part of the Strategic Defence Review. [6839]

Dr. Reid: The Strategic Defence Review will examine how the Army should be structured to meet our nation's interests and commitments, taking full account of the recognized strengths of the Regimental System. It would, however, be premature to speculate whether the review will alter any aspect of the system.

Bastille Day Parade

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which units of Her Majesty's armed forces will take part in the Bastille Day parade in France on 14 July. [6780]

Dr. Reid: My Department is not aware of any units of Her Majesty's Armed Forces taking part in the Bastille Day parade in France on 14 July.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Buses (Transponders)

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what requirements exist for bus operators running buses in central London to carry (a) transponders, (b) transponders compatible with those of other bus companies in central London and (c) transponders that can be used in conjunction with electronic time of arrival systems at bus stops. [6431]

Ms Glenda Jackson: This is an operational matter for London Transport Buses. I understand that 21 per cent. of bus services in London are now covered by automatic vehicle location (AVL) systems, almost all of which can be linked to the Countdown electronic passenger information system at bus stops. By the end of 1999 almost all of London's buses should have AVL. In addition, 65 per cent. of buses already carry separate transponders to operate systems to provide priority at some 300 traffic signals, principally in outer London.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's policy in respect of traffic signals to be activated by transponders in buses. [6432]

Ms Jackson: We encourage local highway authorities, in conjunction with bus operators, to look for ways of giving priority to buses in traffic. This is an important way in which buses can be made a more attractive choice of travel. The use of transponders to give priority to buses at traffic signals is one means of doing this.

Northern Line

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement concerning the progress of the proposed PFI scheme between London Underground and Seeboard Powerlink/BICC for improvements to the Northern Line power system. [6488]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Negotiations between London Underground and the Powerlink consortium are still taking place. London Underground are optimistic that a deal will be concluded. If it goes ahead, the "Power" PFI project will include a substantial upgrade of the Northern Line's power system by the contractor, as well as improvements to meet the rest of the network's power needs.

National Bus Company Pension Fund

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much money was received by the Government in 1986 from the National Bus Company Pension Fund; and what estimate he has made of the current value of such a sum appropriately invested. [6808]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A total of £121.8 million was paid to the Department of Transport in 1990 (not 1986) on the winding up of the two National Bus Company pension funds. An estimate of what that sum might now be worth had it been available for investment would depend entirely on the assumptions used.

National Road Traffic Forecasts

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to review the NRTF means of appraisal for traffic generation. [6873]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department's advice on traffic generation is contained in Volume 12 of the Design Manual for Roads and Bridges, Section 2, Part 2, Guidance on Induced Traffic. This was revised in February 1997, following experience with the advice issued in December 1994 which implemented recommendations made by the Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment. There are no proposals for further revisions at present. The National Road Traffic Forecasts are a forecast of traffic growth, not a means of appraisal.

M25 Widening

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the projected increases of emissions of (a) carbon monoxide, (b) nitrogen oxide and (c) PM10 particles consequent on the proposed widening of the M25 between junctions 12 to 15; and if he will make a statement. [6339]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 1 July 1997]: Taking 1991 as the base year and 2010 as the forecast year, morning peak hour carbon monoxide emissions from vehicles on the M25 are predicted to decrease by approximately 72 per cent. with the widening scheme compared to 70 per cent. without the scheme. Emissions of oxides of nitrogen are predicted to decrease by approximately 84 per cent. compared to 72 per cent. without the scheme. PM10 concentrations are predicted to decrease by 38 per cent. compared to 51 per cent. without the scheme.

Buses (Standing Passengers)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will prohibit buses travelling on motorways from carrying standing passengers; and if he will make a statement. [6349]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Clearly, the risk of injury to passengers in an accident is minimised if they are seated and wearing seatbelts. In the light of this we will be looking at whether the current rules for standing passengers in buses on motorways need further consideration.

HEALTH

NHS Appointments (Non-attenders)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are being taken to reduce the number of patients who fail to attend NHS appointments. [4901]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health has supported a series of regional seminars to raise awareness of the issues in the National Health Service about patients who do not attend (DNA) their out-patient appointments and to share good practice. We will also be publishing shortly DNA figures for individual trusts in the 1996–97 NHS Performance Tables.

Conductive Education

Mr. Pike: To aks the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the benefits of conductive education; and if he will make a statement. [6350]

Mr. Boateng: The Department of Health has not commissioned research into conductive education. The Department for Education and Employment commissioned research by the University of Birmingham, published in 1993, to evaluate the effectiveness of conductive education provided at the National Institute of Conductive Education. This found no evidence that children receiving conductive education progressed better than comparable children at maintained special schools.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6032]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister today.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 7 July 1997

HEALTH

Information Technology

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for (i) increasing the use of information technology in communications and information management in the health service and (ii) achieving better value for money and functional effectiveness in these investments. [6069]

Mr. Milburn: The role of information technology in the National Health Service is currently under consideration.

HIV Tests

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances HIV tests may be carried out on health professionals without their explicit and informed consent. [6593]

Mr. Milburn: HIV tests should not be carried out on health professionals without their explicit and informed consent. In very rare and exceptional circumstances where there is a serious public health risk, a magistrate may, on the application of the local authority supported by a certificate from the local authority's medical adviser, order that a person believed to have suffered or to be suffering from a specified disease, including AIDS, or carrying an organism capable of causing the disease, be medically examined and tested.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) annual and (b) other disclosure he proposes in respect of profits made by consortiums involved in NHS PFI schemes. [6554]

Mr. Milburn: The private sector companies which comprise a consortium involved in a Private Finance Initiative project with a National Health Service trust usually establish a new corporate entity known as a "special purpose vehicle". This is a limited company whose sole purpose and activity will be to sign the contract and take on the responsibilities under that contract. As a limited company it must observe the provisions of the Companies Acts and publish annual accounts; these must be lodged with the Registrar of Companies where they are available for public inspection.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if consortiums involved in NHS PFI schemes for NHS trusts are restricted in their ability to market or promote private health insurance. [6552]

Mr. Milburn: There is no specific national policy in place which restricts consortia involved in private finance initiative projects with National Health Service trusts from marketing or promoting private health insurance. However, all NHS trusts must ensure that the interests of NHS patients remain paramount and that the public service values of accountability, probity and openness underpin all decisions they take, as set out in the guidance documents "Code of Conduct and Accountability" (1994) and "Standards of business conduct for NHS staff" (1993). Particular emphasis is placed based on identifying and avoiding possible conflicts of interest and inducements.

Individual NHS trusts are required to draw up a local code of conduct and accountability which must be based on the national guidelines and take into account local circumstances.

Junior Doctors' Hours

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what resources the Government are providing to implement the recent agreement on junior doctors' hours. [6592]

Mr. Milburn: In 1997–98 £1.6 million central funding has been provided to support local medical workforce advisory groups and New Deal task forces, who will work together to reduce junior doctors' hours.

Higher Specialist Training

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Government intends to make funding the implementation of the Calman report on higher specialist training a priority for purchasing authorities. [6595]

Mr. Milburn: Implementation of the reforms of higher specialist training was agreed by the previous Government in December 1993 on the basis that it would be managed at a pace and in a manner which minimised additional costs and enabled these to be absorbed. Continuing the phased implementation of the specialist registrar grade is a specific objective for health authorities and National Health Service trusts in the Priorities and Planning Guidance for the NHS: 1997–98.

NHS Financial Review

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are the terms of reference of the fundamental review of NHS spending; [6542]

(2) which (a) ministers and (b) officials of his Department sit on the fundamental review of NHS spending panel; [6544]

(3) what is the role of the Treasury in the fundamental review of NHS funding; [6543]

(4) what is the timetable for reporting the conclusions of the fundamental review of NHS spending. [6483]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, in his statement to the House on 11 June, column 1143, said that terms of reference for Departmental reviews would be published shortly; that the review would take 12 months to complete, and its conclusions would inform a new set of public spending plans for the rest of this Parliament. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, said to the House on 25 June, column 916, that the review would involve Health Department officials, National Health Service staff and people from outside both services, and that Ministers would be involved at all stages. Treasury officials are also involved in the review.

Mr. Tony Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the health authority funding arrangements. [6419]

Mr. Milburn: An announcement will be made in due course.

Prescription Fraud

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the annual cost of prescription fraud in Bolton, West; [6473]

(2) what measures Bolton NHS Trust has taken to tackle prescription fraud; [6472]

(3) what estimate he has made of the savings which will be made in Bolton West due to the proposed measures to tackle prescription fraud. [6471]

Mr. Milburn: The report of the Efficiency Scrutiny into Prescription Fraud, which was published last month, estimated levels of prescription fraud in England and Wales as £85 million to £115 million per year. It is estimated that the loss of revenue from patient charge evasion in Bolton Family Health Services Authorities in 1995–96 was approximately £0.1 million. We are not able to estimate the level of other forms of prescription fraud for the period.

While we are in the process of implementing a number of measures aimed at reducing the level of prescription fraud as well as improving its detection, it is impossible to estimate the amount of savings that will result in particular health authorities.

Guidance on the secure handling of prescriptions has been issued to all hospitals. We do not hold centrally information on the measures being taken by Bolton National Health Service Trust to tackle prescription fraud, but my hon. Friend may wish to contact the chairman of the Bolton Hospitals NHS Trust, Mrs. Peacock, Royal Bolton Hospital, Minerva Road, Farnworth, Bolton BL4 OJR.

Vitamins and Dietary Supplements

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on prescription policy, with special reference to the continuing availability of vitamin and dietary supplements on prescription. [6418]

Mr. Milburn: Any vitamins and dietary supplements which are licensed as medicines under the Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations Etc) Regulations 1994 and the Medicines Act 1968 may be prescribed on the National Health Service by general medical practitioners unless they are listed in schedule 10 to the National Health Service (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992. Unlicensed vitamins and dietary supplements, unless they are listed in this same schedule, may also be prescribed on the NHS by general practitioners but such prescriptions may be subject to challenge by health authorities who may, subject to an appeals mechanism, require the practitioner to pay for them.

Medical Students

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the Government plans to implement the medical work force standing advisory committee recommendation on increasing medical student numbers. [6591]

Mr. Milburn: The Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee's second report (June 1995) recommended an increase in medical student intake to 4,970 by the year 2000. This is currently being implemented by the Higher Education Funding Councils ahead of schedule and within existing undergraduate medical schools. Figures are provided in the table.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the actions he proposes to take to ensure that guidance issued to health trusts on the allocations of power-assisted wheelchairs to severely disabled children is properly implemented. [6737]

Mr. Boateng: The Health Service Guidance about powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs, which was issued in May 1996, states clearly that the National Health Service should provide powered chairs for severely disabled people, including children, who could benefit from them. It is the duty of the health authority to assess local needs and determine local eligibility criteria for the supply of powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs, within the broad national framework set out by the NHS Executive. One of the criteria is that the disabled person should be able to handle the chair safely. It is therefore a matter of local decision whether individual disabled children are deemed to be capable of handling a powered chair safely. Health authorities are not allowed to refuse to supply a powered wheelchair solely on age grounds.

NHS Doctors

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors were in the service of the NHS in 1996; and how many he estimates the service will require in each of the next five years. [6745]

Mr. Milburn: The statistics from the Department of Health Census of Hospital Medical and Dental Workforce of 30 September 1996 should be published at the end of July. The number of doctors working in general medical services on 1 October 1996 are given in the table.

	Number
Unrestricted principals	26,855
Restricted principals	115
Assistants	662
Trainees	1,305
All practitioners	28,937

Since February 1995, the Specialist Workforce Advisory Group (SWAG) has been advising Ministers on the numbers of higher specialist trainees needed in each hospital speciality in England and Wales. This is in order to ensure sufficient suitably trained doctors for consultant posts over the following five years. Because the factors affecting requirements are complex, SWAG reviews each specialty annually. At present, it does not review trainees in general practice, but there are proposals to do so.

SWAG recommended an additional 1,500 higher specialist trainees for 1996–97. For 1997–98, SWAG's recommended increases were within a range of 250 to 850.

NHS Trusts and Health Authorities

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will name each member of each NHS trust and health authority in Nottinghamshire; when they were appointed; and when their appointment terminates. [6794]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is as follows:

Surrogacy

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for the review of the law on surrogacy; and if the public and interested bodies will be able to make submissions to the review team. [6433]

Ms Jowell: We expect the review team to issue a consultation document to a wide range of interested bodies later this summer, with copies being available to anyone else who asks for it. We shall make an announcement about the availability of the document and details of how to obtain a copy at the time it is issued. Following a sufficient period to allow responses to be made, we expect to receive the team's report early next year.

Trust Boards

Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many working days notice were given to hon. Members to make suggestions to him as to appointments to trust boards; and if he will make a statement. [6775]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health's letter to hon. Members inviting nominations for appointments to trust boards was an addition to the normal consultation processes, designed to widen the field of candidates to include more members of the local community. His letter of 26 June asked for nominations to reach him by 7 July, allowing seven working days in which to respond.

Hospital Trusts (Disabled Employees)

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many disabled people are employed by each hospital trust in England and Wales. [7059]

Mr. Boateng: All employers in the National Health Service with over 20 staff must comply with the Disability Discrimination Act of 1995, which changed the definition of disability from that previously used. We are working with the NHS to consider how to monitor both the letter and the spirit of the law. Historic figures under the previous definition of disability are available in the annual "Employment Gazette/Labour Market Trends", copies of which are available in the Library.

Rural Health Care

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the Government's definition of rural for the purposes of health care provision; and if the definition used is the same as that set out on page 9 of the Department of Health publication of November 1996, Developing Health and Social Care in Rural England. [6960]

Mr. Milburn: There is no generally used definition of "rural" for the purposes of health care provision.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will publish her Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6036]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 4 July 1997 by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, Official Report, column 294.

Montserrat

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the recent natural disasters in Montserrat. [6416]

Clare Short: The Soufriere Hill volcano has been active since July 1995. There was an escalation in volcanic activity on 25 June that resulted in the loss of 8 lives. My department immediately deployed the services of 4 helicopters, for search and rescue purposes. 17 people were rescued.

Following an on-the-spot assessment, my department gave immediate approval for vital emergency work such as setting up communications equipment and maintaining fuel and food supplies and sanitation. With the airport out of commission, a daily ferry service was set up operating from the Little Bay Jetty (recently constructed with DFID funds) to Antigua for the use of foot passengers and for the transportation of goods to ensure safe and sustainable conditions in the north of the island. HMS Liverpool was also sent to the scene and is assisting in the rescue effort. Further temporary shelter has been identified as the highest priority for immediate action and we are looking urgently at the best way of providing it.

HMG is fully committed to providing the people of Montserrat with a secure future, and we are planning a rapid consultation with them on the options.

Uganda

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to secure the early implementation of Uganda's debt relief under the highly indebted poor countries initiative. [6816]

Clare Short: The World Bank, IMF and Paris Club of government creditors have agreed that, on the basis of the government's continued implementation of its economic reform programme, Uganda will receive debt relief in April 1998. My Department is ready to help the African Development Bank meet some of its costs in giving debt relief in Uganda.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Investment (Sustainable Development)

Mr. Tony Colman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she is taking to ensure that the OECD Multilateral Agreement on Investment takes account of the principles of Agenda 21. [6391]

Mrs. Roche: The Government will work to ensure that its commitments to sustainable development and environmental protection are fully taken account of in the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. We are fully aware of the concerns raised by NGOs in this respect and support consultations with them as the negations continue.

Supervisory Bodies

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidelines govern the ethical conduct of the recognised supervisory bodies; and who ensures their compliance with such guidelines. [6468]

Mr. Ian McCartney: There are no specific guidelines on the ethical conduct of the Recognised Supervisory Bodies (RSBs). Complaints about their general conduct are a matter for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

The standards which must be applied by the RSBs in their regulation of those auditors for whom they are responsible are set out in Schedule 11 to the Companies Act 1989. These include standards covering professional integrity and independence, procedures for the investigation of complaints and procedures for discipline. Section 37 of that Act gives my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade the power to require information from RSBs for the exercise of her functions under Part II of the Act. Reports which are received under this section are laid in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

Money Laundering

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions accountants and auditors have notified the banking, building societies and financial services regulators of suspicious transactions, (a) with and (b) without the knowledge of their audit clients. [6477]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The National Criminal Intelligence Service (NICS) is the authority which, under the guidance supporting the money-laundering legislation, must be notified of suspicious transaction involving money-laundering. The number of such reports received in the past five years was as follows:

Year

1995: 44

1994: 6

1992: 1.

It is a criminal offence for the client to be informed that such a notification has been made.

Figures for the sources of other notifications of suspicious transactions to the regulatory authorities are not held by the authorities concerned.

Post Office (Quadrant Catering)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultation was undertaken with trade unions prior to her Department's announcement of a proposed private finance participation in the Quadrant Catering operation in the Post Office; and if she will make a statement. [6602]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Consultations with trade unions on matters relating to the Post Office are the responsibility of Post Office management. The Department's approval of the proposed joint venture arrangement between Quadrant and a private sector partner is part of the process of granting greater commercial freedom to the Post Office in line with our Election manifesto commitment. A joint venture arrangement will open up wider job and career opportunities within the larger organisation to all Quadrant staff.

PRIME MINISTER

Regional Aid

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Prime Minister which Department has primary responsibility for regional selective assistance and other forms of regional aid. [6297]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 1 July 1997]: My right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade, has primary responsibility for the Industrial Development Act 1982 which provides the powers for granting financial assistance to industry assisted areas.

WPC Yvonne Fletcher

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 24 June, Official Report, column 677, what factors underlie the length of time to be taken over the police investigation into the contents of the Channel 4 programmes relating to the death of WPC Yvonne Fletcher. [6174]

The Prime Minister: The Metropolitan police's review of the contents of the programme involves a good deal of detailed analysis of the extensive documentation already generated by their investigation.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the letter written on his behalf by Mr. Philip Barton, Private Secretary at 10 Downing Street, to Mrs. Pamela Dix, Secretary of UK Families Flight 103, what is the result of the careful consideration he undertook to give to representations received about Lockerbie; and what is the result of the continuing discussion of the issues involved with the United States administration. [6143]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answers that I gave him on 18 June, Official Report, column 309. The Lockerbie evidence is kept under continual review. The United Kingdom, along with the United States, will argue for the UN sanctions against Libya to be maintained until Libya complies with the UN Security Council resolutions.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what response he has sent to the letter of 22 June to him from ex-police surgeon Dr. David Fieldhouse of Bradford, about the circumstances of the body count after the destruction of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie. [6652]

The Prime Minister: Dr. Fieldhouse's letter is being studied carefully. A reply will be sent shortly.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what response he has sent to the letter of 23 June to him from Peter Anderson of Simpson Marwick WS about the destruction of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie and the legal implications. [6653]

The Prime Minister: Mr. Anderson's letter raises a number of points about the Lockerbie investigation. Those responsible for that investigation are currently studying the letter carefully. A reply will be sent shortly.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the proposal made to the UN Security Council by the Secretary General of the Arab League and the Secretary General of the Organisation of African Unity that the Libyans accused of the Lockerbie Pan Am bombing be tried by Scottish judges under Scottish law in a neutral country. [6654]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave to him and the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East (Sir Teddy Taylor), on 18 June, Official Report, columns 309–10.

Tibet

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions took place between British and Chinese representatives during his recent visit to Hong Kong on the subject of Tibet; and if he will make a statement. [6900]

The Prime Minister: At the Hong Kong handover, my right hon. Friend, the Foreign Secretary, and I met Chinese leaders for the first time since taking office. This was an historic occasion and provided a unique opportunity for general discussion of our future relations, including human rights. It also laid the foundations for more substantive discussions, including on Tibet.

Millennium

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister how many representations he has received (a) in favour and (b) against the proposals to construct the Millennium Dome. [6897]

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations expressing a wide range of opinion about the Millennium Dome.

Budget Leaks

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Prime Minister if Ministers disclosed to journalists any information regarding the Budget proposals for ACT prior to the Budget statement; and if he will make a statement. [7068]

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will make a statement on contact between his Ministers and journalists on the Financial Times prior to the Budget statement; [7075]

(2) what breaches of Budget secrecy took place prior to the Budget statement; and if Ministers were responsible. [7073]

(3) what inquiries have been initiated concerning possible premature disclosure of information in the Chancellor's Budget Statement; [7123]

(4) if (a) Ministers and (b) their (i) officials and (ii) advisers disclosed details of the Budget proposals for (1) ACT, (2) the five-year deficit reduction programme and (3) market reaction to the Budget prior to the Budget statement. [7074]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the replies that I gave to the right hon. Member, the Leader of the Opposition, on 2 July, Official Report, columns 288–89.

TREASURY

Overseas Accounts

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the use by the Treasury of bank accounts overseas, indicating (a) what funds are held overseas, (b) in which countries these funds are held and (c) how much interest has been raised in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [5019]

Mrs. Helen Liddell: The Government's gold and foreign currency reserves are managed by the Bank of England in the Exchange Equalisation Account. Some of the assets of the Account are held with overseas banks. For reasons of security and confidentiality, no further details are published. Under section 4 of the Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979, the Comptroller and Auditor General is required to certify to the House of Commons that operations on, and transactions in connection with, the Account have been in accordance with the provisions of the legislation.

Housing Conditions

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated regarding the relationship between the level of capital investment in social housing and the level of the housing benefit budget. [5295]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Under-Secretary with responsibility for London and construction, my hon. Friend the Member for Greenwich and Woolwich (Mr. Raynsford), on 26 June 1997, column 593.

Beer (Illegal Imports)

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he proposes to take to reduce the volume of illegally imported beer. [6235]

Dawn Primarolo: A review aimed at reducing alcohol and tobacco smuggling and fraud was announced on Budget day. This will look at finding new ways to protect the revenue and reduce illegal activity and consider health issues. In the meantime Customs continues to take action to counter fraud and smuggling.

Landowners (Tax Exemptions)

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the cost to the Exchequer of landowners' tax exemption for allowing some public access to their land in each of the last three years. [5970]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Estimated cost (£ million)
1994–95	negligible
1995–96	5
1996–97	5

(These estimate are particularly tentative).

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what regulations there are governing the advertisement of access to land owned by landowners who have negotiated conditional exemption from tax payment. [5969]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 6 June, column 278.

Building Society Conversions

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of money released in the current calendar year from building society conversions; and what assessment he has made of its effect on (a) consumer demand, (b) interest rates and (c) the balance of payments. [6240]

Mrs. Liddell: A full account of recent economic developments and prospects, including the effect of money released from building society conversions and takeovers, was published with the Budget on 2 July.

Sanitary Protection (VAT)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the reduction or removal of VAT from sanitary protection; and if he will make a statement. [5821]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 July 1997]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Bury, South (Mr. Lewis) on 18 June, column 230.

Erb's Palsy

Dr. Brand: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what statistics his Department collates on the incidence of Erb's palsy; and what are the figures for its incidence in each of the last 10 years. [6364]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Dr. Peter Brand, dated 7 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply, as Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), to your recent parliamentary question on Erb's palsy.

The ONS collects information through the National Congenital Anomaly System. This system, which is voluntary at all stages, has been monitoring congenital anomalies in England and Wales since 1964. The primary purpose of this system is to detect changes in the frequency of reporting any particular anomaly or group of anomalies rather than trying to estimate the prevalence at birth.

The following table shows babies notified with Erb's Palsy[1], numbers and rates per 10,000 live and stillbirths, England and Wales 1986–1995.

	Number	Rate

Unemployment (Chipping Barnet)

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the registered number of unemployed in (a) the former Chipping Barnet constituency area and (b) the new enlarged area for (i) April and (ii) May; and if he will make a statement. [6425]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. Tim Holt to Sir Sydney Chapman, dated 7 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on the numbers registered unemployed in the former Chipping Barnet constituency area and the new enlarged area.

The data you have requested can only be derived from the monthly count of people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance or National Insurance credits). Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign on the designated day are counted.

The data you have requested is shown in the attached table.

The 1991 Chipping Barnet constituency contains the following wards:

Arkley
Brunswick Park
East Barnet
Hadley
Totteridge

In addition to the wards listed above, the 1995 constituency also contains Friern Barnet.

Number of persons claiming unemployment-related benefits, April and May 1997

	Former Chipping Barnet constituency area (1991 boundaries)	New Chipping Barnet constituency area (1995 boundaries)
April 1997	1,597	1,955
May 1997	1,541	1,881

Economic Stability

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of whether economic stability is a precondition for high and stable levels of growth and employment; and if he will assess the correlation between those factors in the period 1977 to 1997. [6845]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer my hon. Friend to the Financial Statement and Budget Report laid before the House on 2 July, and in particular chapters 1 and 3.

Internet

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to amend the rules relating to VAT on commercial activities conducted on the Internet; and if he will make a statement. [6273]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 3 July 1997]: Customs are closely involved in initiatives with both the European Union and the OECD which are seeking to identify solutions to the perceived problems with trading over the Internet. It is important that any changes made are done so in concert with other countries so that the risk of double or non-taxation of these supplies is avoided.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money he estimates is lost to the Treasury by people failing to pay duties on commercial transactions conducted over the Internet; and if he will make a statement. [6274]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 3 July 1997]: There is no reliable estimate of revenue lost in this way.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy in respect of reducing VAT on equipment specially (a) designed and (b) adapted for disabled use. [6430]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 3 July 1997]: There is already VAT relief on equipment designed solely for use by disabled people and the service of adapting goods for use by them. Such supplies are zero-rated for VAT purposes.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

County Court Closures

Mr. Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many county courts have been closed in each of the last five years. [6237]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Keith Hill, dated 7 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about how many county courts have closed in each of the last five years.

The figures are as follows:

1993: 5 court closures

1994: 16 court closures

1995: 8 court closures

1996: 13 court closures

1997: 2 court closures (to date).

Although 44 courts have been closed in total, 15 of those still provide a service for office callers but have no hearing facilities. Additionally, 19 of the courts closed have undertaken to continue local District Judges sittings in suitable accommodation subject to demand.

Small Claims

Mr. Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions a party to a case which is subject to automatic reference to small claims arbitration has (a) applied for and (b) been granted an application for recission of the reference in the last 12 months. [6229]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Keith Hill, dated 7 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of occasions a party whose case has been referred to automatic small claims arbitration have applied for, and been granted, recission.

The number of occasions in the 12 months from April 1996 up to March 1997 when a party has applied for recission to automatic arbitration is 738. The actual number who were granted recission is 622.

Litigants

Mr. Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will estimate the total number of litigants entitled to a refund of court fees paid between 15 January and 13 March and the total cost to the Court Service of repaying fees. [6231]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the Hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Keith Hill, dated 7 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the numbers of litigants entitled to a refund of court fees paid and the total cost of this to the Court Service.

The information requested is unknown and could only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many litigants have (a) applied for and (b) were granted a refund of court fees paid between 15 January and 13 March in (i) county court proceedings, (ii) high court proceedings and (iii) family proceedings. [6234]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Keith Hill, dated 7 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of litigants who have applied for and been granted refunds of court fees.

Detailed figures of refunds of court fees to litigants in person are not held centrally, and could only be provided at a disproportionate cost. However, information is collected on the total number of refunds and is broken down into months and fees by type of fees order (County, Supreme, Family). This information is as follows but is only available for the months of March, April and May.

	County	Supreme	Family	Total
March	327	1	2,349	2,677
April	367	31	3,254	3,652
May	237	9	1,246	1,492
	931	41	6,849	7,821

Mr. Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many litigants in person have issued proceedings in (a) the county court, (b) the county court under the small claims procedure, (c) the High Court and (d) the Court of Appeal in each of the last five years. [6230]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Keith Hill, dated 7 July 1997:

The parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about proceedings issued by litigants in person over the last five years.

Detailed statistics for actions instigated by litigants in person are not held centrally, and could only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Court Fees

Mr. Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many litigants who have (a) applied for and (b) been granted a refund of court fees paid between 15 January and 13 March were in receipt of (i) income support, (ii) income-related jobseeker's allowance, (iii) family credit, (iv) disability working allowance and (v) housing benefit. [6232]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Keith Hill, dated 7 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of litigants who have applied for and been granted refunds in respect of court fees.

Details of refunds of court fees to litigants in person are not held centrally in the terms requested, and could only be provided at a disproportionate cost. However, information is collected on the total number of refunds and the total money refunded and is available for March, April and May. During these months 7,821 refunds were granted. The total sum refunded was £242,816.90.

Office Refurbishment

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the cost of the current refurbishment of offices used by his Department within the Palace of Westminster. [6567]

Mr. Hoon: There is currently no refurbishment work being carried out in the offices used by the Lord Chancellor's Department within the Palace of Westminster. There is however, a proposal to refurbish, in a way consistent with the conservation and preservation of a building of such outstanding national importance, the Lord Chancellor's Official Residence together with the office he uses in the Palace of Westminster. This is shortly to be considered by the House of Lords Administration and Works Sub Committee who will decide how to proceed on the basis of a memorandum submitted by Black Rod, who is independent of the Lord Chancellor and responsible for the care and upkeep of the House of Lords accommodation within the Palace of Westminster. They still have to take a number of decisions which will affect the costs of the proposal, but it is estimated that the total cost of both projects will be in the region of £650,000.

Mental Incapacity

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to act on the Law Commission report (Law Com 231) to clarify the law on mental incapacity. [5524]

Mr. Hoon: The Government recognises the importance of clarifying the law in this area to provide a clear framework for those involved in making decisions on behalf of incapacitated adults and to ensure that the welfare and interests of the incapacitated person are adequately protected. It is hoped that progress will be made on the subject at an early opportunity.

CABINET OFFICE

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio under what circumstances he will speak in the House in respect of his ministerial responsibilities; and if he will make a statement. [6888]

Mr. Mandelson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Worthing, West (Mr. Bottomley) on 3 June, Official Report, column 134; and to my subsequent reply to the hon. Member himself today.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will make himself available on a regular basis to answer oral questions to take account of his responsibilities for (a) the Royal Yacht and (b) the Millennium Dome. [6887]

Mr. Mandelson: On (a), I have no responsibilities in this respect. On (b), yes.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Open Government

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many complaints have been referred to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration since 1 May under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. [6893]

Dr. David Clark: Three.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many requests for information have been received since 1 May under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information; and if he will make a statement. [6892]

Dr. Clark: This information is not held centrally in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The contribution of the code of practice on open government is, however, an important issue and I shall continue the existing practice of publishing an annual report on the workings of the Code which will contain an analysis of code requests received on a calender year basis.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to narrow the terms of the classes of exempt information listed in the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. [6894]

Dr. Clark: I would like to see the proposed Freedom of Information Act have fewer exemptions than the present Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. In the period before the Act comes into force the Government will make full use of the discretion available under the Code of Practice to disclose as much information as possible. Should it become clear that the wording of the Code is proving over-restrictive, even under this more liberal interpretation, I will consider amendments.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much has been spent since 1 May to publicise the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information; how many copies of the code have been (a) published and (b) issued since 1 May; and if he will make a statement. [6891]

Dr. Clark: No new advertising campaigns have been launched since 1 May but I plan to use the launch of the forthcoming White Paper on Freedom of Information to publicise the continuing role of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information in the period before the Act comes into force.

Information on the total number of copies of the Code issued by Departments in the period since 1 May is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I can say however that the central Citizen's Charter Publications Line has issued some 250 copies of the Code in response to requests in that period and my own Department has responded to 30 requests.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will place in the Library (a) departmental and (b) other responses to the White Paper and draft bill on Freedom of Information before legislation is introduced. [6890]

Dr. David Clark: I shall place in the Library the results of both consultation exercises before the legislation is introduced. These will include copies of the responses received from outside government except where confidentiality has been specially requested. I shall also be considering how exchanges between Government Departments on Freedom of Information can best be treated in a way which contributes to the public debate while at the same time preserving the necessary collective responsibility needed in the drafting of major legislation.

Citizens Charter

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, given that virtually the only citizens who have to go to school are children, will the hon. Gentleman consider extending the citizens charter to make it clear that schools are expected to deliver children's ability to read, write and figure?

Mr. Kilfoyle [pursuant to his reply 2 July 1997, Official Report, column 287]: The hon. Gentleman will be pleased to know that one of the forums that I shall soon be meeting will consist of young children, the future citizens of this country. Moreover, we have worked in partnership with the Centre for Citizenship Studies in Education at Leicester University and in consultation with the National Consumer Council to ensure that more than 1,700 secondary schools in England that wished to do so received a pack relating directly to their interests.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Culture Council

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the outcome of the Culture Council on 30 June. [7400]

Mr. Fisher: EU Ministers of Culture met on 30 June in Luxembourg. Ministers held a public debate on the future direction of EU cultural action, and agreed a decision to ask the Commission to study the options for future cultural action and to bring forward proposals by 1 May 1998. Ministers also agreed a decision to ask the Commission to study whether article 128(4) is relevant to the Community's approach to cross-border fixed book pricing.

The Council resolved to continue to seek agreement, in conciliation, for the Raphael programme. It discussed the future of the European Cities of Culture initiative.

Ministers then held an exchange of views on audiovisual issues, discussing proposals for a Community Guarantee Fund for film production and the Commission's Green Paper on the protection of minors and human dignity in audiovisual and information services.

Lottery Bids (Stoke-on-Trent, North)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if he will list the successful national lottery bids in Stoke-on-Trent, North, by category of national lottery funding, indicating the percentage they comprise of the total sums awarded nationwide in each category; [6281]

(2) how many applications for each category of national lottery funding have been received from Stoke-on-Trent, North; and how many of these have been (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful, indicating for each successful scheme the value of the award, in each year since the inception of the national lottery. [6248]

Mr. Banks [Pursuant to his written reply 4 July, Official Report, column 290]: The tables of awards and applications were omitted from the answer. The full information is as follows.

To date over £3.7 billion has been awarded to 23,570 projects throughout the UK. Twelve of these awards are to projects in Stoke-on-Trent, North, worth £2,938,508. The first table lists these together with the percentage they represent of the total sums awarded across England and the UK. The second table shows the number of applications received from Stoke-on-Trent, North.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Kenya

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between and Kenya. [4875]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We recognise the positive role which Kenya has played over the years as a force for regional stability. During my recent visit there between 25 and 28 June, I met President Moi and had talks with some of his Ministers, members of the Opposition, Church leaders and other representatives of Kenyan society. I made clear to all parties our hopes and expectation that the forthcoming elections will be free and fair and that they will be conducted in a peaceful environment. In this context, I stressed the importance of dialogue between the parties concerned.

I also made clear our concern that certain democratic principles should be implemented in the approach to the elections, to make sure that they are free and fair. In particular, I called for elections where all those who want to vote can exercise their choice freely; where all those who want to stand have the opportunity to do so; where the electorate have access through the media to all the information needed to make a free choice; and where people can come together freely in support of their preferred candidates.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6025]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding reply 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minster on 4 July, Official Report, column 293–94.

Visitors' Visas

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs will meet the hon. Member for Leicester, East to discuss visitors' visas. [6586]

Mr. Fatchett: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs was not aware of the hon. Member's wish for a meeting to discuss visitors' visas. She will contact my hon. Friend to arrange a mutually convenient time for such a discussion.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many meetings the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has had with hon. Members to discuss refusals of visitors' visas. [6585]

Mr. Fatchett: There has been one such meeting.

Mrs. S. U. Patel

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the case of Mrs. S. U. Patel (R/92/3687). [6583]

Mr. Fatchett: We have asked our Deputy High Commission in Bombay to provide a detailed account of the position. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will write to my hon. Friend within a week of receiving that account.

Kailashchandra Sukdev Roy

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if a Minister from his Department will meet the hon. Member for Leicester, East to discuss the case of Kailashchandra Sukdev Roy (ref. R/97/962-Bombay); [6587]

(2) if he will make a statement in the case of Sukdev Roy (ref. R/97/962-Bombay). [6624]

Mr. Fatchett: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will write to my hon. Friend about Mr. Roy's application within a week.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Department of Education and Employment concerning the case of Kailashchandra Sukdev Roy (ref. R/97/962-Bombay). [6588]

Mr. Fatchett: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will write to my hon. Friend about Mr. Roy's situation within a week.

Jaswinder Kaurr

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the visa will be granted in the case of Jaswinder Kaurr (ref. ECR/474/95s-New Delhi). [6584]

Mr. Fatchett: We have asked our high commission in New Delhi to provide a detailed account of the position. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will write to my hon. Friend within a week of receiving that account.

Bhag Singh and Rattan Kaur

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will review the decision of the entrance clearance offer in New Delhi concerning the case of Bhag Singh and Rattan Kaur (ref. IMM/ECR/2983/97/NS). [6590]

Mr. Fatchett: We have asked our high commission in New Delhi to provide a detailed account of the position. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will write to my hon. Friend within a week of receiving that account.

Amsterdam Treaty

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the presidency of the inter-governmental conference of the European Union concerning the provisional pre-signature text of the draft Amsterdam treaty; by what procedures each item in the presidency draft was considered; if written copies of amendments were circulated prior to decisions on the amendments; and what period of notice for (a) verbal and (b) oral amendments was required by the conference. [6628]

Mr. Henderson: Discussions on the draft Amsterdam treaty text are continuing in Brussels, both among the 15 member states, and bilaterally with the Presidency and former Presidency.

The terms of the Presidency text were discussed at the European Council at Amsterdam. In many cases written amendments were circulated. In others amendments were discussed orally by Heads of Government. There was no period of notice required by the conference.

Indonesia (Defence Sales)

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his discussions with the Indonesian Foreign Minister in Hong Kong about defence sales. [6649]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary held a wide-ranging meeting with Mr. Alatas during which he was able to explain the background to the review of criteria used in considering licence applications to export conventional arms that he announced to the House on 22 May. He pointed out that the review does not focus on particular countries.

Euro

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the EU Commission is spending to promote the euro and emu (a) in Europe and (b) in the United Kingdom. [6851]

Mr. Doug Henderson: In the 1997 EC Budget a total of 45 million ecu is provided in budget lines B3–306 and B0–40 for information activities in connection with specific policies, including the single currency. The Commission has provisionally allocated 23 million ecu of this money to a campaign to publicise the euro. None of this money will be present in the UK as the euro information campaign is not being pursued here.

Defence Sales Review

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will announce the timetable for the defence sales policy review. [6647]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The review of criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms is being taken forward as a matter of urgency. The new criteria will be made available to the House when the review is complete.

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the criteria for arms sales and the countries affected by the defence sales policy review. [6646]

Mr. Lloyd: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary announced on 22 May, Official Report, column 294, we have initiated an urgent review of the detailed criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms. The new criteria will be made available to the House when the review is complete. As we have made clear repeatedly, the review is looking at criteria to be used for all destinations and does not focus on particular countries.

Gibraltar

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 30 June, Official Report, column 18, if the Gibraltar Government were consulted before Her Majesty's Government made its decisions at the Amsterdam summit regarding the Schengen arrangements. [7058]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Chief Minister was briefed in London before the summit.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the obstacles to enfranchisement of Gibraltarians in elections to the European Parliament. [6991]

Mr. Henderson: The 1976 EC Act on Direct Elections confines the franchise for European Parliament elections to the United Kingdom alone. The Act has treaty status. Any amendment would require the agreement of all Member States.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals for developing Gibraltar airport have been evaluated by his Department. [6992]

Mr. Henderson: We have not received any approaches on the development of the airport since 1995.

Indonesia

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has received from the Government of Indonesia since his mission statement of 12 May. [7070]

Mr. Fatchett: We continue to have a full range of contacts with the Indonesian Government. Most recently my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I met the Indonesian Foreign Minister in Hong Kong on 29 June.

Baghdad

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his letter to the right hon. Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) of 20 June, what assessment he has made of the policy of Germany and France in upgrading their diplomatic representation in Baghdad; and if he will make it his policy to upgrade United Kingdom representation. [6953]

Mr. Fatchett: Neither France nor Germany have recently upgraded their representation in Baghdad.

Our policy remains that Iraq must comply with all relevant Security Council resolutions. We do not envisage any change in our position until it does so.

Saudi Arabia

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has received from the Government of Saudi Arabia since his Mission Statement of 12 May. [7071]

Mr. Fatchett: There have been no such representations.

We remain in close touch with the Saudi Government on a wide range of issues. I met the Saudi Ambassador on 21 May and briefly discussed the Mission Statement, amongst other topics.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Water Regulations

Mr. Roy Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what new arrangements he has introduced to enforce and administer water regulations. [6233]

Angela Eagle: Following consultation on enforcement and administration of water regulations and further discussions with relevant organisations, it is intended that regulations will be made under the powers in section 74 of the Water Industry Act 1991. These Regulations will be enforced by the water companies. Powers to relax or dispense with the requirements of the Regulations will not be delegated. An appeals system will be implemented to deal with disputes about the application of the Regulations.

The Water Regulations Advisory Committee is currently consulting on its proposals for the technical requirements to be included in the Regulations before making recommendations to my right hon. Friend.

Consultation on the draft Regulations will take place early in 1998.

Radioactive Discharges

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has made to the French Government about the levels of radioactive discharges into the English Channel from the French nuclear reprocessing plant at Cap de la Hague. [6396]

Angela Eagle: No recent representation has been made to the French authorities in respect of radioactive discharges into the English Channel. Monitoring carried out by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food shows that the levels of radioactivity in seafood and other marine organisms from the English Channel are of negligible radiological significance.

White Asbestos

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to ban white asbestos. [6352]

Angela Eagle: The Government is determined to deal effectively with the problems of asbestos. In the Adjournment debate on 18 June columns 280–84, I reported to this House that the Minister for the Environment and I had asked the Health and Safety Commission to advise us urgently on a mechanism for introducing a domestic ban on the import, supply and use of asbestos. We have asked the HSC to advise us on how that could be achieved and to what timetable. We are awaiting their response.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are (a) the objectives and (b) the terms of reference of the study into the disposal of high-level waste and spent nuclear fuel being undertaken on behalf of his Department by QuantiSci Ltd. [6413]

Angela Eagle: A copy of the Work Requirement Statement issued for the study awarded to QuantiSci Ltd. has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which consultants have been commissioned to review United Kingdom high-level nuclear waste management; and if they have previously been employed by UK Nirex Ltd. [6399]

Angela Eagle: The only current study into high level waste that has been commissioned by the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions is that of research strategies for the disposal of high level radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel. This was awarded to QuantiSci Ltd., who have worked previously for Nirex.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions that quantity of fissile material UK Nirex proposes to bury underground in the United Kingdom. [6400]

Angela Eagle: A large number of low and intermediate level radioactive waste streams are contaminated with fissile material. The two predominant fissile isotopes are plutonium-239 and uranium-235. Latest estimates of the quantities to be disposed of are 11.7 petabecquerels and 1.33 terabecquerels respectively in terms of activity and 5 and 17 tonnes respectively in terms of mass. These isotopes account for less than 0.01 per cent. of the total mass of the waste.

Derelict Houses

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the numbers of publicly owned derelict house in each local authority area; and if he will make a statement. [5719]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 2 July 1997]: The information requested is not available in the form requested. The only indication we have of the number of derelict local authority dwellings is at the national level from the 1991 English House Condition Survey. This estimated 20,000 local authority dwellings to be derelict which represents 18 per cent. of the local authority vacant stock.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6026]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister on Friday 4 July, Official Report, column 294.

Business Rates

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement regarding the timetable for the transfer of responsibility for setting business rates to local authorities. [6443]

Mr. Raynsford: The localisation of business rates would require primary legislation. I am not yet able to announce a timetable. At present we are considering the options for reforming the rating system. No changes will be made until we have consulted fully with business, local authorities and other interested parties.

Carbon Emissions

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the total carbon emissions in the United Kingdom for each of the past 10 years and his estimates of emissions for each year to 2010. [6603]

Angela Eagle: The following total carbon emissions data for the UK for 1990 and subsequent years will be published on 11 July in the 19th Digest of Environmental Statistics:

	Million tonnes
1990	168
1991	169
1992	164
1993	160
1995	156

These totals are consistent with the methodology for calculating emissions developed by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change. This is the basis required for reporting emissions of carbon dioxide to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change. Totals calculated on this basis are not available for years before 1990.

Projected emissions were published in the UK's Second Report under the Climate Change Convention on the basis of the previous Administration's Climate Change programme. These were:

	Million tonnes
2000	158
2005	169
2010	169

The Government is now developing policies and measures to meet our target of reducing carbon dioxide emissions to 20 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010 and a revised Climate Change programme will be prepared after the Kyoto Climate Change Conference in December.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what representations he has received concerning the direct discharge of untreated liquid wastes from biotech companies into the environment; and if he will make a statement; [6859]

(2) what assessment he has made of the health risks posed by transgenic waste disposal from commercial scale contained users; and if he will make a statement; [6861]

(3) if he will make a statement on the discharge of liquid wastes containing live genetically modified micro-organisms into sewers and the drainage system. [6860]

Angela Eagle: Discharge of waste containing live genetically modified micro-organisms (GMMs) is covered by the Genetically Modified Organisms (Contained Use) Regulations 1992, as amended in 1996. Under the Regulations, an assessment of the risks to human health and the environment must be undertaken before commencing any activity involving genetic modification. The risk assessment enables the appropriate control measures to be selected. The Regulations require that waste containing live GMMs which would pose a risk to human health and/or the environment must be inactivated prior to disposal. This requirement applies at all scales of work with 'transgenic' (GMM) waste.

As I indicated in the answer I gave my Hon. Friend the Member for West Lancashire (Mr. Pickthall) on 27 June, column 667, the Advisory Committee on Genetic Modification (ACGM) is currently considering, in consultation with interested bodies, the matter of direct discharge of those untreated liquid wastes which are judged, on the basis of thorough risk assessment, not to pose a risk of harm to human health and the environment. It is proposed to achieve this by way of a certificate of exemption from the requirements of the Regulations. Previous consultation on this matter by the Health and Safety Commission indicated that there was strong support for permitting such discharge.

The proposed exemption certificate, together with accompanying detailed guidance, is currently undergoing consultation with the biotechnology community and environmental groups. To date a number of responses have been received from organisations including universities and research institutes. HSE will consider ACGM's advice, as regards the outcome of the consultation, before agreeing with relevant departments (so far as matters relate to the environment) the best way to proceed.

Deprivation Index

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list his Department's index for deprivation for (a) Newham, (b) Tower Hamlets, (c) Hackney, (d) Redbridge, (e) Waltham Forest and (f) Barking and Dagenham. [6858]

Mr. Raynsford: Table 1 below shows the ranked position of the local authorities listed above on the three different measures which make up the Department's Index of Local Conditions (ILC). The attached background note gives further information on the ILC and on the difference between the three measures.

Table 1

	Rank on DETR's Index of Local Conditions
	Degree	Intensity	Extent
Newham	1	9	5
Tower Hamlets	7	1	2
Hackney	3	4	1
Redbridge	120	67	93
Waltham Forest	21	6	16
Barking and Dagenham	18	36	30

Council House Sales

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the current level of set-aside capital receipts derived from the sale of council houses in the boroughs of (a) Newham, (b) Tower Hamlets, (c) Hackney, (d) Redbridge, (e) Waltham Forest and (f) Barking and Dagenham, expressed (i) in absolute terms and (ii) per head of population; and what are the corresponding national absolute and per head figures. [6828]

Mr. Raynsford: The amounts of housing capital receipts which were set aside by each of the local authorities referred to in the question between 1990–91 and 1995–96 are set out both in absolute terms and per head of population in the table below, as are the corresponding figures for England. However, individual authorities may have used these set-aside receipts to repay debt or in lieu of further borrowing, and so may no longer retain them in the form of cash and investments.

Receipts set aside from sales of Housing Revenue Account Assets 1990–91 to 1995–96

	Total £000s	Per head of mid-1995 population £s
Barking and Dagenham	25,418	164
Hackney	41,651	214
Newham	30,618	134
Redbridge	23,931	105
Tower Hamlets	42,643	247
Waltham Forest	18,449	83
England	5,283,436	108

Source of data: HRA subsidy claim forms.

We are in the process of consulting the Local Government Association and local authorities on the Government's Capital Receipts Initiative. The final decision about the basis on which resources are to be distributed to individual authorities will be made when that consultation process is complete.

Occupational Injury and Ill Health

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the costs to the United Kingdom economy of occupational injury and ill health over each of the last five years. [7120]

Angela Eagle: The Health and Safety Executive estimate that the total cost to the British economy of work accidents (including preventable damage-only accidents) and work-related ill health was between £6 billion and £12 billion in 1990.

Estimates of the cost since 1990 have not been made because of the absence of more recent comprehensive data on work-related ill health. New data will start to become available later this year, covering 1995. Using this data, the Health and Safety Executive will prepare updated costs in 1998.

The estimate in the draft reply of £6 billion–12 billion (1990 prices) is about 1–2 per cent. of national output. This includes the costs of damage and disruption to production, health care costs, and other administrative costs. An estimate of the total cost to society, which includes an allowance for the human costs of pain, grief and suffering, is £11 billion–16 billion.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what sums his Department has spent on preventing occupational illness and injury in each of the last five years. [7122]

Angela Eagle: The Health and Safety Commission and Executive's aim is to ensure that risks to people's health and safety activities are properly controlled. This extends beyond occupational illness and injury to work activities that might put members of the public at risk but it is not possible to identify separately the work involved in achieving both aspects of the aim. However, it is estimated that the additional cost of protecting the public would represent only a small proportion of the total cost.

The Health and Safety Executive spent the following sums in each of the last five years:

Year	£ Million
1992–93	173.00
1993–94	181.00
1994–95	180.00
1995–96	181.00
1996–97	178.00

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the number of those (a) injured, (b) killed and (c) made ill by their work for each of the last five years. [7121]

Angela Eagle: The table shows the total number of fatal and other injuries to employees, trainees and self-employed people reported to enforcing authorities under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations, 1985 and 1995 (RIDDOR) between 1992–93 and 1996–97 (years commencing 1 April).

Year	Fatal injuries	[1]Total injuries
1992–93	339	161,675
1993–94	296	155,734
1994–95	272	160,844
1995–96	258	150,968
1996–97[2]	287	155,582

[1] Including fatal, major and those leading to more than three days incapacity for work.

[2] Provisional. Finalised figures will be available in early 1998.

HSE gets to know of virtually all workplace deaths, but non-fatal injuries are subject to under-reporting. To estimate the reporting levels HSE included a set of questions in the Labour Force Surveys in 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96. The results of these surveys combined estimate that around 424,000 reportable non-fatal injuries to workers occur annually, giving a reporting level for RIDDOR of about 40 per cent.

From responses to a special set of questions in the 1990 Labour Force Survey, which is based on self reporting, it has been estimated that in the 12 months prior to the survey, 2.2 million people in England and Wales suffered from an illness which they believed had been caused or made worse by their work.

In terms of detailed reporting of occupational illness, there is no one single fully reliable source. The Health and Safety Executive makes use of a range of sources to produce figures for ill-health for the Health and Safety Commission's annual publication "Health and Safety Statistics". I will send the hon. Member a copy of the most recent report.

Drinking Water Inspectorate

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Seventh Annual report of the Drinking Water Inspectorate will be published. [7401]

Mr. Meacher: The Drinking Water Inspectorate will publish its seventh Annual Report on Tuesday 8 July.

The Inspectorate will also publish two leaflets for consumers. "How Good is Your Drinking Water?", will summarise the main points of the Report. "About Your Water Company" will give brief details of the quality of drinking water supplied by individual water companies.

Copies of the Report and leaflets will be placed in the Library of the House.

Single Regeneration Budget Challenge Fund

Mr. Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish the guidance for Round Four of the Single Regeneration Budget Challenge Fund. [7160]

Mr. Caborn: The Government is issuing today supplementary guidance for Round 4 of the Single Regeneration Budget Challenge Fund. The guidance describes the Government's policies and priorities for the Challenge Fund, which are:

- a requirement that proposals for funding contribute to the Government's Manifesto commitment to carry out a concerted attack against the multiple causes of social and economic decline, and fit with its new policies, including those relating to employment, including child care provision, education, crime, housing, public health and sustainable development;
- a greater emphasis on tackling the needs of communities in the most deprived areas;
- a requirement that proposals should take account of existing strategies for promoting economic development and tackling deprivation; and
- a requirement for a more collaborative approach between those preparing proposals, their partners and Government Offices for the Regions in order to arrive at a shared understanding of regeneration needs and priorities, and to stimulate fresh thinking.

In addition to the supplementary guidance, each Government Office for the Region has issued its own regional guidance for the purposes of Round 4 of the Challenge Fund. This is intended to give extra help to bidders in putting together their proposals. Government Offices for the Regions will also be setting up small Advisory Panels to help them in considering Round 4 bids. These panels will have, amongst others, representatives from the business sector, local authorities and the voluntary sector.

Copies of the supplementary guidance have been placed in the Library of the House.

Bletchley to Bicester Railway Line

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to evaluate proposals relating to the future of passenger and freight services on the Bletchley to Bicester line. [6604]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 20 May, Official Report, column 49.

Barking to Gospel Oak Rail Services

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects to receive proposals for the introduction of new rolling stock on the Barking to Gospel Oak line. [6605]

Ms Glenda Jackson: As part of its Franchise Agreement with the Franchising Director, National Express Group PLC has committed to replacing all of North London Railways' Mark 1 trains currently in use on the Gospel Oak–Barking line with new or refurbished rolling stock by the 1999 summer timetable.

Roads Expenditure

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the capital expenditure in each borough on roads in each of the last five years; and what expenditure is planned for (a) the current year and (b) 1998–99. [6610]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The following table shows the latest information which has been provided to my Department on capital expenditure on roads by London borough councils. The figures for 19976–98 show local authorities' bids for funding, which remain the best available estimates of planned expenditure in that year.

A27 Polegate Bypass

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those bodies and individuals his Department intends to consult before reaching a decision on the future of the A27 Polegate bypass. [6783]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Full public consultation was carried out on this scheme during its preparatory stages. No further consultation is planned for this and other schemes in the accelerated review. The decision will be announced shortly.

London Transport Buses

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will follow principles of freedom of information and public accountability in respect of his dealings with London Transport Buses. [6993]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Yes. It is for London Transport Buses to decide however, what information it would be appropriate for them to release abut their own activities.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy in respect of standards of service on London Transport Buses. [6994]

Ms Jackson: I have recently set tough new quality of service targets to improve the performance of London Transport bus services. These are as follows:

Measure	1997–98 New targets
Mileage operated (excluding miles lost due to traffic congestion)[1]	99.0
High frequency services—excess waiting time[2]	1.5 minutes
Low frequency services—percentage of services
Departing on time	74.0 per cent.
Departing early	4.0 per cent.
Percentage of Night Bus services departing on time	65.0 per cent.
Customer satisfaction (score out of 100)
Condition of bus stops/shelters	57
Internal cleanliness of buses	63
External cleanliness of buses	55
Staff helpfulness	66
Bus station environment	71
Bus station information	68

Notes:

[1] This measure reflects the extent to which bus services are cancelled or cut short.

[2] A measure of how much longer passengers have to wait, on average, than if all the buses ran on time.

London Underground

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy not to transfer majority control of the London underground to the private sector. [6896]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have ruled out the wholesale privatisation of London Underground proposed by the previous Government. We are now examining a number of public-private partnership options, in accordance with our Manifesto, to see how we can best secure an affordable, reliable, clear and modern network.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

TECs

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 24 June, Official Report, column 443, if he will list the elected members of local authorities who have places on the boards of TECs. [6301]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The following list contains the names of 41 directors notified to the Department by the English TECs as being members of their local authority. A further 119 directors are officials of local authorities; most being chief executives or directors of education. The Department is aware that a number of other directors appointed from the business community may also be elected members of local authorities but such information is not held centrally.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will publish his Departments's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6039]

Dr. Howells [holding reply 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 4 July, Official Report, column 293–94.

School Furniture

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what research his Department has (a) conducted and (b) commissioned on the appropriate furniture to be used in schools to reduce back problems in children. [6820]

Mr. Byers: The Department has a long history of commissioning research into appropriate furniture for schools, to reduce the problems associated with muscular strain and bad posture. Research commissioned by the Department's Architects and Building Branch in the 1970s and 1980s was written up and published as Building Bulletins on pupils' sizes and the heights and working dimensions of furniture.

More recently, the Department commissioned research on the suitability of information technology furniture for children in primary schools, which prompted a practical design project and an information video for LEAs, schools and designers. We are currently considering the possibility of commissioning new research in a number of areas related to the design of schools' furniture.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department has issued to (i) local education authorities and (ii) schools on the type of chairs to be used in schools to reduce the risk of back problems among children. [6819]

Mr. Byers: To minimise the risk of discomfort or injury to school pupils, it is important that all school furniture—not only chairs—is designed carefully to meet the needs of those who will use it. The Department has published general guidance in Building Bulletin 62, which gives data on the size, weight and body dimensions of school pupils, and Building Bulletins 38,50, and 52, which cover the heights and working dimensions of school furniture, including chairs. Last year the Department's Architects and Building Branch produced, as examples of good practice, a new design for a computer table to meet the particular needs of younger children, and a video on information technology furniture in both primary and secondary schools. Two recent publications include detailed dimensions and specifications for furniture used in specific subjects at secondary level: Building Bulletin 80 (Science) and Building Bulletin 81 (Design and Technology). Guidance on other subject areas will follow soon.

Undergraduate Courses

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list (a) in total and (b) for each institution funded through the HEFC for England, the average costs to public funds, excluding maintenance costs, of teaching undergraduate courses (i) by fee band and (ii) overall. [6499]

Dr. Howells: The information is not available in the form requested. The table gives a total figure for fee income, by fee band, total number of full-time undergraduates, total teaching grant and non-formula funding for 1996–97 for institutions in England overall, and the same information for individual institutions.

Geoffrey Chaucer School, London

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list each of the (a) educational, (b) physical and (c) other improvements which must be made before Geoffrey Chaucer School, London SE1, ceases to be designated as a school needing special measures; and what is the earliest date by which he may end the designation of this school. [6813]

Mr. Byers: Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools is statutorily responsible for determining when a school no longer requires special measures. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (i) headteachers, (ii) deputy headteachers and (iii) teachers took early retirement on the grounds of ill health in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97, (1) in total and (2) in each LEA; and if he will make a statement. [6831]

Mr. Byers: The table shows the number of teachers in service at 31 March 1995 awarded ill-health retirement in financial year 1995–96 and those awarded ill-health retirement in 1996–97 whose last day of reckonable service was 31 March 1996 or later. The table covers the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special education sector in England.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Tourism and Hospitality Training

Mr. Roy Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action she proposes to ensure that Government funding for tourism and hospitality training in Northern Ireland matches that provided in Great Britain. [6137]

Mr. Worthington: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. Roy Beggs, dated 4 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me, as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency, to reply to your question about Government funding for tourism and hospitality training in Northern Ireland.

I regret I am unable to provide information which could be used to make a meaningful comparison between funding for tourism and hospitality training in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. Because of the very different arrangements which apply in the regions, the information could only be made available at a wholly disproportionate cost.

I can assure you however that the Training and Employment Agency is fully committed to supporting training within the tourism and hospitality industry which is treated as a top priority. Evidence of the Agency's commitment lies in the £7.2m which was spent during 1996/97 on a wide range of training programmes. This support included European Social Fund assistance amount to £2.4m administered by the Agency. Support was also made available through the Agency's Jobskills programme (£4m), the Company Development Programme (£0.5m), the Priority Skills Initiative (£0.24m) and the Sectoral Development Programme (£0.07m). In addition, over £3 m is being made available over two years from the European Union's Special Programme for Peace and Reconciliation.

I feel sure you will agree that the total level of assistance represents a very generous measure of support by any standard.

Inward Investment

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to review the prioritisation of areas of special need in Northern Ireland in terms of targeting inward investment. [5978]

Mr. Ingram: The recent report by the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights on employment equality included recommendations on job location. These will be considered carefully Government.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will publish her Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6037]

Mr. Paul Murphy [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my Right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on Friday 4 July 1997, Official Report columns 293–94.

Waste Imports and Exports

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what have been the amounts of waste (a) exported from Northern Ireland to (i) the Irish Republic and (ii) Great Britain and (b) imported form the Irish Republic to Northern Ireland; if he will indicate (1) the tonnages by categories and (2) the descriptions used in each of the last three years; and what are the estimates for (X) the current year and (Y) the next two years. [7150]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Environment and Heritage Service under its Chief Executive, Mr. Robert C. Martin. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert C. Martin to Mr. William Ross, dated 7 July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about the import and export of waste.

The information is not held centrally and indeed district councils, the enforcement authorities for waste management in Northern Ireland, only collate statistics of movements of 'Special Waste' as defined.

I am sorry that I cannot be more helpful.

WALES

Conservation (Cardigan Bay)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will make a statement on the objectives for the Cardigan Bay special area of conservation. [5851]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 26 June 1997, column 626.

Housing Needs (Women)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what role he plans for housing associations in Wales to meet the specific and special housing needs of women in Wales; what assessment he has made of the adequacy of Tai Cymru's plans for meeting these needs in its strategic programmes; and if he will make a statement. [5835]

Mr. Win Griffiths: It is for local authorities to assess and specify the varying needs within their areas in the annual housing strategy and operational plans. With effect from 1997–98, the developments funded out of Tai Cymru's capital programme have been determined by reference to each local authority's plan rather than by formula (Housing Needs Index) as in past years. Moneys from Tai Cymru also support the running costs of women's refuges.

Daily Post Article

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which journalists were present at the meeting with him on which David Rose's article of 16 May in the Daily Post was based. [7069]

Mr. Ron Davies: It is not my normal practice to release details of meetings held on Lobby terms between Ministers and journalists.

Bathing Beaches

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will issue guidelines to local authorities in Wales with regard to the need to ensure the safety of swimmers on bathing beaches from the dangers caused by (a) jet skis and (b) other fast pleasure boats; and if he will make a statement. [6952]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to issue such guidelines. Local authorities have powers under section 76 of the Public Health Act 1961 to regulate seaside pleasure boats for the prevention of danger, obstruction or annoyance to persons bathing in the sea or using the seashore, and for the prevention and suppression of nuisances. An inter-departmental working party is undertaking a review of byelaw powers for the coast, and a discussion paper was issued in Wales in February 1997, in parallel with a similar exercise in England. We shall be considering whether existing powers are adequate as part of this review.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6038]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on Friday 4 July, Official Report, column 294.

DEFENCE

Defence Review Seminars

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will announce the names of (a) those attending the Defence Review seminars and (b) the experts on the advisory panel. [6354]

Dr. Reid: The names of participants at the Strategic Defence Review seminars are being released on the days that the seminars take place. We expect to announce the names of the members of the advisory panel later in the summer.

Falklands

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what was the cost of maintaining the Falklands garrison in each of the last three years. [4862]

Dr. Reid [pursuant to his written reply 24 June 1997 Official Report, column 424]: I regret that there was an error in the figure given for the outturn cost for financial year 1995–96 to my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle on the cost of the Falkland Islands Garrison. The figure should have been £66.5 million and not £70 million.

Parliamentary Armed Forces Scheme

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the parliamentary armed forces scheme. [6415]

Mr. Spellar: We place great value on the armed forces parliamentary scheme as a way of promoting a better understanding of the armed forces by parliamentarians, and pay tribute to those hon. Members who have so far participated and to Sir Neil Thorne and the scheme sponsors. We are actively considering the options for enhancing the scheme and a letter will be sent to all Members shortly inviting them to participate; and that it will recommence as soon as practicable.

Defence Diversification Agency

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the Defence Diversification Agency to be established. [6422]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) on 16 June 1996, Official Report, columns 11–12.

Ship Workers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average number of (i) civilian staff and (ii) uniformed service men working in HM dockyards on shipbuilding or ship repairing duties for each year between 1967 and 1985. [6494]

Mr. Spellar: We do not retain detailed records of staff numbers over these years but the numbers of civilian and uniformed personnel in HM Dockyards in 1967–1985 as recorded in relevant Statements of Defence Estimates were as follows:

Year	Uniformed	Civilian	Note
1967	190	47,300	1
1968	210	46,500	2
1969	200	44,600	2

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total costs to date to public funds of the United Kingdom contingent of the Stabilisation Force in the former Yugoslavia; and what estimate he has made of the future costs. [6755]

Dr. Reid: The total cost of the United Kingdom contingent of the Stabilisation Force in the former Yugoslavia up to 31 March 1997 was £22.3 million. It is estimated that costs of around a further £190 million will be incurred in this and future years for the 18 month deployment which began on 20 December 1996, immediately following the ending of the mandate of the Implementation Force.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates and attendees by Department and grade of meetings of officials which have taken place in his Department on the strategic defence review. [6760]

Dr. Reid: No. A considerable number of meetings has taken place on the strategic defence review. Information on dates and attendees is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what means he will announce the results of his strategic defence review. [6685]

Dr. Reid: The outcome of the strategic defence review will be published in a White Paper.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the members, with their current occupations, of the panel of external experts advising him on the strategic defence review. [6773]

Dr. Reid: The advisory panel of experts has not yet been formed. We expect to announce the names of members later in the summer.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the corporate research programme will be included in the strategic defence review. [6841]

Dr. Reid: The strategic defence review is foreign policy led and will ensure that we are getting the best possible defence output from available resources. The Corporate Research Programme is an important resource and will accordingly be included in the review at the appropriate stage.

Peacekeeping Forces

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the defence review will include consideration of the costs and value of contributing to international peacekeeping forces; and if he will make a statement. [6642]

Dr. Reid: The contribution that the armed forces make to the international peacekeeping will be taken fully into consideration in the strategic defence review, both in setting the policy baseline and in deciding how the armed forces should be structured, equipped and deployed to meet our national interests and commitments.

1 Armoured Division (Transfer)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of transferring the 1 Armoured Division from Germany to the United Kingdom. [6763]

Dr. Reid: No reliable estimate of the cost of withdrawing 1 (UK) Armoured Division from Germany to the United Kingdom is currently available.

Departmental Advisers

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the terms on which Mr. Bernard Gray has been appointed as his special adviser. [7066]

Mr. Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 25 June, Official Report, column 546.

Homosexuals

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on the ban on homosexuals in the armed forces. [6903]

Dr. Reid: The issue of homosexuality in the armed forces is reviewed as a matter of course in every Parliament. The Government will form a view on the weight of the evidence, taking account of the UK's laws, and of the views of the European Court, and of the armed forces. The Government will start with the position agreed in the last Parliament, which supported the policy of excluding homosexuals from the services, and will look in detail at the findings of the detailed review of the policy which was undertaken by this Department in 1995–96. Ministers will then seek to establish the way forward in consultation with the Chiefs of Staff.

Workers (Exposure to Chemicals)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what follow-up medical checks have been carried out on workers who were employed at the former chemical warfare plant at Nancekuke in Cornwall; and what research has been carried out to assess the long-term effects on the health of workers who were exposed to chemicals during their employment ant Nancekuke. [6360]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. Chisholm to Mr. Ken Livingstone, dated 7 July 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your question about follow-up medical checks on workers who were employed at the former Chemical Defence Establishment at Nancekuke Cornwall, since this was an outstation of the Chemical & Biological Defence Sector at Porton Down which is now part of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency of which I am Chief Executive.

The Chemical Defence Establishment Nancekuke closed in 1980, following a decision taken in the 1976 Defence Review. On closure its staff were either transferred elsewhere in the public service or left on voluntary early retirement or redundancy terms, since the large majority had arranged other employment.

All the work at the site when it was operational would have been conducted according to the appropriate health and safety guidelines. The records do not show that any formal follow-up medical checking system to monitor the subsequent health of former employees were put in place at the closure of the establishment. I assume this would have been because staff would not have been generally exposed to chemical agents and it would not therefore have been felt necessary to carry out routine follow-up checks.

The records that have been retrieved for Nancekuke indicate that for at least part of the pre-closure period during which equipment was being decontaminated and dismantled staff were subject to daily medical monitoring. There is also earlier evidence that as a result of the intervention of the local MP, the Registrar General conducted a statistical medical survey to trace all the deaths up to 1969 of all the persons employed at Nancekuke. His conclusion was that mortality rates were generally lower than the national average. This information was published in answer to a Parliamentary Question on 2 November 1970.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Closed Circuit Television

12. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from councils in Dorset in respect of the provision of CCTV. [5518]

Mr. Michael: I have received no representations from Dorset councils in respect of the provision of CCTV. I understand that Dorset councils submitted a total of six bids in the three rounds of the CCTV Challenge Competition and that one of these was successful.

Crime Prevention

21. Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he intends to take to ensure that crime prevention is given a higher priority. [5530]

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to ensure that crime prevention is given increased priority. [5506]

Mr. Michael: We are determined to raise the profile of crime prevention across the board. It makes far more sense to stop a crime happening than to have to pick up the pieces afterwards.

One of our first priorities is to place a new duty on local authorities and the police service together to develop statutory local partnerships for crime prevention and community safety and, with the key partners, to agree local community safety targets. Our proposals—which we hope to include in the Crime and Disorder Bill to be published later this year—will be developed on the basis of full consultation with all interested parties.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list Government expenditure on crime prevention including policing for each of the last five years. [7119]

Mr. Michael: Previously published figures for estimated Government expenditure on crime prevention are as follows:

1992–93: £225.5 million

1993–94: £241.3 million

1994–95: £260 million

Since April 1995, crime prevention projects have been eligible for Government funding under the Single Regeneration Budget (SRB) Challenge Fund. Expenditure on crime prevention within this budget is not separately identified. Of the 372 projects funded under rounds one and two of the SRB process, 183 (which will receive £1.4 billion in total) include a crime prevention element.

Overall expenditure on policing for the last five years is as follows:

1993–94: £6,027 million

1994–95: £6,271 million

1995–96: £6,494 million

1996–97: £6,867 million (estimated outturn)

1997–98: £7,163 million (planned).

Crime prevention is an integral part of policing and expenditure is not separately identified.

European Convention on Human Rights

24. Mr. Desmond Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to incorporate into British law the European convention on human rights. [5533]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We will introduce a Bill for this purpose in this Session of Parliament.

New Prisons

25. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new prisons are intended to be built over the next three years; and if he will make a statement. [5534]

Ms Joyce Quin: There are currently three new prisons being built under the Private Finance Initiative: HMP Altcourse (Liverpool), HMP Parc (Bridgend) and HMP Lowdham Grange (near Nottingham).

The Prison Service has plans and funding (under the PFI) to provide a further 2,400 places at new prisons over the next three years. Planning approval has been given to re-build HMP Pucklechurch, near Bristol, as a 400-place prison for males under 21. Planning approval has also been given to build an 800-place prison at Agecroft in Salford. The remaining 1,200 places will be provided by two more prisons once suitable sites have been agreed.

Anti-social Behaviour

26. Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to deal with criminal anti-social behaviour in neighbourhoods. [5535]

Mr. Michael: We intend to introduce Community Safety Orders in the Crime and Disorder Bill.

Courts will be given the power to grant such orders on the application of a local authority or the police. The order will apply to a named individual or individuals and would prevent that person or persons from continuing with specified anti-social conduct.

A breach of the order will be a criminal offence which would carry stiff penalties—including the possibility of imprisonment.

Young People (Alcohol)

27. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce the pressures on young people to engage in under-age consumption of alcohol. [5536]

Mr. George Howarth: The Ministerial Group on Alcopops are considering a range of possible industry and Government measures to tackle under-age drinking. These include how alcohol is promoted to, and appeals to, young people and how it reaches them. We expect to make an announcement later this month.

Police

28. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police there are on average per head of population in (a) Cornwall and Devon and (b) England. [5537]

Mr. Michael: The Devon and Cornwall Constabulary has one police officer to 538 people. The average ratio for England is one officer to 413 people. This is based upon police numbers at 31 March and the latest known population figures, which are for June 1995.

Drugs and Crime

29. Mr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to address the link between drugs and crime. [5538]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Office has a research programme designed to shed further light on the links between drugs and crime. In addition, a Home Office Drugs Prevention Initiative study is testing the impact of drug treatment interventions in the criminal justice system—from arrest through to sentence and beyond—to refer people with drugs problems to drug treatment programmes.

A new testing and treatment order will be introduced to give courts the powers to require drug misusing offenders to undergo treatment. The new order will be rigorously enforced and include the use of drug testing to ensure those in treatment are staying off illegal drugs.

The Government will also appoint an anti-drugs supremo to co-ordinate action against drugs. One of his or her first tasks will be to review urgently the existing drugs strategy, and to put forward proposals for tackling drug misuse and related crime with renewed vigour.

Bribery (Members of Parliament)

30. Mr. Laxton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to make bribery of hon. Members an offence. [5539]

Mr. Michael: The Government are committed to tackling corruption in all areas of public and private life, including the bribery of hon. Members.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary published on 9 June a statement on reform of the corruption statutes for consultation. A copy is available in the Library. The Law Commission will be producing proposals for reform of the law in this area later in the year.

He will consider carefully the results of all of these exercises, together with any further recommendations which the Nolan Committee may make in relation to the criminal law.

He expects to make a further statement on the reform of the law in this area early next year.

Police and School Liaison

31. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to encourage greater liaison between police officers and school pupils. [5540]

Mr. Michael: My Department and the Department for Education and Employment are currently considering further means of encouraging effective liaison between the police and schools. I welcome the new Police Education Partnership which has just been launched between the Suffolk Education Department and Suffolk Constabulary.

Immigration Advisers

32. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to regulate immigration advisers. [5541]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Our manifesto commits us to controlling unscrupulous immigration advisers. We are examining the options for delivering on this commitment, together with those principally involved. We shall issue a consultation paper as soon as possible.

Pub Opening Hours

33. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will delegate the powers of determining pub opening hours to (a) local licensing magistrates or (b) local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [5542]

Mr. George Howarth: We have no present plans to delegate the setting of normal licensing hours.

Fire Safety

34. Mr. John Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce measures to improve fire safety. [5543]

Mr. George Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Heppell).

Racial Harassment

35. Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to deal with racial harassment. [5545]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The Government intend to introduce new offences of racial harassment and violence. These will send out a strong message that racial crime is unacceptable and will act as a forceful deterrent. We will be working closely with all the relevant agencies to ensure that these measures are implemented, successfully.

Prisons (Crime)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new proposals he has to deter prisoners from engaging in criminal activity while in prison. [5527]

Ms Joyce Quin: A number of recent initiatives are intended to discourage criminal activity.

These include new systems and procedures designed to minimise the risk of prisoners making unauthorised communications with the victims of their crime, and efforts to curb drug misuse.

Young Offenders

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) boys and (b) girls aged under 18 years have been received into prisons and young offenders institutions in England and Wales following sentence or remand into custody in each of the last six years for which figures are available by (i) age of offender and (ii) category of offence; and if he will make a statement. [6329]

Ms Joyce Quin: The information requested is given in the attached tables.

Electoral Registers

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the costs of (a) compiling, (b) maintaining, (c) issuing and (d) using the electoral registers employed at the last general election. [6019]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: Figures on local authority spending on electoral registration are not held centrally, but the total cost of registration is generally estimated at about £40 million per annum.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of people who were registered in more than one polling district area at the last general election; and if he will make a statement. [6021]

Mr. Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: None. The information needed for such an estimate to be made is not available.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the numbers of people whose names appear on current electoral registers who had died before the date of the last general election; and if he will make a statement. [6016]

Mr. Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: None. Any figures for the total number of the deaths of all adults aged 17 and over in a given period would include a number whose names did not, for one reason or another, appear in the published electoral register.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the extent of electoral registration at the last general election relative to each general election since 1979. [6017]

Mr. Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 12 June, Official Report, column 511.

General Election

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the effectiveness of electoral procedures relating to the last general election separately examining (a) publicity to encourage electoral registration, (b) accessibility of polling stations, (c) dissemination of papers relating to the election and (d) postal and proxy voting. [6010]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: When the time comes for a review of electoral procedures I will bear these matters in mind.

Prisons (Drug Testing)

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish the results of the studies commissioned by the Prison Service relating to the use of mandatory drug testing in prisons conducted by the University of Oxford Centre for Criminological Research and the national addiction centre. [6351]

Ms Joyce Quin: Results from both the University of Oxford research into staff and prisoner attitudes to drug misuse and mandatory drug testing and the national addiction centre research into patterns and trends of drug misuse revealed by mandatory drug testing are not expected before the spring of 1998. I would expect the results to be published as soon as practicable after that.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6028]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 4 July, Official Report, column 294.

Alcohol Sales (Minors)

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there were for selling alcohol to those aged under 18 years (a) nationally and (b) in Nottinghamshire in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [6560]

Mr. Michael: Information for 1991 to 1995 (latest available) is given in the table.

Immigration Detainees

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the daily cost to the Prison Service budget of keeping a detained asylum seeker in Strangeways Prison, Manchester. [6594]

Ms Joyce Quin: £52.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has made to the representations he has received calling for greater openness in respect of the nature and types of animal experimentation in the United Kingdom; and what actions the Government are planning in this respect. [6580]

Mr. George Howarth: I have replied that section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 prohibits the disclosure of information provided confidentially in licence applications. These are assessed by Home Office inspectors, in whose expertise and integrity we have complete confidence. Annual statistics are published which provide detailed information on the nature and type of scientific procedures carried out on animals in each year. The report of the Animal Procedures Committee also sets out details of the operation of the Act.

Licensing Laws

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the operation of the present licensing laws, with particular reference to their operation in seaside towns and tourist areas on Sundays. [6578]

Mr. George Howarth: We are considering a number of licensing issues, including calls for a general review.

Air Rifles

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the current arrangements regarding the manufacture, distribution, marketing, sale and ownership of air rifles. [7110]

Mr. Michael: The Government will consider carefully whether changes are necessary on a wide range of firearms controls, including those on air weapons, in due course. We decided that the first priority for this session must be to resolve the outstanding issue of .22 handguns and to ensure that the legislation on handguns is properly in place as quickly as possible.

Sex Offenders Act 1997

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to implement the Sex Offenders Act 1997; and if he will make a statement. [6919]

Mr. Michael: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. member for Ashford (Mr. Green) on 30 June, Official Report, column 3.

WPC Yvonne Fletcher

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 23 June, Official Report, column 357–58, for what reasons the police assessment of the film, "Murder at St. James's", will take over three months. [5591]

Mr. Straw: As I stated in my answer of 23 June, Official Report column 358, the Metropolitan Police's review of the contents of the programme involves a good deal of detailed analysis of the extensive documentation already generated by their investigation.

Probation Officers

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the arrangements for the training of new probation officers, with particular reference to resourcing and qualifications; and if he will make a statement. [5631]

Ms Joyce Quin: I am currently considering the future recruitment and training of probation officers, taking account of a joint proposal produced by the Association of Chief Officers of Probation, the Central Probation Council and the National Association of Probation Officers, and I intend to make a statement in due course.

Immigration

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if same sex partners have the same rights as husbands and wives of British citizens under present immigration procedures. [5887]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: No. The Immigration Rules provide for the admission of married couples and of fiance(e)s who are expected to marry within a reasonable period of time. At present, the Rules do not provide for the admission of foreign nationals who are partners in same sex relationships.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications were made for each of the last 24 months; and how many of these were made (a) at port of entry, (b) within one week of arrival, (c) within one month of arrival, (d) within three months of arrival and (e) later than three months after arrival. [6598]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Information regarding the number of applications for asylum lodged in the United Kingdom, and on the length of time between arrival date and application date, for those who applied after having been previously granted leave to enter or remain under another section of the Immigration Rules, is given in the tables.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the current length of detention for asylum seekers. [5528]

Mr. O'Brien: The number of people recorded as being detained on 31 May 1997, who had sought asylum at some stage, was 733. Of these, 601 had been detained for less than six months and 21 for longer than twelve months. Policies relating to detention are currently under review.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of people (a) injured and (b) killed as a result of crime in each of the last five years. [7118]

Mr. Michael: The available information from the recorded crime statistics is given in the following table. With regard to persons injured, the figures given relate to the number of offences in certain categories of offences of violence against the person where the assumption is that an injury or threat to cause injury has occurred. Robbery has been included for the same reason. It is not possible to identify separately threats from the substantive offence. Where a person has been injured during the commission of another offence (i.e. a burglary) then, for recording purposes, the offence of violence usually takes precedence.

The British Crime Survey (BCS) gives an estimate for 1995 of the number of people injured in woundings, robberies and common assaults of 2,185,000. The equivalent figure for 1993 is 2,153,000. the numbers injured as a result of crime is much higher than those from offences recorded by the police because (i) not all offences are reported to the police, and (ii) they include common assaults (which as summary offences are not currently recorded by the police). The injuries covered by the BCS range from bruises/scratches to more severe injury. Common assaults involve only minor injuries. Because it is a survey of victims, the BCS does not cover people killed.

Crime Costs

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the cost of crime to the United Kingdom economy during each of the last five years. [7117]

Mr. Michael: Information to provide a full answer to this question is not available. I will write to the hon. Gentleman shortly to outline such information as we possess, and will place a copy of that letter in the Library.

Crime (Urban Areas)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he proposes to reduce crime in urban areas, with particular reference to violent crime. [5513]

Mr. Straw: Our comprehensive strategy to tackle crime includes: the introduction of a duty on local authorities and the police to develop statutory partnerships for crime prevention and community safety; community safety orders to restrain the behaviour of named individuals; new offences of racial harassment and racially-motivated violence; action on alcohol-related crime; the appointment of an anti-drugs supremo to co-ordinate the battle against drugs; and a total ban on the private possession of handguns.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing (Scotland)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the final permitted total amount for each Scottish local authority in 1996–97 which can be spent at the discretion of the local authority for private tenants who experience exceptional hardship as a result of their housing benefit entitlement being reduced following a local reference rent or a single room rent determination; and what had been spent by each local authority from this discretionary fund by the end of March. [2536]

Mr. Keith Bradley: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, has announced her decision to revoke the Regulations, laid by the last Government, that would have reduced the Housing Benefit entitlement for single people aged over 25.

The information requested on Permitted Totals for Scottish local authorities will not be available until the beginning of next year.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the impact on the budget of the DSS of any given levels of minimum wage. [3743]

Mr. Field: We will ask the independent Low Pay Commission, before it reaches a recommendation on the level at which the National Minimum Wage might be set, to take into account all the economic circumstances, including its likely impact. We will not speculate about the possible effects of hypothetical levels before the Commission has had a chance to consider the issues.

Child Support

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the average weekly Child Support Agency full assessment on (a) 30 September and (b) 31 March for each year of the CSA's operation indicating the figures for (i) court orders and (ii) liable relative negotiated agreements for the previous two years. [5276]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government believes that all children are entitled to the support of both parents, irrespective of where they live. Children should only be supported by the taxpayer when their parents are unable to do so.

The information is not available in the format requested. The table gives the average weekly Child Support figures at the closest possible dates. Prior to the introduction of Child Support the average maintenance per child was £15 if arranged by the Department of Social Security or the Magistrates' court; £20 if arranged by the County court and £24 when arranged by the Scottish courts.

Average weekly full maintenance assessments

	Average of maintenance assessments where absent parent has income from employment	All full maintenance assessments
June 1994	45.53	27.06
October 1994	44.34	26.39
March 1995	43.46	25.56
August 1995	38.66	23.37
February 1996	38.62	22.86
August 1996	38.02	22.02
February 1997	37.73	21.39

The drop in the average amount of child support maintenance after March 1995 reflects the policy changes which took effect from April 1995.

Children Come First Volume 2—Table 12.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many absent parents on income support and income based jobseeker's allowance are currently clients of the Child Support Agency; what proportion of each have deductions made from their benefit in lieu of child maintenance excluding those on income support or receiving jobseeker's allowance; how many absent parents have a nil liability for child maintenance; and how many are liable to pay the minimum payment. [5250]

Mr. Bradley: At February 1997 there were 168,900 absent parent clients of the Child Support Agency receiving income support and a further 2,500 receiving income based jobseeker's allowance. At August 1996, the most recent date for which income support information is available, some 30,000 absent parents had a contribution to maintenance deducted from their benefit. Since this was before the introduction of jobseeker's allowance it includes unemployed absent parents receiving income support.

At February 1997 there were 57,500 absent parents with nil liability for child maintenance and a further 42,400 liable to pay the minimum amount. This excludes those receiving income support or income based jobseeker's allowance who automatically have nil liability under the formula provisions.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the impact of a reduced benefit direction on children. [5256]

Mr. Bradley: We think it right that lone mothers should co-operate wherever possible in seeking maintenance for their children. The Department is continually monitoring and evaluating reduced benefit directions which apply only where a parent with care has failed to co-operate with the Child Support Agency and has no good reason for this failure. This evaluation is supported by research conducted by the Agency on the requirement to co-operate provisions, published in April last year ("The Requirement to Co-operate: A Report on the Operation of the 'Good Cause' provisions. Department of Social Security in-house report 14").

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will give a breakdown of the benefit savings made as a result of Child Support Agency activity in 1996–97; what is the expected breakdown of benefit savings for the current financial year; and if she will estimate total benefit savings over the next five years. [5304]

Mr. Bradley: The actual benefit savings for 1996–97 and the estimated savings for 1997–98 is in the table.

£ million

	1996–97 outturn	1997–98 estimates
Income support reductions	208.6	235.6
Family credit/disability working allowance reductions	48.1	58.7
Deductions from absent parents income support	4.8	7.3
Maintenance cessations—maintenance exceeds rate of income support	6.3	51.1
Non maintenance cessations—benefit claim withdrawn within four to eight weeks of CSA action	201.2	152.0
Total	469.0	504.7

Within the situation we have inherited the current estimate of total benefit savings over the next five years from April 1997 is some £2,800 million.

Pensions

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the full state pension as a proportion of average earnings for each year since 1980 and her estimate for the next three years assuming uprating is linked to prices. [6597]

Mr. Denham: We believe that all pensioners should share fairly in rising national prosperity and are committed to examine the means of delivering more help to the poorest pensioners. We will retain the basic State pension as the foundation of pension provision, increasing it at least in line with prices.

The information requested is set out in the table.

Year	Standard rate of Category A retirement pension as a proportion of average earnings (per cent.)
November 1980	22.6
November 1981	22.4
November 1982	23.1

April 1995	17.5
April 1996	17.4
1997	17.1
1998	16.9
1999	16.6

1. For years up to and including 1996, both the actual standard rate of Category A retirement pension and actual average earnings for all full-time adults from the News Earning Survey are available, and these figures are used to produce the proportions shown in Table 6.1 of The Abstract of Statistics for Social Security Benefits and Contributions and Indices of Prices and Earnings 1996 Edition. However, the published figure for 1996 was provisional only, and the final figure is shown in the table.

2. To calculate the proportion of average earnings represented by the standard rate of category A retirement pension for years after 1996, it has been assumed that retirement pension rates remain constant in price terms while average earnings increase by 1.5 per cent. each year.

3. All figures are rounded to the nearest 0.1 per cent.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which pensioner organisations she has met since her appointment; and what other discussions she plans to hold prior to the announcement of the state pension level for 1998–99. [6600]

Mr. Denham: Amongst the meetings I have attended was the National Pensioners Convention Conference in Blackpool on 17 June and my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, attended the AGM of the Southwark Pensioner's Forum.

The pensions review, which will be announced shortly, will look at the central areas of insecurity for elderly people, including all aspects of the basic pension and its value. In undertaking this review we will ensure that the voices of pensioners are put at the centre of Government. I anticipate meeting representative pensioners organisations on a number of occasions during the visit.

We believe that all pensioners should share fairly in rising national prosperity and we are committed to examining ways to deliver more automatic help to the poorest pensioners. We will retain the basic State pension as the foundation of pension provision, increasing it at least in line with prices and we intend to have a number of discussions with interested groups before the level of State pension for 1998–99 is announced.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if she will ensure that the Government Actuary reviews the level of contracted-out rebates immediately following any changes in the tax regime that reduce the investment income of contracted-out occupational, and appropriate personal pension, schemes; [6563]

(2) if she will estimate the level of age-related payments in respect of personal pension schemes for the year 1997–98, if such schemes did not receive a credit of advance corporation tax; [6564]

(3) if she will estimate the impact on expenditure from the national insurance fund by way of additional age-related payments to personal pension schemes in the year 1997–98, if their level had been calculated on the assumption that contracted-out occupational pension schemes did not receive a credit of advance corporation tax; [6565]

(4) what would be the charge on expenditure from the national insurance fund in respect of additional age related payments to contracted-out money purchase schemes for contracted-out employment in the financial year 1997–98, if their level had been calculated on the assumption that contracted-out occupational pension schemes did not receive a credit of advance corporation tax; [6566]

(5) what would be the increase in the (a) financial primary and secondary class 1 and class 4 national insurance contributions, (b) class 2 and class 3 national insurance contributions and (c) percentage of payments to the national insurance fund under section 2 of the Social Security Act 1992 needed to offset the cost to the national insurance fund of an increase in the flat rate contracted-out rebates to contracted-out occupational pension schemes and in age-related payments to contracted-out money purchase and appropriate personal pension schemes is such schemes did not receive a credit of advance corporation tax; [6568]

(6) if she will estimate the reduction in income to the national insurance fund in respect of contracted-out employment in the year 1997–98, if the level of the national insurance rebates to contracted-out (a) salary-related and (b) money purchase schemes had been calculated on the assumption that the schemes did not receive a credit of advance corporation tax; [6569]

(7) if she will estimate the reduction in (a) primary and (b) secondary Class 1 national insurance contributions on contracted-out money purchase schemes and the levels of age rebated payments to such schemes in respect of contracted-out employment in the year 1997–98, if such schemes did not receive a credit of advance corporation tax; [6570]

(8) if she will estimate the reduction in (a) primary and (b) secondary class 1 national insurance contributions for contracted-out salary-related schemes in respect of contracted-out employment in the year 1997–98, if such schemes did not receive a credit of advance corporation tax. [6571]

Mr. Denham: What matters is the long run performance of investments and the health of companies providing occupational and personal pensions. It is the long term rates of return on pension fund investments which are reflected in the national insurance rebates. The Budget promotes investment. Like other shareholders, members of pension schemes will benefit from the better climate for investment by companies, as will the companies which provide occupational and personal pensions.

We shall consider whether it is necessary to ask the Government Actuary to look again at the assumptions underlying the national insurance rebates for contracting-out of SERPS.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the cost of increasing the state pension to the basic level for all persons entitled to income support as a supplement to their existing pension. [6609]

Mr. Denham: We estimate that one in four pensioners are entitled to Income Support. We do not have enough information to estimate the costs of bringing all those in this group who have less than a full basic Retirement Pension up to that level. However, we are commissioning research to determine why some pensioners do not claim the Income Support to which they are entitled; we are also committed to reviewing the central areas of insecurity for our older citizens.

VAT on Fuel

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what factors underlie the different estimates contained in the answer of 24 June, Official Report, column 491, and the Prime Minister's oral answer of 24 June, Official Report, column 686, on the impact on pensioners of the imposition of VAT on domestic fuel. [7116]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The policies of the previous administration, including the introduction of VAT on fuel, have created real poverty, growing inequality and widespread insecurity for pensioners. Between April 1994 and April 1997, the average pensioner was undercompensated for the additional cost of fuel and power. In 1997 the compensation is adequate because of a real fall in the prices of fuel and power. Some pensioners could still be worse off, because of their individual circumstances.

The reduction of VAT on fuel to 5 per cent. will ensure that the poorest households, including pensioners, benefit most in proportion to their incomes, and that everyone will see the benefit in their fuel bills this winter.

Commissioners' Decisions

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make the decisions of the social security commissioners binding throughout the United Kingdom. [7149]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Social Security Commissioners have jurisdiction throughout Great Britain. There is a separate statutory authority for Social Security arrangements in Northern Ireland which has its own Social Security Commissioners. To make all Commissioners decisions binding throughout the United Kingdom would involve a fundamental change to the way in which precedent operates throughout the legal jurisdictions in Great Britain. The Government has no plans to change this arrangement.

Legislation will be brought forward to improve current decision making and appeals arrangements for all Social Security matters throughout the United Kingdom. Further details will be announced in due course.

SCOTLAND

Highlands and Islands Convention

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to change the composition and remit of the Highlands and Islands Convention; and if he will make a statement. [3796]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 23 June 1997]: Members are able to raise such issues for discussion at convention meetings.

GP Funding

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure that NHS funding under the control of general practitioner fundholders and NHS trusts is used exclusively to purchase NHS medical care and services. [5860]

Mr. Galbraith: The National Health Service (Scotland) Act 1978 as amended imposes a duty on NHS trusts and general medical practitioner fundholders to expend NHS funds on the provision of medical care and services for NHS patients. Under the regulations boards and GP fundholders can refer to centres outwith the NHS.

However, the interests of the patient must be paramount and I expect referrals outwith the NHS to take place only when the service is not readily available locally within the NHS.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6040]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, on 4 July 1997, column 293.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the deficit or surplus accrued as at 31 March for each NHS trust in Scotland. [6853]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 4 July 1997]: The retained deficit or surplus position as at 31 March for each NHS Trust in Scotland, is set out in the table. These figures are subject to final audit.

Nurses

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nursing vacancies there were in each NHS trust in each of the last five years. [6379]

Mr. Galbraith: Only a few trusts were in existence five years ago. Information on vacancies at Scotland level is available in the 14th and previous reports of the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine at Appendix D, Table 4 (Cm 3538), a copy of which is available in the House Library.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many newly qualified nurses there were in each of the last five years. [6380]

Mr. Galbraith: The information is set out in the table.

Student nurses completed training 1992–93 to 1996–97

	Nurses in training	1992 courses (P2000)[1]

1996–97[2]	388	1,622

Notes:

[1] In 1992 new courses for training nurses were introduced. Students are no longer NHS employees but have student status and receive bursaries. The "old" courses were gradually phased out as the last of these students passed through over the next few years.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number and percentage of nurses who are on temporary contracts, indicating the proportion of nurses on contracts of one year or less. [6382]

Mr. Galbraith: Information at a current date could not be obtained other than at disproportionate costs. Most recent data available from 1996 suggested that overall only 5½ per cent. of nurses were on temporary contracts.

Health Service Staff Vacancies

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many unfilled vacancies there are in each NHS trust in Scotland; and if he will provide a breakdown of the vacant posts by specialisation. [6381]

Mr. Galbraith: With regard to unfilled consultant vacancies I refer the hon. Lady to my answer to her questions of 5 June on the same subject, Official Report, column 230.

Information on other staff vacancies cannot be obtained other than at disproportionate costs.

Information on vacancies at Scotland level for staff groups covered by the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives, Health Visitors and Professions Allied to Medicine is given in their fourteenth reports at Appendix D, Table 4 (Cm 3538/9), a copy of which is available in the House Library.

General Practitioner Trainees

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many GP trainees there were in Scotland in 1996. [6384]

Mr. Galbraith: There were 283 GP trainees in post as at 1 April 1996 and 234 as at 1 October 1996.

Hospital Beds

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the number of hospital beds in Scotland broken down to show figures for (a) psychiatric, (b) geriatric, (c) acute and (d) maternity beds. [6385]

Mr. Galbraith: The information is set out in the table.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is his estimate of total beef consumption by volume, in the United Kingdom in each of the past three years; [6607]

(2) what is his estimate of the level of beef imports, by volume, to the United Kingdom in each of the past three years. [6608]

Mr. Rooker: Information on the total level of actual beef consumption is not available. However, estimates of the total volume of beef available for domestic usage are available in "Quarterly supplies and domestic usage of meat in the United Kingdom", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Information on the volume of beef imports (in carcase weight equivalent) is available from the same source.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what response he has made to the communication he has received from Commissioner Bonino in respect of alleged illegal exportation of beef from the United Kingdom; what actions he proposes to initiate on this matter; and if he will make a statement. [7094]

Dr. Cunningham: I replied immediately to Commissioner Bonino expressing my deep concern about the alleged illegal beef exports. I assured her that my officials were continuing their investigations into the allegations with the utmost speed and rigour in conjunction with the Commission's Anti-Fraud Unit and the Dutch authorities. I have placed a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Salmon and Freshwater Fisheries

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review salmon and freshwater fisheries legislation. [7190]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I will shortly be establishing a small, independent group to review all aspects of existing policies and legislation on salmon and freshwater fisheries in England and Wales. This will be a comprehensive review, intended to produce ideas for the future management and conservation of salmon and freshwater fish. We will be announcing the members of the review group in the autumn.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6030]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 4 July, Official Report, columns 293–94.

Fish (Abnormal Isoforms)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence his Department has evaluated in respect of the presence of abnormal isoforms of prion protein in normal fish. [6556]

Mr. Rooker: The only evidence that is available and has been evaluated by my Department is the paper recently published by C. J. Gibbs and C. L. Bolis, titled 'Normal isoform of amyloid protein (PrP) in brains of spawning salmon' (reference: MOLECULAR-PSYCHIATRY, 1997, V2, N2, MAR, Pp 145–147. ISSN: 1359–4184). In the knowledge that the normal isoform of Protease resistant Protein (PrP) has been identified in the tissues of all mammalian species thus far tested, as well as in Drosophila, the authors report the presence of this protein for the first time in the brains of fish (Pacific salmon). They go on to speculate about the theoretical probability that the abnormal isoform of PrP could arise spontaneously in fish, but do not report that it has been identified. This information has been passed to SEAC who have made no recommendations.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the incidence of abnormal isoforms of prion protein in experimentally-infected fish. [6557]

Mr. Rooker: As far as we are aware, there have been no experimental exposures of fish to spongiform encephalopathies.

Food (Radioactive Contamination)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the maximum permitted level of radioactive contamination of foodstuffs following (a) a nuclear accident and (b) any other case of radiological emergency for nuclides of half-life greater than 10 days. [6401]

Mr. Rooker: Derived reference levels, which may be used as a basis for the fixing of maximum permitted levels of radioactive contamination for foodstuffs, are set by several European Union Regulations. These levels apply both to nuclear accidents and to any other case of nuclear emergency which is likely to lead, or has led, to significant radioactive contamination of food. The situation regarding the maximum permitted levels for radionuclides with a half-life of greater than 10 days is complicated, but for most such nuclides and foods, a level of 1,250 Bq/kg would apply.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the likely impact of a criticality in an underground repository on foodstuffs. [6407]

Mr. Rooker: No such assessment had been made. If an application for authorisation of an underground repository is made, MAFF will fulfil its role in assessing the associated safety case to ensure the safety of foodstuffs. This will encompass all relevant scenarios for the release of radionuclides.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what level of technetium 99 has been found in lobsters obtained from the Irish sea in the vicinity of Sellafield; and if it exceeds the maximum permitted level of radioactive contamination of food-stuffs for nuclides of half-life greater than 10 days. [6551]

Mr. Rooker: As reported in the MAFF report, "Radioactivity in Food and the Environment", the average level of technetium-99 in lobsters from the Irish Sea close to Sellafield was 8,300 Bq/kg in 1995. In 1996 the average level was 9,150 Bq/kg. The EU maximum permitted level of 1,250 Bq/kg only applies in the event of a nuclear accident and is not relevant in this case.

The level would be applied in the early stages of an accident before an assessment can be made and is based on the most restrictive radionuclides. The radiological significance of technetium-99 is low in comparison. The annual radiation exposure to the most exposed group associated with lobster consumption was 18 μSv/year in 1995 and 29 μSv/year in 1996. This can be compared with the public dose limit of 1000 μSv/year and presents no food safety concerns.

Departmental Accommodation

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will happen to the accommodation vacated by Ministers and officials in Whitehall Place. [6962]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The accommodation vacated by Ministers and officials in Whitehall Place will be occupied by staff of the Department. Within the next few years the Whitehall Place buildings will need to be vacated for renovation.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what date is planned for the move of Ministers and certain officials from Whitehall Place to Nobel House. [6958]

Dr. Cunningham: The move of Ministers and officials from Whitehall Place to Nobel House is expected to be completed by 30 November 1997.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for how long officials decanted out of Nobel House will remain in temporary accommodation; where is that accommodation; and what is the cost of making it available. [6964]

Dr. Cunningham: Officials decanted out of Nobel House are not expected to remain in temporary accommodation beyond 30 June 1998. The temporary accommodation is at St. Christopher House, Southwark Street, London SE1. It is estimated that it will cost £220,000 to prepare it for the Department's occupation. The building is already on the Government estate so there will be no additional rental costs to the Exchequer but the Department will pay an occupancy charge (rent, rates and service costs) of £367,000 for the year to the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate, an executive agency of the Cabinet Office.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many officials, listed according to function and grade, will be moved out of Nobel House to permit Ministers and other officials to move in. [6963]

Mr. Cunningham: The Department's Chief Scientist's Group will be moved out of Nobel House to St. Christopher House. The numbers and grades of officials are as follows:

Senior Civil Service Grades: 5

Grade 6: 10

Grade 7: 16

SEO and equivalent, and below: 89

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the functions of his Department which will be located in Nobel House once Ministers and officials have moved there; and if he will list the functions remaining at Whitehall Place. [6954]

Dr. Cunningham: The main departmental functions in Nobel House, after Ministers have moved, will comprise the Permanent Secretary; three Heads of Directorate; the Secretariat; Press Branch; Fisheries Group; Environment Group; Establishments Group (part).

The functions which will remain at Whitehall will comprise European Union and Livestock Group; Arable Crops Group (part); Food, Drink and Marketing Policy Group; Legal Department; and Economics and Statistics Group.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many officials, listed according to function, will move with Ministers to Nobel House. [6957]

Dr. Cunningham: The functions of the Department that will move from Whitehall Place to Nobel House are the Permanent Secretary, three Heads of Directorate, the Secretariat, Press Officials and other support staff. About 76 officials will move.

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated cost of the move to Nobel House with special reference to reorganisation of rooms, increased security, and new conference facilities. [6966]

Dr. Cunningham: The estimated cost of moving Ministers and officials from Whitehall Place to Nobel House is £120,000. Re-organising rooms and providing new and better conference facilities will cost a further £240,000. Expenditure of this order would have been incurred anyway within the next few years when the Department renovated Whitehall Place. It is not anticipated that there would be any additional costs in relation to security provision.

EU Presidency

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what facilities the Minister assesses are necessary to host the United Kingdom Presidency of the EU. [6955]

Dr. Jack Cunningham: The United Kingdom presidency of the Agriculture and Fisheries Councils will require MAFF Ministers to host a series of meetings in London with EU Ministers and Commissioners over and above those they would normally expect to hold.

Written Answers to Questions

PRIME MINISTER

Committee on Standards in Public Life

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to receive the Third Report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life; and if he will make a statement. [7541]

The Prime Minister: The Third Report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, under the Chairmanship of Lord Nolan, is being published today as Command Paper 3702. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Vote Office and the Library of the House.

We are committed to ensuring the highest standards in public life in this country. I am grateful to Lord Nolan and his colleagues for the significant contribution that they continue to make towards improving the standards of conduct throughout the public sector. Their Third Report covers local government in England, Scotland and Wales.

The Committee received wide-ranging written submissions and heard extensive oral evidence in open proceedings. It has concluded that there are:

"an enormous number of dedicated and hard working people" in local government. It has, however, identified that there is a lack of clarity about rules or expectation of proper behaviour, which it believes is because the responsibility for the maintenance of standards has moved away from local government.

The Committee is, therefore, proposing that in the new climate of improved relations between central and local government, a new start should now be made on building an ethical framework for local government. This would take the best of what already exists, but place responsibility with local government itself. In this context the Committee has unanimously made some forty detailed recommendations. These, if implemented, would result in a radical restructuring of the ethical framework in which local authorities—their members and officers—operate.

I welcome the Committee's careful examination and analysis of conduct—both of councillors and of officers—in local authorities. Their confirmation of the strengths of local government in Great Britain is reassuring, and demonstrates that there is a firm foundation on which we can build. We entirely accept the Committee's conclusion that now is the time to make a new start on the ethical framework for local government.

Accordingly, we shall now be consulting widely on the Committee's specific recommendations, including with the Local Government Association, the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, the Welsh Local Government Association, the Audit Commission of England and Wales, and the Scottish Accounts Commission. In parallel with this consultation the Nolan Committee will be consulting on a proposal for a new statutory offence of misuse of public office, which would apply across the public sector, including local government. Copies of the Committee's consultation paper are available with the Report.

Our intention is to work in partnership with local government to establish a framework for local authorities guaranteeing the highest standards of conduct. Such a framework will be central to achieving our manifesto aim of more independent but accountable local government.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Electoral System (European Parliament)

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to work towards a uniform electoral system for the 1999 elections to the European Parliament. [5735]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government remain committed to the introduction of a proportional voting system for elections to the European Parliament but no decision has yet been taken on the timing of a change.

Police Widows Pension Regulations

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the police widows pension regulations. [5777]

Mr. Michael: We will be giving early consideration to taking forward the recent review by the Home Department and the Treasury of the police pension scheme in general, including the question of a consultation exercise, but we have no present plans to extend the scope of the police widows pension.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in the Metropolitan Police are currently awaiting a placement with a police station and assigned no other specific duties; and what is the estimated cost of these police officers in salary or costs. [6450]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner informs me that there are no officers within the Metropolitan Police District currently awaiting a placement with a police station and assigned no other specific duties.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimates the Metropolitan Police Commissioner has made of the cost of providing the necessary retraining arising from his Career Management policy. [6451]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner informs me that there will be no increase in the Metropolitan Police's training budget as a result of the introduction of the new tenure policy. Any additional demands for training will not be significant and will be met from within existing budgets.

Policing (British Field Sports Rally)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the cost of policing the British Field Sports Rally in Hyde Park on 10 July. [7125]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner informs me that the estimated staffing cost to the Metropolitan Police for policing the British Sports Rally in Hyde Park on 10 July is £119,374, on the basis of a complete eight hour tour of duty for all staff. The figure covers the cost of the normal duties the officers would have otherwise undertaken. No figure is available for the costs of support services, such as catering and transport. The extent to which officers are deployed to police a public order event is an operational decision for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7203]

Mr. Straw: The oldest documents retained in the Home Office under section 3(4) of the Public Records Act 1958 date from 1876. They are concerned with matters relating to national security. It had earlier been decided that it would not be in the public interest to disclose their nature. Now that the matter has been drawn to my attention by the hon. Member's question, I have asked that this decision be reviewed, given the antiquity of the files in question.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7142]

Mr. Straw: The Year 2000 computer problem will impact directly on the business of the Department. For this reason, the Director of each business area in the Home Office has appointed a Year 2000 manager who is responsible for ensuring that computer systems within their area are Year 2000-compliant. Initial inventory and audits were completed by December 1996 and costed plans for resolving the problem are to be produced by each business area by October 1997. The aim is for all system changes to have been implemented and tested by December 1998, and for the cost of preventive and remedial action to be met from within existing provision. At present, the project is on schedule to meet these dates.

The Corporate Resources Director is chairing a Year 2000 Steering Committee, the terms of reference for which include the monitoring of action taken across the Department to ensure that the timetable is met and the sharing of information to ensure that business areas benefit from experience elsewhere and that they co-operate where appropriate. My Department is represented on the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency's (CCTA) Year 2000 Public Sector Group and is using the guidance issued by CCTA "Tackling the Year 2000".

WALES

Surgery

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what monitoring takes place of the quality of surgery carried out in general practitioners' surgeries in Wales; how this compares with the monitoring of similar surgical work in hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [5321]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Since 1 April 1996, GPs providing secondary care services in a primary care setting are required to obtain Health Authority approval to ensure the safe and effective provision of such services. Health Authorities must also satisfy themselves of a GPs competence to undertake and continue to undertake minor surgical procedures, as part of their normal general medical services commitments. Authorities must ensure the strict criteria for admission to their minor surgery list is met prior to agreeing to pay for these services, as with any other provider for whom it has a contract to purchase services.

NHS Internal Market

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set out the steps which are being taken by his Department to end in Wales the internal market of the national health service. [5874]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I have deferred approval of the eighth wave of GP fundholding until July 1998 to allow breathing space to develop alternative commissioning models. I recently announced that I would be inviting proposals to pilot new arrangements for locality commissioning, supported by some of the savings generated by the postponement.

Officials have notified health authorities and GP fundholders that revised budgetary arrangements will be developed to remove some of the disadvantages experienced by patients of non-fundholding practices. Detailed guidance will issue shortly.

I have also asked the Welsh Association of Fundholding Practices (WAFP) and the General Medical Services Council (GMSC) for Wales to work with me to determine the direction of health care in the principality, building on current best practice.

On 25 June the Government announced a White Paper on the National Health Service's internal market. It will be the subject of extensive consultation throughout Wales in the autumn.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that, in reviews of the common agricultural policy (a) the future of hill livestock compensatory allowances is safeguarded and (b) such allowances are at adequate levels to sustain the agricultural activity of the less favoured areas. [6388]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Government will take account of the interests of sheep and suckler cow producers in less favoured areas during its negotiations on common agricultural policy reform in the EU Council of Agriculture Ministers; and in setting the annual rates of hill livestock compensatory allowances.

Beef

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average market price of beef in Wales in the months of April and May; what were the corresponding figures for April and May in (a) 1995 and (b) 1996; and if he will make a statement on the impact of these facts on Government policy in relation to the beef sector in Wales. [6389]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The average market prices were as follows (in pence per kg liveweight for steers, heifers and young bulls):

	April	May
1995	121.03	119.44
1996	103.80	102.43
1997	95.01	89.75

The Government will take account of all relevant facts in developing its policy towards the beef industry, and will negotiate positively with the European Commission and other member states in order to secure removal of the export ban.

Velindre Hospital

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his statement to the Welsh Grand Committee of 30 June, Official Report, column 25, in relation to the replacement of radiotherapy machines at Velindre hospital, if he will list (a) the date on which the business case for replacement was sent to his Department by the Trust, (b) the date on which the PFI proposal is to be advertised in the Official Journal of the European Communities, (c) the approximate capital cost of the scheme, (d) the indicated length of contract for the PFI proposal and (e) the date on which he expects work to commence. [7211]

Mr. Win Griffiths:

(a) 21 April 1996

(b) 12 October 1996

(c) £4 million

(d) Not less than 10 years

(e) Date unknown as yet. A business case is being prepared for submission to the Welsh Office in the Autumn.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7198]

Mr. Ron Davies: Safeguarding of Airfield Site plan 1945.

Educational Standards

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has for raising educational standards in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [7644]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have today laid before the House a White Paper, the first in modern times to focus exclusively on education in Wales. Called 'Building Excellent Schools Together', it sets out our vision of improving standards through co-operation to create an education system designed to benefit the many, not the few.

Central to the White Paper are our key principles. We have promised to make education and training the cardinal priority of government in Wales. We shall work with teachers, recognising their efforts and encouraging them to succeed in lifting achievement and attainment across the board. We shall focus on standards, rather than a damaging concentration on structures–and we will not tolerate underperformance. We shall also ensure that government policy is applied in a way that reflects the distinctive needs and circumstances of Wales.

Raising standards of literacy and numeracy will be at the heart of our programme of reform. Following my right hon. Friend's Budget Statement to the House on 2 July, substantial extra funding will be allocated to education in Wales and we shall use this where we can achieve the best results. We shall also provide leadership and support to all those who have a contribution to make in the drive to raise standards overall. This will draw in the help of everyone with a stake in excellent education for all pupils at school in Wales; teachers, parents, governors, education authorities and business people alike.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by her Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7205]

Clare Short: The oldest archival unit held in DFID, which will be eligible for eventual release to the Public Record Office, dates from June 1961, and is titled "Security Arrangements". The papers have been retained because of their Security significance.

WaterAid

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will visit the offices of WaterAid to discuss the funding and activities of the charity; and if she will make a statement. [6771]

Clare Short: We welcome an active dialogue with WaterAid. We are currently co-funding 12 WaterAid projects with a total cost of £950,000 this financial year. My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for International Development met WaterAid's Director on 3 July. My officials are in regular contact. I have made it clear that access to safe water and sanitation is a priority in combating poverty. I certainly intend to meet WaterAid, and the other NGOs active in developing countries as soon as possible.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7138]

Clare Short: We expect to have resolved problems relating to the year 2000 on information systems critical to the business of the Department by the end of 1998. We are working in parallel on smaller systems established by various sections within the DFID, and expect to resolve them by mid-1999. The identifiable cost of dealing with Year 2000 issues is around £200,000 although this figure is an underestimate of the total since other Year 2000 costs have been subsumed within the costs of rewriting critical systems for a new operating environment. The official in overall charge of dealing with the Year 2000 is the head of the Information Systems Department. The number of staff working on the project is around five, supplemented by resources brought in from consultants.

Aid and Trade

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what was the total value of exports receiving aid and trade provision assistance over the past three years by country. [6883]

Clare Short: The following table lists by country the ATP projects with their total export value agreed during the last three years:

Export value for Financial Year's 1994–95 to 1997–98

Country	£ million
Chile	2.37
China	104.57
Ghana	23.80
Indonesia	125.75
Lesotho	6.55
Pakistan	7.23
Philippines	41.48
Sri Lanka	0.09
Thailand	15.02
Zimbabwe	3.96
Total	330.82

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery Grants

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many national lottery grants have been awarded to organisations and groups in Blackpool, South; and what are the values of those grants. [6577]

Mr. Banks: To date 13 grants totalling £1,681,676 have been made to organisations and groups in Blackpool, South. The details are as follows:

Distributing body	Award date	Recipient	Award amount (£)
Arts Council of England	21 February 1996	North Fylde Music Cycle	41,108
Arts Council of England	19 March 1997	Blackpool Town Centre Forum Ltd.	5,000
Heritage Lottery Fund	18 September 1996	Furness Railway Trust	97,500
National Lottery Charities Board	17 December 1996	The Blackpool Fylde and Wyre Society for the Blind	175,515
National Lottery Charities Board	23 October 1995	Blackpool Wyre Fylde Community Voluntary Services	110,000
National Lottery Charities Board	17 December 1996	Disability Information Services, Blackpool, Wyre and Flyde	97,300
National Lottery Charities Board	11 August 1996	Home Start Grange Park	69,140
National Lottery Charities Board	17 December 1996	Age Concern Blackpool and District	50,980
National Lottery Charities Board	11 August 1996	Blackpool Single Homeless Project	28,767
National Lottery Charities Board	19 December 1995	Kensington House Trust	6,000
Sports Council	5 June 1997	Blackpool Borough Council	884,200
Sports Council	10 October 1996	Blackpool Borough Council	68,000
Sports Council	19 June 1996	Blackpool and Fylde No. 4 Sub Aqua Club	48,166
Total 13 awards			1,681,676

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to discuss with the national arts councils ways in which greater regional input can be obtained in respect of their grant-making procedures, with particular reference to the Government's proposals for regional development agencies. [6574]

Mr. Fisher: The Government is committed to encouraging more decision making at local level. It is consulting on the potential role and functions of the regional development agencies and how they can work with other regional development agencies and how they can work with other regional and national bodies. Furthermore, we will be publishing a White Paper on Lottery distribution later this month which will set out the Government's thinking about ways to achieve a more strategic and co-ordinated system of Lottery distribution.

Ryder Cup (Television)

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will ensure that highlights of the Ryder Cup will be available on terrestrial television. [6875]

Mr. Fisher: The Ryder Cup is not one of the events listed under Part 4 of the Broadcasting Act 1996. The arrangements for broadcasting the event are a matter for the rights holders and the broadcasters to determine. However, I understand that the owners of the rights to the European tournament are committed to the voluntary agreement on "unbundling" the various broadcast rights. The review of listed events will need to assess the effectiveness of the present arrangements for "unbundling" as a substitute form of access to some events.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what plans he has to review the entitlement to reduced television licence fees for retirement pensions; [6635]

(2) what representations he has received concerning the position of retirement pensioners in sheltered housing paying a reduced television licence fee whose resident warden is replaced by a community alarm system. [6638]

Mr. Fisher: The Government will be reviewing the arrangements for funding the BBC from 2002 before that date and this review will include consideration of the concessionary arrangements. We have received approximately 160 letters on various aspects of the concessionary television licence scheme.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what reduction in television licence fees a registered blind person is entitled to; for how long this entitlement has been in operation at its current level; and if he will make a statement. [6611]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The reduction in the television licence fee for registered blind people is £1.25. The reduction has remained at its present level since 1965. The Government will be reviewing the arrangements for funding the BBC from 2002 before that date and this review will include consideration of the concessionary arrangements.

Sport Commentaries

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will place particular priority on local radio for live commentary in his review of the protected list of sports events; and if he will make a statement. [6869]

Mr. Fisher: The arrangements for listing under the Broadcasting Act 1996 refer only to live television broadcasts of major events. However, the review of listed events will need to assess the effectiveness of the voluntary arrangements for unbundling the various types of broadcasting rights as a substitute form of access to some events. In doing so, we may also consider whether more needs to be done to secure live radio commentary on major events.

Office of the National Lottery

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) how many copies of the OFLOT annual report 1996–97 OFLOT purchased from The Stationery Office; and what was the cost incurred; [6776]

(2) how many copies of the OFLOT annual report 1996–97 OFLOT distributed free of charge; and what was the cost incurred; [6777]

(3) what percentage of OFLOT's annual budget has been devoted to the purchase and distribution of the annual report in each year since its establishment. [6779]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 4 July 1997]: This is a matter for OFLOT. I have asked the Director-General, to write to the hon. Member, and copies of his response will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what guidance he gave to OFLOT regarding the production of the annual report. [6778]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 4 July 1997]: The Director-General of the National Lottery is required by section 14 of the National Lottery ect. Act 1993 to provide an annual report about the exercise of his functions during the year.

The report is presented to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State who lays it before Parliament. The content of the annual report is a matter for the Director-General.

TREASURY

Advance Corporation Tax

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he spoke to journalists from the Financial Times concerning his budget proposals for ACT prior to the Budget statement. [7194]

Mr. Gordon Brown: No.

Budget (Leaks)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions in the last 14 years accurate disclosures of budget information appeared in the Press prior to the Budget; which media outlets they appeared in; and if he will make a statement. [7263]

Mr. Gordon Brown: More than once. Speculation, of varying degrees of accuracy, is a traditional feature of the Budget process.

The specific information sought could be assembled only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) Crown servants and (b) other advisers to Ministers who (i) gave interviews to, (ii) made statements to and (iii) answered questions from journalists or representatives of the Financial Times in the period of 48 hours before the Budget Statement. [7266]

Mr. Brown: No pre-Budget briefings were given to the press on Budget measures. Details of the Budget were not given to journalists in advance.

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who in his Department was responsible for giving pre-Budget briefings to the press; how recently such briefings were given to the Financial Times; what specific subjects they covered; and if details of the Budget statement were given to any journalists before he presented them to the House. [7077]

Mr. Brown [holding answer 7 July 1997]: No pre-Budget briefings were given to the press on Budget measures. Details of the Budget statement were not given to journalists in advance. However, I and my Ministerial colleagues made clear that we would use the Budget to meet the promises before taking office. We delivered on those promises.

Windfall Tax

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the port of Tilbury will be subject to the windfall tax. [7067]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 7 July 1997]: No. Details of those companies falling within the scope of the windfall tax were set out in the Inland Revenue press notice on the windfall tax issued after the Chancellor's Budget statement on 2 July.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will investigate the disclosure of information relating to the windfall tax contained in the Budget to managers of the privatised industries prior to the Budget statement. [7092]

Mr. Robinson [holding answer 7 July 1997]: No. I see no reason for such an investigation as there was no such disclosure. In designing the windfall tax the Government deliberately sought representations from organisations on the technical aspects of the tax: over 50 responded. This process, and the extensive consultations with the regulators, helped the overall design of the tax. All this is public knowledge.

Job Creation

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to Treasury press release 60/97 of 4 June 1997, which European institutions will have direct responsibilities for creating jobs for all those living in Europe. [3358]

Mrs. Liddell: It is for the Governments of the member states to have the policies in place which create the economic conditions which enable employment to flourish, rather than for European institutions to create jobs. But the European institutions do have important roles to play in extending and policing the internal market in the EU and in facilitating dialogue between the member states on how to tackle unemployment.

Channel 4

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue which would be raised by the privatisation of Channel 4. [3324]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The proceeds from any hypothetical privatisation depend on the method of sale.

Euro

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what study his Department has undertaken of the likely effect on prices of the rounding up of the sterling-euro fractional differential if the United Kingdom adopts the euro. [6097]

Mrs. Liddell: My department has not undertaken any studies of the possible effects on prices, if any, of rounding the results of converting between sterling and the euro if the United Kingdom were to adopt the single currency.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much Nordic gold would be required if the United Kingdom were to join the euro; what the total requirement for the euro zone would be; and what the current stocks are. [6852]

Mrs. Liddell: The proposed Council Regulation (EC) on denominations and specifications of euro coins intended for circulation in countries which adopt the single currency has not been formally adopted. It proposes that three of the eight denominations of euro coins should be made of an alloy called Nordic gold. It is estimated that if this proposal were adopted, and if the United Kingdom were to participate in the single currency, approximately 20,000 tonnes of Nordic gold would be required to manufacture the necessary coins for circulation in the United Kingdom. The total required within the European Community if the proposal were to be adopted would depend on which countries participate in the single currency. Materials for coin production would be produced to order as required in such circumstances.

Household Income

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of gross earned income for a married couple with average household income was taken by (a) income tax, (b) national insurance, (c) VAT and (d) excise duties, during the year 1996–97. [3349]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested can be obtained from Table 13.7b of the Tax Benefit Reference Manual 1997–98 Edition, a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

EU Funds (Bank Deposits)

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what European Union funds have been deposited in banks that have subsequently collapsed; and what sums have been lost. [6770]

Mrs. Liddell: None in the United Kingdom or, so far as we are aware, elsewhere, but only the European Commission would be able to provide a definitive answer.

Unemployment

Ms Oona King: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people aged under 25 years in (a) Newham, (b) Tower Hamlets, (c) Hackney, (d) Redbridge, (e) Waltham Forest, (f) Barking and Dagenham and (g) the United Kingdom have been unemployed for more than six months; and, in each case, what percentage this figure is of all economically active people aged under 25 years; [6811]

(2) how many people aged over 25 years in (a) Newham, (b) Tower Hamlets, (c) Hackney, (d) Redbridge, (e) Waltham Forest, (f) Barking and Degenham and (g) the United Kingdom have been unemployed for more than two years; and in each case, what percentage this figure is of all economically active people aged over 25 years. [6812]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Oona King, dated 8 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent questions on the duration of unemployment of under and over 25 year olds.

The measure of unemployment, derived from the quarterly Labour Force Survey (LFS), is defined on a consistent and internationally recognised basis set out by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and counts as unemployed people who are: a) without a paid job; b) available to start work within the next two weeks and c) have either looked for work in the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained. However, largely because it is a sample survey, information is not available from the LFS in as much geographical detail as from the claimant count measure described below.

ONS also publishes the monthly claimant count, which is based on the administrative system and includes all people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance, Income Support or National Insurance credits) at Employment Service offices on the day of the monthly count, who on that day had signed on as unemployed and available to do any suitable work. Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign are counted, irrespective of whether they are actually receiving benefit.

The data you have requested for London local authority districts can only be derived from the claimant count, as the Labour Force Survey does not provide sufficient detail at this level. As the concept of "economically active" is an ILO one, it is not compatible with claimant count data, and therefore percentages are not given for claimant figures.

The latest available data, April 1997, for under 25 year olds and over 25 year olds claiming unemployment-related benefits for over 6 months and 2 years respectively are shown in the attached table.

The winter 1996/7 LFS shows there were 262,000 (5.7 per cent of economically active in the same age group) people aged 16–24 and 467,000 (1.9 per cent. of economically active in the same age group) people aged 25 and over who have been ILO unemployed for 6 months or more and 2 years or more respectively.

Claimant count, April 1997

	Under 25 year old claimants	Over 25 year old claimants
Newham	1,844	2,839
Tower Hamlets	1,490	2,540
Hackney	2,046	4,516
Redbridge	728	1,523
Waltham Forest	1,195	2,363
Barking and Dagenham	615	1,085
United Kingdom	179,569	326,670

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) males and (b) females in the constituency of Stoke-on-Trent, North have been unemployed for (i) under six months, (ii) over six months, (iii) over 12 months and (iv) over 18 months. [6864]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Joan Walley, dated 8 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question (6864) on the duration of unemployment of males and females in the Stoke-on-Trent North parliamentary constituency.

The data you have requested can only be derived from the monthly count of people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance or National Insurance credits). Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign on the designated day are counted.

The figures in the table below are for April 1997, the latest date for which figures are available.

Stoke on Trent, North: Persons claiming unemployment-related benefits

	Males	Females
Claiming for under 6 months	770	226
Claiming for over 6 months	710	174
of which claiming for over 12 months	452	94
of which claiming for over 18 months	300	59

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged 18 to 24 years have come off unemployment benefit in each of the last five years in the constituency of Stoke on Trent, North and into what activity they moved. [6865]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Joan Walley, dated 8 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many people aged 18 to 24 years left the claimant count in each of the last five years in the parliamentary constituency of Stoke-on-Trent North, and the reasons why they left.

The information requested is not available for the exact areas of parliamentary constituencies. The estimates provided refer to claimants who are registered at the two Employment Service jobcentres situated within the Stoke-on-Trent North parliamentary constituency area.

Total numbers leaving the claimant count from 1992 to 1996 are shown in Tables 1 to 3, but information on the destination of leavers from the claimant count is not available for 1992 to 1994.

For 1995 and 1996, numbers of leavers from the claimant count are shown in Tables 2 and 3 according to the claim end reason categories identified in those years. The percentages shown in these tables are expressed in terms of leavers with a known destination.

Low Pay

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people in (a) Newham, (b) Tower Hamlets, (c) Hackney, (d) Redbridge, (e) Waltham Forest, (f) Barking and Dagenham and (g) the United Kingdom who earn less than (i) £2.50, (ii) £3, (iii) £3.50 and (d) £4 per hour; and what this figure is as a proportion of all employees. [6814]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Stephen Holt, dated 8 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on earnings.

The latest information, from the New Earnings Survey (NES) April 1996, is given in the attached tables. Data are provided for the Great Britain as information for the United Kingdom is not available.

It is ONS practice for NES answers to be given as proportions earning below specified thresholds, rather than numbers, because of problems with obtaining appropriate grossing factors for the NES sample at a very detailed level of disaggregation (e.g. by industry and electoral ward).

Employment

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of households (a) in Stoke-on-Trent, North, (b) by region and (c) nationally have no-one in full-time employment. [6868]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Joan Walley, dated 8 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as the Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question (6868) on what percentage of households have no one in full-time employment.

Estimates available from the Labour Force Survey for non-pensioner households are shown in the attached table using the new Government Office Region (GOR) geography. This information is not available below county level.

It is widely accepted that analyses of households with no one in employment or, in this case, no one in full-time employment, should exclude pensioner households. This area of analysis is relatively new for the LFS and the definition of non-pensioner or working age households is not yet firmly established. The table provided is based on the same definition of non-pensioner household as previous responses to parliamentary questions to this topic. The ONS has been assessing the various alternative definitions and expects to publish its recommendations in the September issue of Labour Market Trends.

Labour Market Statistics

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to (a) publish and (b) introduce the outcome of the consultation exercise on the future presentation and dissemination of labour market statistics by the Office for National Statistics. [6867]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Joan Walley, dated 8 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question (6867) on when he plans to publish and introduce the outcome of the consultation exercise on the labour market statistics.

Users were asked for comments on the consultation article to be provided by 14 June 1997. This information is in the process of being assessed by the ONS and an announcement of the outcome will be made by late summer.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Domestic Violence

Mr. Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions an application for emergency legal aid to seek an injunction in a domestic violence case has been (a) granted or (b) refused in each of the last five years. [6375]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested is not available. The data gathered by the Legal Aid Board do not identify separately applications for emergency civil legal aid.

Legal Aid

Mr. Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions the decision to exceed the Green Form financial limit by a solicitors practice with developed powers under a legal aid franchise has subsequently been overruled by a legal aid area office in each of the last three years. [6377]

Mr. Hoon: This information prior to June 1995 has been archived and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. As a result, figures can be provided for each of the last two years only. It is set out in the following tables.

	Number
1 July 1995 to 30 June 1996
Total number of devolved powers to extend the financial limit on a Green Form exercised by solicitors	23,020
Number of occasions on which solicitor's decision was overruled by a legal aid area office	276

	Number
1 July 1996 to 30 June 1997
Total number of devolved powers to extend the financial limit on a Green Form exercised by solicitors	28,481
Number of occasions on which solicitor's decision was overruled by a legal aid area office	273

Mr. Hill: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many solicitors' firms have been granted a legal aid franchise and in what areas of law; and how many franchised firms have devolved powers in relation to (a) emergency aid, (b) the Green Form scheme and (c) assistance by representation. [6376]

Mr. Hoon: As at 30 June 1997 there were 1,852 franchised solicitors' offices. The following table provides a breakdown of the franchise categories and the number of franchised offices with devolved power in emergency aid, the Green Form and assistance by representation.

Franchise category	[1]Number of solicitors offices	Devolved Powers
		Emergency aid	Green form	[2]ABWOR

[2] Assistance by way of representation. Devolved powers apply only to the crime and matrimonial and family franchise categories.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Beef Ban

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for a new initiative to secure the lifting of the beef export ban. [7711]

Dr. John Cunningham: The Government has decided to adopt a twin-track approach of pursuing a revised Export Certified Herds Scheme, and developing a new proposal for a date-based export scheme. We have put our ideas to the Commission about both schemes, and will press both with equal vigour.

The Export Certified Herds Scheme is being revised taking account of criticisms made earlier by the EU Scientific Veterinary Committee. Eligibility for the scheme would be more restricted than initially proposed, but it would still be open in principle to producers in all parts of the United Kingdom.

Details of the date-based scheme will be announced when exploratory talks with the Commission have progressed and the Government is ready to put forward a formal proposal.

Specified Bovine Material

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what guidance SEAC gives to hauliers concerning the cleaning of vehicles carrying specified bovine material; and if he will make a statement. [6749]

(2) how many inspectors are available to carry out examination of the cleaning of vehicles carrying specified bovine material; and if he will make a statement; [6686]

(3) how many inspections have been carried out of the cleaning of vehicles used to transport specified bovine material since 1 August 1996; how many vehicles have failed such an inspection; and if he will make a statement. [6664]

Mr. Rooker: The cleansing requirements for vehicles transporting waste material form the slaughter of cattle, including Specified Bovine Material (SBM), were considered by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC) in May last year. It concluded that decontamination and proper cleaning of vehicles was important but that given the extreme nature of the chemicals which had to be used if chemical disinfection were to be relied upon it was more important to use dilution and washing with large quantities of water and detergent to ensure that vehicles were returned to a suitable state for further use.

The Specified Bovine Material Order 1997 requires any person transporting SBM to ensure that the vehicle, or part of the vehicle, in which it is conveyed is impervious and contains nothing but SBM. It must be kept covered at all times except for loading or unloading or inspection by an authorised officer of an enforcement authority. It also requires that any person transporting SBM shall ensure that the part of the vehicle in which SBM is carried is thoroughly washed and disinfected before any food, feeding stuff or other animal material or any cosmetic, pharmaceutical or medical product is subsequently placed in that part of the vehicle.

Enforcement of the vehicle cleansing requirements set out in the Specified Bovine Material Order 1997 is the responsibility of local authorities. No central record is kept of the number of local authority inspectors that examine vehicles transporting SBM or how many inspections they have made since 1 August 1996 or how many vehicles failed local authority inspections and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Rabies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will ensure that veterinary surgeons have unrestricted access to the inactivated rabies vaccines approved by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [6827]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The British Isles is an internationally recognised rabies free zone for terrestrial animals. We do not allow unrestricted access to rabies vaccine because its use, except for animals going for export or those going into quarantine, is unnecessary.

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in concluding the revised protocol on the rabies antibody test referred to in the Official Report, 19 February, column 513; and if the mutual recognition of the test results referred to in the Official Report, 3 March, column 444, has been agreed. [6440]

Mr. Rooker: The International Office for Epizootics (OIE) has considered the revised protocol and published it as the OIE standard recently. Whilst this is a small step in overcoming the problems of test result variability, we understand that only two laboratories are using the new protocol. The OIE is also making arrangements for a new canine standard serum to be calibrated and validated for use with this test to ensure that different laboratories produce comparable results. As far as we are aware these arrangements are still being made and no timescale for completion of the work is known.

BSE-contaminated Feed

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers have been found to have been in possession of BSE-contaminated feed since August 1996. [4863]

Mr. Rooker: Remnant work on the Feed Recall Scheme brought to our attention one farmer who has, since 1 August 1996, been in possession of feed containing mammalian meat and bone meal (MBM). The feed in question was not fed to livestock and has now been safely disposed of. It is impossible to say whether this feed was contaminated with the BSE agent but the controls on Specified Bovine Materials, which require the destruction of all tissues known to harbour BSE infectivity, mean that the likelihood of infectivity being present is very low.

In another incident, a farmer was found to have been storing mammalian MBM in a farm store together with ingredients used in the production of livestock feed. The MBM was disposed of in landfill. Thorough sampling showed no evidence that cross-contamination had occurred, and the premises were not part of a livestock enterprise.

The State Veterinary Service carries out a survey of feed mills and on farm feed mixers for evidence of breaches of feed controls. Since 1 August 1996, when the latest controls came into effect, no evidence of a breach of the legislation has been found.

Biotechnological Inventions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has undertaken into the possible (a) agricultural and (b) animal welfare implications of the draft European Parliament and Council directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions; and if he will make a statement. [7353]

Mr. Rooker: This draft Directive—which is still under discussion—would not in general either limit or increase the availability of patent protection as compared to that already provided in UK law. The Ministry has not commissioned research into the implications for agriculture or animal welfare. We do not consider that the patent system is the right approach for dealing with ethical and related issues arising from biotechnology. The purpose of patenting is to prevent others claiming to own or trying to use inventions. However, patent holders must also comply with all other relevant legislation and regulations which, for example, give protection to the welfare of animals.

Delivery Targets

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food what progress his Department has made in meeting the service delivery targets set out in "Commitment to Service". [7544]

Dr. John Cunningham: The following table sets out the performance achieved by Regional Service Centres against the targets set in "Commitment to Service", second edition.

Notes:

[1] Final payments made by 30 April 1997.

[2] The relatively high failure rate for F and CGS 1989 non-plan claims is due to a large number of claims being received in the month before the scheme closed, making it impossible to meet the Charter target in many cases.

1. The total percentage has been calculated by setting the entire number of applications or claims cleared within the target time, against the total number received. Applications and claims not cleared due to reasons beyond our control (incorrect information supplied by applicant, etc.) are not included as failures to meet target.

2. The Farm and Conservation Grant Scheme (1991) Plan applications, the Farm Diversification Grant Scheme (Capital Items) Claims, and the Farm Diversification Grant Scheme (Feasibility and Marketing) Claims have all been omitted from the table, as the numbers involved are de-minimis.

3. Three complaints were referred to the MAFF Adjudicator during the year. Two of these complaints were resolved, the other was referred to the Minister. One complaint from a previous year has been referred to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and is currently under investigation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on her Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7141]

Mrs. Roche: Following an impact assessment study in 1996, a programme of remedial projects and related activities was initiated earlier this year. The total cost is expected to be of the order of £2.7 million over the period to Spring 1999. The programme covers the core Department's IT systems and separate programmes are in place to deal with the issue in Next Steps agencies.

The core Department's Year 2000 programme is being overseen by a steering group chaired by the Department's Director of Information Management and Technology. The resources involved vary according to the requirements of individual projects and will peak at 16 personnel in September/October 1997. Those resources are being provided by private sector contractors and the programme is being supervised by the Department's own Project Manager. All required parts of the core programme are currently on schedule.

Business Links

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many Business Links have been set up. [6982]

Mrs. Roche: There are 89 Business Link partnerships and 241 separate Business Link outlets.

Telecommunications Advisory Committees

Mr. Reed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has for the future of local telecommunications advisory committees; and if she will make a statement. [6164]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: On 30 June the President announced an inter-departmental review of utility regulation which will include an examination of the various models of consumer representation currently operating in the utilities, including in the telecommunications industry. If the review concludes that changes are necessary we will publish a consultation document setting out the options and reasons underlying the case for change.

In addition OFTEL is currently considering the responses received to its consultation document on the role of organisations who represent consumers on telecommunications matters, including the telecommunications advisory committees, and will publish a statement of its recommendations shortly. We will consider any recommendations on the telecommunications advisory committees as part of the inter-departmental review.

Multi-level Marketing

Jane Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her Department's policy towards multi-level marketing. [6252]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Legitimate multi-level marketing schemes give people the opportunity to run their own small businesses and are therefore to be welcomed.

We do, however, need to guard against those pyramid selling schemes whose structures and reward mechanisms are such that individuals can be exploited. My Department has taken action successfully to wind up companies which are running illegal schemes.

Instruments of Torture

Mr. Hancock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has made to the Government's legal officers concerning the prosecution of United Kingdom companies involved in the export of instruments of torture. [6629]

Mrs. Roche: The investigation and prosecution of any breaches of UK export controls is a matter for HM Customs and Excise and we would urge anyone in possession of information which might suggest that offences have been committed to make it available to them.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received concerning the export by United Kingdom companies of electric shock devices. [6636]

Mrs. Roche: My Department regularly receives representations from individuals and organisations proposing that the Government should ban the export of such devices. We are committed to preventing British companies from manufacturing, selling or procuring equipment designed primarily for torture and to press for a global ban. Work is in hand on how best to take forward this commitment.

Trade Union Subscriptions

Ms Beverley Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the requirement for employers to obtain re-authorisations from their employees every three years for the deduction of trade union subscriptions direct from pay. [7645]

Mrs. Beckett: The Government believes this requirement is unnecessary and burdensome for employers and unions. We propose to repeal it by a deregulation order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. After we have consulted with interested parties this summer on the scope and content of a deregulation order, we intend to start the Parliamentary stages in the autumn, and complete the repeal next year.

Post Office

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the terms of reference given to those undertaking the review of the Post Office and the timetable set for the review; and what interim requirements have been set for the review. [7271]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The terms of reference for the review of the Post Office are to identify practical options for introducing greater commercial freedom in accordance with our election manifesto commitment. A scoping exercise is currently in progress to establish what changes can be introduced quickly and to set a timetable for addressing more complex issues. I hope to announce the results of the initial exercise in the Autumn.

Mrs. May: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects the review of the Post Office to be completed. [7270]

Mr. McCartney: We are aiming to make good progress but it is too early yet to say when the review will be completed.

Supervision

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what sanctions his Department is able to impose on individuals criticised in DTI inspectors' reports. [6470]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: A criminal investigation and/or disqualification proceedings may be commenced against individuals criticised in inspectors' reports. The reports may also be disclosed to recognised professional and regulatory bodies.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many individuals from accountancy firms criticised by the DTI inspectors are currently seconded to her Department; and at what cost to public funds. [6469]

Mr. Griffiths: There are currently 3 individuals seconded to the Department from accountancy firms which have in the past been criticised in Inspectors' reports. The annual cost is approximately £120,000 plus VAT. None of the individuals have been personally criticised by Inspectors. The criticism of their firms was in reports published prior to 1993.

Resort Hotels

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will establish an inquiry into the auditing of Resort Hotels plc. [6059]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Resort Hotels plc collapsed in 1994 with substantial debts. The managing director of Resort Hotels, Mr. Robert Philip Feld, was found guilty on 1 April 1997 of fraud and forgery and was jailed for eight years; the audit of the accounts was referred to during his trial. Under Part II of the Companies Act 1989 the Recognised Supervisory Bodies (RSBs), are responsible for dealing with complaints against registered auditors. In the case of Resort Hotels the responsible RSB is the Institute of Chartered Accountants of England and Wales who are inquiring into the auditing of Resort Hotels in the light of Mr. Feld's trial. I shall write to my right hon. Friend when I hear the outcome of their inquiries.

Inward Investment

Mr. Rapson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will set out her assessment of the prospects for future inward investment in the United Kingdom. [5736]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The UK faces increasing competition to attract inward investment to and within Europe and I expect that to continue. Our record as Europe's number one location for investment from the US, Japan and Korea remains intact but we shall maintain it only by consolidating and building on the UK's attractions as an international investment location. The Invest in Britain Bureau's 1996–97 report will be published on 16 July and will contain further details of the UK's current performance.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Union

17. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to meet his EU and WEU counterparts to discuss closer links between the two organisations. [5746]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I expect to meet my EU and WEU counterparts, to discuss strengthened links between the two bodies, when we are ready to finalise a WEU Declaration which will complement the Amsterdam Treaty.

27. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to consult the electorate before ceding further powers to the European Union. [5756]

Mr. Henderson: On 1 May the electorate gave its overwhelming support to the present Government and its manifesto which included a commitment to a fresh start in Europe.

Sri Lanka

18. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment the Government have made of civil rights in Sri Lanka; and if he will make a statement. [5747]

Mr. Fatchett: Basic civil rights are enshrined in the Sri Lankan constitution. We hope that the Sri Lankan Government will continue to respect them.

India and Pakistan

19. Jane Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom relations with India. [5748]

Mr. Fatchett: We enjoy good relations with India as I discovered during my visit there last month. We look forward to strengthening this relationship still further.

24. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to encourage improved relations between India and Pakistan. [5753]

Mr. Fatchett: We welcome the talks between India and Pakistan and support them in their desire to achieve progress. We are willing to provide our good offices if both sides want us to.

32. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom relations with Pakistan. [5761]

Mr. Fatchett: We have good relations with Pakistan and look forward to strengthening them further.

Burma (Human Rights)

20. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the steps being taken by his Department to improve human rights in Burma. [5749]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Peterborough (Mrs. Brinton) earlier in the House today.

Middle East Peace Process

21. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he had whilst in the United States of America on the prospects for peace in the middle east; and if he will make a statement. [5750]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the Middle East peace process with his colleagues at the Denver Summit. The G8 expressed concern at the crisis faced by the Middle East peace process and determination to inject new momentum into the search for a just and lasting settlement.

Hong Kong

22. Mr. Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's role in the future of Hong Kong. [5751]

26. Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's role in the future of Hong Kong. [5755]

Mr. Fatchett: As a co-signatory of the Joint Declaration, Britain has an enduring moral and political responsibility towards Hong Kong. We will continue to watch developments closely, in particular through the Sino-British Joint Liaison Group, which continues until 1 January 2000. We will report to Parliament at six-monthly intervals on the implementation of the Joint Declaration, with special reference to the protection of human rights in Hong Kong. We will also continue to remind the international community of its stake in Hong Kong's continuing success.

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list the departmental special advisers and parliamentary private secretaries who attended the hand over ceremonies in Hong Kong; [6965]

(2) if he will list the publicly funded travel and accommodation costs incurred by individual departmental special advisers and parliamentary private secretaries who attended the handover ceremonies in Hong Kong; [6959]

(3) if he will list the overall cost to the Exchequer of travel and accommodation expenses incurred by departmental special advisers and parliamentary private secretaries who attended the hand over ceremonies in Hong Kong; [6956]

(4) how many departmental special advisers and parliamentary private secretaries attended the handover ceremonies in Hong Kong. [6961]

Mr. Fatchett [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The only Departmental Special Advisers or Parliamentary Private Secretaries to attend the handover ceremonies in Hong Kong were Mr. Alastair Campbell, Chief Press Secretary to the Prime Minister, and Mr. Andrew Wood, Special Adviser to the Foreign Secretary.

The Chief Press Secretary accompanied the Prime Minister at no additional cost to the taxpayer.

Mr. Hood accompanied my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs on the chartered plane which took the official British delegation to Hong Kong, at no additional cost to the taxpayer. his accommodation cost £2,581, which was met from public funds.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding his discussions in Hong Kong with his Chinese counterpart Qian Qichen. [7178]

Mr. Fatchett: The meeting in Hong Kong between my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and his Chinese counterpart which I also attended was the first since taking office. This was an historic occasion and provided a unique opportunity to set the tone for future relations. Discussions focused mostly on Hong Kong issues but also covered a range of bilateral matters including human rights.

Exports

23. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the assistance his Department provides for exporting to north America. [5752]

Mr. Fatchett: A wide range of services is available to British exporters through our network of twelve Diplomatic Posts in the US and four in Canada. The assistance available includes market research, customised contact lists, help with finding agents and distributors and help with publicity for new products and services. Support is also available for companies participating in trade missions and trade fairs in the region.

31. Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he proposes to take to promote Britain's export trade. [5760]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave, earlier in the House today, to the hon. Member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Mr. Browne).

Nuclear Deterrent

25. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications of the treaty of Amsterdam on the future control of the British strategic nuclear deterrent. [5754]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We believe that the Treaty of Amsterdam has no implications for the British nuclear deterrent.

Qualified Majority Voting

28. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the policy areas in the Amsterdam inter-governmental treaty in which he proposed the introduction of qualified majority voting, but failed to achieve agreement. [5757]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Discussion of QMV in the IGC was based on Presidency proposals. These included introducing QMV in areas such as industry and the environment, where the UK supported some extension of QMV, but on which there was ultimately no agreement.

34. Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) on 23 June, Official Report, column 346, if he will make a statement on the impact of the extension of qualified majority voting under the Amsterdam Treaty. [5763]

Mr. Henderson: We fully support the modest extension of qualified majority voting agreed at Amsterdam which will help effective decision making in areas like fraud and research and development.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

29. Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further discussions he will be holding with United States of America authorities about the reduction of carbon dioxide emissions. [5758]

Mr. Fatchett: I and my colleagues will take every opportunity between now and the Conference in Kyoto in December to press the US to make significant reductions in carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gas emissions in the post-2000 period.

Immigration Rules

30. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements are being made to inform applicants for settlement in the Asian sub-continent of changes in the rules affecting their cases; and how long they may have to wait. [5759]

Mr. Fatchett: The abolition of the Primary Purpose criterion of the Immigration Rules has been widely publicised in South Asia. All visa applicants are provided with detailed guidance notes on how to make an application; these naturally include details of the current regulations. Posts in South Asia are now also offering specific advice to those whose applications are affected by the abolition of the Primary Purpose criterion.

Maximum interview waiting times for first time settlement applicants range from three months for spouses of those settled in the UK to six months for other categories. The equivalent period for those who have been refused and re-apply is nine months.

Prisoners of War

33. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the representations made by him over compensation for former British prisoners of war held by the Japanese. [5762]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the hon. member to the answer my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson) gave to the hon. member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) on 24 June, Official Report, column 462.

BBC World Service

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State of Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial reduction has been imposed on the BBC World Service over and above those required by the reduction in Foreign Office funding; and if he will make a statement. [5833]

Mr. Fatchett: There have been no additional financial cuts. The restructuring is the responsibility of the BBC. This Department is monitoring its implementation particularly with regard to the special character, style, ethos and quality of the World Service.

Entry Requirements (Children)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proof is required of a parent, resident in the United Kingdom and a United Kingdom national, that children, living abroad, whom they wish to bring into the country, are their natural children in the absence of a marriage certificate or birth certificate from the country of residence. [5053]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 1 July 1997]: In cases where documentary evidence satisfactorily establishing the identity of children seeking to join parents who are British citizens or UK residents is not available, Entry Clearance Officers have the option to interview the sponsor and applicants to try and establish their relationship. If such an interview proves inconclusive, the Entry Clearance Officer can invite the applicants and the sponsor to take a free DNA test under the government-funded scheme. The DNA test will satisfactorily establish the relationship between applicant and sponsor.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the dates and attendees by Department and grade of meetings of officials which have taken place in his Department on the Strategic Defence Review. [6762]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: This Department's officials have attended a number of meetings in the FCO on the Strategic Defence Review. On 3 July my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs held a seminar in the FCO on the Strategic Defence Review with academics and other commentators. We do not keep records of dates and the participants of all meetings attended by officials within this Department.

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the responsibility for the Defence Review will be divided between his Department and the Ministry of Defence; and what the arrangements will be for his Department's involvement. [7062]

Mr. Lloyd: The first phase of the Strategic Defence Review to establish the policy baseline, is being conducted jointly by the MOD and this Department.

The MOD will lead the subsequent work, with continued involvement from this Department to assess roles, missions and capabilities required and the implications for equipment and support.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7144]

Mr. Fatchett: In accordance with central directives, this Department will submit costed Year 2000 plans to the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA) by October 1997. This Department is replacing Office Automation (OA) systems, thus avoiding some Year 2000 problems, and addressing other systems through its millennium programme. All major systems will be compliant by March 1999. This Department's Director of General Services is overseeing the work. Fourteen staff are currently working on the programme. This will increase. Our current cost estimate is £3 million (excluding OA replacements). We are on schedule.

China

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding the efforts being made by the Government to encourage improvement in China's human rights record. [7249]

Mr. Fatchett: The human rights situation in China is a matter of deep concern. We take every opportunity to raise the issue with the Chinese authorities. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs did so most recently when he met the Chinese Foreign Minister in Hong Kong on 30 June. We are looking for a constructive way forward, both bilaterally and with our EU partners, that will bring about real progress.

Indonesia

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet the Commander in Chief of the Indonesian armed forces. [6053]

Mr. Fatchett: None.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he intends to report to the House the findings of the internal Foreign Office investigation into the use of British-supplied water cannons in Indonesia on 12 February 1997. [6054]

Mr. Fatchett: We are not aware of any such incident on 12 February.

Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on preparations for the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting. [5725]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Arrangements for the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Edinburgh in October are progressing well. We are working closely with the Commonwealth Secretariat, the Scottish Office and local police authorities in Scotland to ensure a successful meeting, which will serve the Government's aim of strengthening the Commonwealth.

Gibraltar

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the consequences for Gibraltar of the Amsterdam summit. [5726]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I believe that the agreement reached at Amsterdam fully protects UK and Gibraltar's interests.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7204]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The oldest papers withheld by this Department from release at the Public Record Office are some papers from Dublin Castle records in a register concerning judicial proceedings dated 1911–15 (File reference CO 904/36). These papers are being reviewed for release. My Noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will write to my hon. Friend when the outcome of this review is complete and place a copy of the letter in the libraries of the House.

Law of the Sea Convention

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he proposes to take in respect of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea. [7264]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Ministers are currently considering the issue of UK accession to UNCLOS. The House will be informed as soon as a decision has been made.

DEFENCE

Eurofighter

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Eurofighter aircraft will be purchased in the United Kingdom. [6765]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack) on 26 June, Official Report, column 627.

Defence Budget

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for defence what representations he has received concerning the size of the defence budget. [6424]

Dr. Reid: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has received a number of enquiries about the defence budget both from Members of this House and from others. Many of these enquiries have been framed in the context of the Strategic Defence Review.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will include submissions from the Labour Party Working Group on Defence in the Strategic Defence Review. [6843]

Dr. Reid: All outside inputs to the Strategic Defence Review will be taken into consideration as part of the Review process.

Defence Sales

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the status of United Kingdom defence sales contracts. [6648]

Mr. Spellar: Contracts for the export of defence equipment are a commercial matter between the exporting company and the customer. The exporter has to apply for an export licence where the goods covered by the contract are licensable under the Export of Goods Control Order 1994 or regulations concerning the export of dual use goods.

Indonesia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the UK military officers attached to the armed forces of Indonesia. [6747]

Dr. Reid: It has been the practice in the past not to release details of military assistance provided to other countries on the grounds that this information is confidential between governments and disclosure would risk damaging our international relations. This practice is now being reviewed against the background of the government's commitment to openness. I will write to the hon. Member once the review is complete.

Roll-on/roll-off Ferries

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if contracts have been signed for the purchase of two roll-on/roll-off ferries by his Department. [6758]

Mr. Spellar: No contracts have been signed for the purchase of roll-on/roll-off ferries in support of the Joint Rapid Deployment Force (JRDF). Discussions with industry are underway and an announcement will be made as soon as possible once a decision is reached.

Regimental Complement

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, for each regiment, the number by which it was below complement on 30 April; and what plans he has to bring each up to its complement. [6817]

Dr. Reid: The manning level against the complement in each of the Regiments within the Household Cavalry, Royal Armoured Corps (RAC) and Infantry at 1 May 1997 is provided at Table 1. Corresponding information for the rest of the Army is not available by regiment but is provided by Arm or Service at Table 2. The Government fully recognises the seriousness of the situation we have inherited. To improve levels of manning the Army has introduced a number of initiatives; Recruitment, Retention and Re-enlistment bounties, the introduction of NVQs, and the formation of an Army Foundation College from September 1998. In the short term, Gurkha Re-inforcement Companies have been deployed to minimise undermanning in areas of particular concern.

Export Credit Guarantees

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with (a) the Department of Trade and Industry, (b) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and (c) the Department of International Development about the level of export credit guarantees. [6666]

Mr. Spellar: As a member of the Export Guarantee Committee chaired by H.M. Treasury, the Ministry of Defence has regular discussions about export credit guarantees with the Department of Trade and Industry, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the International Development Department together with the Export Credits Guarantee Department. This committee reviews whether countries should be on or off cover and discusses the level of export credit guarantees that should be made available.

Long-term Costings

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library his Department's 10-year long-term costings. [6754]

Dr. Reid: The Ministry of Defence's long-term costing is the process by which the Department re-costs its internal plans and adjusts them. The product of this process is not contained in any single document. It has been the policy of successive governments not to publish detailed information on the outcome of the long term costing. The Department's internal plans represent projections and assumptions which inform advice to Ministers on the affordability of particular elements of the Defence programme. Accordingly, I am withholding the information requested, which constitutes internal discussion and advice, under exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. In addition, disclosure of some elements of this information could harm national security and international relations, prejudice the competitive position of the Department in future negotiations with contractors and reveal commercially confidential data. Accordingly, exemptions 1, 7 and 13 of the Code also apply.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Records Office for release for public inspection. [7206]

Dr. Reid: Service personnel records are routinely retained for about seventy five years so that my Department can respond to any administrative matters that may arise such as, for example, pension entitlement. The oldest such documents are Royal Naval ratings ledgers covering the period 1892–1923. These records will be assigned to Public Record Office class ADM 188 with transfer taking place during 1998.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6031]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on Friday 4 July, Official Report, column 294.

Shoeburyness Ranges

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has received a report from DERA about the future of the testing ranges at Shoeburyness; and if he will make a statement. [6446]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 3 July 1997]: I can confirm that my right hon. Friend the Minister for Defence Procurement has recently received a proposal from the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency about the test and evaluation ranges at Shoeburyness and Eskmeals. MPs and staff will be informed of the outcome shortly.

SCOTLAND

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much Ayrshire and Arran Health Board has spent on pursuing its legal appeals against the refusal of planning permission by Cunninghame district council and the Scottish Office for Ravenspark Hospital; what legal advisers acted for the health board in these actions; what monitoring his Department has undertaken of these actions; and if he will make a statement. [5433]

Mr. Galbraith: This is a matter for Ayrshire and Arran Health Board. I have asked the Chairman to write to my hon. Friend. The Scottish Office monitors the full range of health boards' activities and expenditure, and is aware of this ongoing issue.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the time scale and terms of his review of the requirement on local authorities in Scotland to set aside 75 per cent. of their housing capital receipts for debt repayment. [6275]

Mr. Chisholm: We hope to conclude this review, which is looking at the public expenditure implications of the set aside requirement, later in the year.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary for Scotland if he will list for each local authority in Scotland the annual targets estimated at the start of the financial year 1997–98 for capital receipts, indicating for each authority receipts from (a) right to buy, (b) stock transfer and (c) land sales. [6276]

Mr. Chisholm: No housing receipts targets were set for Scottish local authorities for 1997–98. The estimates made by local authorities of the amounts they expect to raise as capital receipts are set out in the table.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will institute an independent inquiry into the extent of radioactive dumping in Beaufort's Dyke and the current condition of radioactive waste material; [6616]

(2) what conditions and restrictions were set on the dumping of radioactive waste in Beaufort's Dyke; [6615]

(3) what assessment his Department has made of the condition of metal drums containing radioactive waste dumped in Beaufort's Dyke; [6613]

(4)which organisations have been given approval to dump radioactive waste in Beaufort's Dyke. [6614]

(5) if he will investigate the accuracy of statements made by Scottish Office ministers since 1984 relating to the dumping of radioactive waste in Beaufort's Dyke. [6612]

Mr. Dewar: As indicated by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food—1 July, Official Report, columns 158–160—the discovery that radioactive waste had been dumped within the Beaufort's Dyke explosives disposal site followed a discovery of old papers in the Public Records Office. The lack of awareness of these papers and their contents led to previous Governments inadvertently giving inaccurate assurances.

The papers located thus far reveal that radioactive waste was disposed of at Beaufort's Dyke during the 1950s on behalf of Edinburgh and Glasgow Universities, Babcock and Wilcox Ltd., Ferranti Ltd. and Luminisers Ltd. The accepted practice for dealing with the waste, which was regarded at the time as being non-hazardous, was to encase it in concrete in mild steel drums. If necessary the drums were also weighted with scrap metal to ensure rapid sinking at the disposal location. We cannot be sure of the current condition of the steel drums since it would be extremely difficult to locate them given the large quantities of debris that are present on the seabed. However, the amounts of radioactivity that they contain are so small that release of the contents would be of no significance in terms of either public health or the marine environment. I therefore see no merit in initiating an independent enquiry.

Of importance is the fact that regular monitoring of the area has been carried out since the early 1960s; the most recent report entitled "Radioactivity in Food and the Environment 1995" is available in the Library of the House of Commons. This monitoring has not detected any measurable effect on radioactivity levels in the Beaufort's Dyke area, which remain well within internationally agreed safety levels.

My Department and others that were involved in the consultation and consenting procedures that were followed some 40 or so years ago, are currently carrying out an exhaustive check of records and archive material. Any relevant information which emerges will be made available to the House and the public at the earliest opportunity.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7197]

Mr. Dewar: The records of my Department are specifically exempted from the Public Records Act 1958, and therefore are not passed to the Public Record Office. However, broadly similar procedures apply to the transfer of records to the Scottish Record Office (SRO). In 1994 a review was conducted within the Scottish Office to establish the number of files retained beyond the 30 year point, and this list has since been updated annually. All such files are reported to the Scottish Records Advisory Council (SRAC), with an explanation as to why they have been retained. The oldest recorded file in this category was opened in 1949 and is titled "Agriculture (Scotland) Act 1948—Cottars". It has been held for administrative reasons as it contains papers relevant to the eligibility of a rare class of landholder for assistance under the Crofters Building Grants and Loans Scheme.

Wildlife Protection

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) arrests, (b) prosecutions and (c) convictions have been recorded under the Wild Mammals (Protection) Act 1996 in Scotland since its introduction, broken down by local authority; and if he will make a statement. [5705]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 1 July 1997]: Information on the number of arrests is not collected centrally. The information requested on prosecutions and convictions is not separately identifiable within The Scottish Office Home Department's classification of crimes and offences.

BSE

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of BSE were confirmed in each local authority area in Scotland in each of the first six months of 1997. [6829]

Mr. Chisholm [holding answer 7 July 1997]: Information is set out in the table. This shows animals confirmed as having BSE between 1 January and 27 June 1997. Fifty-three of these animals were first identified as BSE suspects in 1996 but not confirmed by laboratory analysis until 1997.

HEALTH

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what restrictions will be placed on consortiums involved in NHS PFI schemes in respect of selling or permitting the takeover of their PFI contracts with NHS bodies. [6553]

Mr. Milburn: We are currently considering the future shape of Private Finance Initiative in the National Health Service. Current guidance published jointly by the Private Finance Panel and Her Majesty's Treasury ("Transferability of Equity" (1996)) advises that the public sector should not seek to restrict the private sector's freedom to transfer its investments unless there are exceptional reasons arising from the special nature of a project.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those hospital projects currently under consideration as PFI projects and what stage in the PFI process each had reached at 1 May. [6792]

Mr. Milburn: Information on the stages reached in Private Finance Initiative projects is held centrally only for new hospital schemes which have reached preferred bidder stage, and for all PFI schemes with a capital value of £1 million or over which have had their Full Business Case approved. Information on the status of these schemes as of 1 May 1997 have been placed in the Library.

Top Quality Care

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are his definitions of (a) top quality primary care, (b) top quality continuing care, (c) top quality mental health and (d) an excellent information system; and if he will list examples of (a), (b) and (c). [6742]

(2) pursuant to his oral statement of 20 June, Official Report, column 544–45, if he will define in (a) quantitative and (b) qualitative terms (i) top quality primary care, (ii) top quality continuing care and (iii) top quality mental health services. [6806]

Mr. Milburn: The Government believe that top quality health care is characterised by: fairness—with access to services based on need rather than ability to pay, geographical location or registration with a particular general practitioner; efficiency—health care that makes the best use of tax payers money; effectiveness—health care that focuses on quality of treatment rather than quantity alone; and responsiveness—health care that is sensitive and understanding of patients needs and concerns.

Information systems should provide the information that the health service needs to plan and deliver appropriate services and that patients and the public need to be assured that they are receiving good quality cost effective care.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement of 20 June, Official Report, columns 544-45, what methods of measurement his inquiry panel will use to determine if a medical service is top quality. [6807]

Mr. Milburn: The Independent Advisory Panel will decide the method it will use to assess services, within the terms of reference it has been given.

London Implementation Group

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors underlie the reduction in spending by the London Implementation Group between 1996–97 and 1997–98. [6801]

Mr. Milburn: The London Implementation Group (LIG) was disbanded on 1 April 1996.

The additional central resources for London previously allocated by LIG are now distributed by the NHS Executive. Comparative figures for additional resources for London in 1996–97 and 1997–98, and factors underlying changes between the two years, are as follows:

	1996–97 £ million	1997–98 £ million	Reasons for change
Transition funding	54	47	Reduction in central budget provision

	1996–97 £ million	1997–98 £ million	Reasons for change
Acute capital	46	41	To match planned capital phasing of schemes
London Initiative Zone (LIZ) funds (revenue and capital)[1]	70	46	In line with original planned phasing of expenditure to match profile of schemes over life time of LIZ (1993–94 to 1998–99)
Additional allocations for London health authorities related to mental health and from the special assistance fund	22	33	Increase in additional resources for mentally disordered offenders and mental health Challenge Fund

[1] The above figures relate to centrally provided LIZ funds only. Total LIZ spending also includes Regional capital allocations and local funds.

The above are all funds made available to London from central budgets and are in addition to London health authorities' integrated allocations which increased in real terms by £72 million in 1997–98.

Financial Deficit (Northern Region)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 June to the hon. Member for Middlesborough, South and Cleveland East (Dr. Kumar), Official Report, column 29, on what date he plans to publish the information on trusts in deficit for 1997–98. [6805]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested from the revised plans of trusts will be placed in the Library in due course.

Back Pain (School Children)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into back pain in school children; [6818]

(2) what (a) discussion and (b) joint actions his Department has initiated with the Department for Education and Employment in respect of (a) research and (b) solutions for back problems in school children. [6834]

Mr. Boateng: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council. The Council is not currently funding any research into back pain in school children. Nevertheless, it always welcomes high-quality applications and these are judged in open competition with other demands for funding, and awarded according to their scientific quality.

Both the Department of Health and the Department for Education and Employment are aware of the research which the National Back Pain Association is currently conducting into factors which might cause back pain in school children. Once the results of that research are available, we will be better able to judge what joint initiatives might be appropriate.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the time required to reduce waiting lists to meet patients charter targets (a) nationally and (b) in each (i) health authority region and (ii) NHS trust. [6832]

Mr. Milburn: There are no Patient's Charter targets for reducing the number of patients on waiting lists. The Charter does, however, guarantee that all patients will be treated within 18 months of being placed on a waiting list and sets a target of a 12 month maximum wait for heart bypass surgery and some associated procedures.

NHS Priorities

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the medical conditions which are his current priorities for treatment in the NHS. [6744]

Mr. Milburn: The Priorities and Planning Guidance for the National Health Service, published annually by the NHS Executive, indicates the Department's priority areas for the development of services nationally. The needs of populations are assessed locally and services and treatments are matched to those needs. Individual clinicians decide the most clinically appropriate treatment and clinical priority for each patient based on their assessment of that patient's need.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the reasons for ending compulsory competitive tendering in the NHS; [6740]

(2) if he will make a statement on the timetables for ending compulsory competitive tendering to the NHS. [6739]

Mr. Milburn: Apart from the requirement periodically to market test cleaning, catering and laundry services, all market testing in the National Health Service is and has always been conducted on a voluntary basis. A review of the operation of the present policy is currently being undertaken by officials and the requirement to market test the three named services is being considered as part of this review. No decisions have yet been taken.

Nurses and Midwives

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors underlay the reduction in numbers of nurses and midwives between 1985 and 1995. [6799]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the member for Gedling (Mr. Coaker) on 19 June 1997 at columns 290–91.

Service Improvements

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the extra resources which he estimates will be required by 2002 to achieve the service improvements listed in his speech in Brighton on 25 June. [6743]

Mr. Milburn: The speech made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health to the National Health Service Confederation on 25 June set out the Government's long-term vision for the National Health Service. My right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury has made it clear that spending plans for 1999–00 and beyond would be informed by the results of the Comprehensive Spending Review currently under way and would take account of all the Government's priorities and objectives.

Research Projects

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the research projects currently paid for by his Department being carried out by (i) private agencies, companies or organisations and (ii) the NHS Executive or other public body reporting directly to his Department and, in each case, the date when this work will be completed. [6789]

Ms Jowell: The Department, through its Policy Research Programme (PRP), funds a range of research. Listed are the titles and end date of the projects being carried out by private agencies, companies and organisations within the PRP, chiefly as part of the MedLINK and LINK Medical Implants programmes. Most are carried out in partnership with universities:

Project	End date
Vaccination, juvenile onset diabetes and autoimmunity	31 December 1997
Temperature rise from pulse doppler ultrasound equipment	31 December 1997
Use of Embroidery Techniques in the Manufacture of Textile Surgical Implants	30 April 1999
Computer Assisted Orthopaedic Surgical System	31 August 1999
Suspended Image Systems for Endoscopic Surgery	31 August 1999
3D Vision for Endoscopic Procedures	30 September 1999
An Integrated Multi-disciplinary Approach to the Development of a New Type of Heart Valve	31 January 2000
Development of a Rear Support Walking Frame	31 December 1999
Development of MRI Compatible Endoscopes	30 April 1999
Electronically Guided Knee Surgery	28 February 1999
Development of DLC Coated Prostheses	31 October 1998
Hydraulically Controlled Implantable Devices for Incontinence	30 April 1998
Tissue Regeneration by TOPOGEN	30 June 1998
Advanced Glaucoma Filtration Implant Development	31 August 1999
Medical Implants Exploitation Contract	28 February 2002

A full list of PRP projects is being prepared for publication. This will include all projects funded in the public and private sector and copies will be placed in the Library.

The NHS Executive funds over 39,000 research projects throughout the service. It is estimated that over 3,500 of these projects are carried out in partnership with industry.

The Department also oversees the research programmes of sponsored Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs). This research supports the NDPBs in performing their statutory functions.

Intensive Care

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency admissions to hospital requiring the use of intensive care facilities there were in each month from January 1995 to date; and if he will make a statement. [6750]

Mr. Boateng: This information has not been available centrally until now. However, trusts have been asked to collect data on intensive and high dependency care activity from 1 October this year as part of the National Health Service Contract Minimum Data Set.

Review Bodies

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the remit which he plans to give to the review bodies which will consider the future pay of doctors, dentists, nurses and other health professionals. [6741]

Mr. Milburn: The remits of the Review Bodies remain unchanged.

Inflation

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his department's estimate of health service inflation for 1997–98; and what was the level of the GDP deflator notified to his Department for 1997–98. [6800]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health does not forecast health service inflation. Her Majesty's Treasury has notified the Department that the Gross Domestic Product deflator is forecast to be 2.75 per cent. in 1997–98.

Carers

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of carers have been assessed under the provisions for assessment in the Carers (Recognition and Services) Act 1995; and what action is being taken to increase that figure. [6821]

Mr. Boateng: It is not possible to assess the proportion of carers receiving an assessment under the Act, as the total pool of carers who would qualify for assessment, if they requested it, is not known. A recent survey by the Carers National Association concluded that, to date, a relatively small proportion of carers had been assessed. We intend to monitor the Act closely, both through commissioned research and as part of the Social Services Inspectorate inspection programme, and will need to consider what action to take if this reveals that the Act is not being effectively implemented.

Funding (North Essex)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was, in (a) cash terms and (b) percentage terms, the change in NHS funding for the North Essex health authority area in each of the last four financial years and the current financial year. [7078]

Mr. Milburn: The cash and percentage increases in general allocations for North Essex Health Authority and the former North Essex District Health Authority are shown as:

	Cash £ million	Percentage
1993–94	6.7	2.7
1994–95	13.2	5.2
1995–96	18.0	5.7
1996–97	20.0	6.4
1997–98	15.2	4.5

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the formula used for allocating funds for the NHS in the North Essex health authority area in 1998–99 will be the same as that used for 1997–98; [7079]

(2) what plans he has to change the formula used for allocating funds for the NHS in the North Essex health authority area; and if he will make a statement. [7080]

Mr. Milburn: We will look at how resources are distributed across both secondary and primary care to ensure that these fully reflect local population needs and operate as fairly as possible.

We are investigating the possibility of introducing further refinements to the weighted capitation formula in time for 1998–99 allocations but a longer programme of work will also be required.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Records Office for release for public inspection. [7195]

Ms Jowell: The oldest document retained by the Department of Health which has not been released for public inspection is thought to date from 1948 and is contained in a file entitled: "Civil Defence—Casualty and Other Ministry of Health Services: Working party on Medical Aspects". The file has been retained in the Department under Section 3 (4) of the Public Record Act 1958.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Payable Tax Credits

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment his Department has made of the cost to the Teachers' Pensions Agency of the abolition of payable tax credits. [7340]

Mr. Byers: Capita Business Services Ltd. (Teachers' Pensions) were awarded a contract to administer the Teachers Superannuation Scheme with effect from 1 October 1996. The scheme had previously been administered by the Teachers' Pensions Agency. There is no cost to Capita Business Services Ltd. (Teachers' Pensions) in relation to the Teachers Superannuation Scheme arising from the abolition of the advance Corporation Tax credit.

Teachers (Select Committee Report)

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the Government's response to the Sixth report of the Education and Employment Committee, Session 1996–97, on the Professional Status, Recruitment and Training of Teachers, which was published in March. [7646]

Ms Estelle Morris: We welcome the report. The White Paper published yesterday sets out the Government's plans to tackle the issues raised by the report. Our plans to establish a General Teaching Council, raise standards in teacher training, and develop a framework of professional standards should raise the status of the profession and assist with the recruitment of good candidates for the teaching profession. We announced last month that we are introducing new standards for initial teacher training courses, and started consultation last week on proposals for employment-based routes into teaching that will also help to boost the supply of well-trained teachers.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will review provision for special educational needs; and if he will make a statement. [6876]

Ms Estelle Morris: We shall publish in September a Green Paper setting out for consultation proposals to take forward our policies to raise standards for children with special educational needs. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has set up a new National Advisory Group on SEN to help in the preparation of the Green Paper, and to oversee the subsequent process of consultation, and the resulting action programme for this Parliament. The Group will meet for the first time on 17 July.

Careers Education

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to extend the legislation on careers education and guidance in schools to the independent sector; and if he will make a statement. [6933]

Dr. Howells: There are no plans at this stage to extend the legislation on careers education and guidance.

Many independent schools have good careers education programmes and work closely with careers services. We will take active steps to support this voluntary agreement and promotion of good practice.

Employment Chapter

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the consequences for British industry of the employment chapter negotiated at Amsterdam. [5745]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The new employment chapter has the potential to provide significant benefits to firms and individuals in the UK. It makes clear the importance of promoting a skilled and adaptable workforce and flexible labour markets responsive to economic change. The chapter will allow co-ordination of Member States' employment policies where appropriate, while restating that primary responsibility for employment matters will continue to lie with Member States.

School Inspections

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was the total amount of funds set aside by OFSTED for the inspection of settings where nursery vouchers were to be redeemed; [6932]

(2) if OFSTED has met its expected outturn figure for 1996–97 in respect of schools inspected in 1996–97; [6929]

(3) how many inspections were carried out by OFSTED in respect of (a) secondary schools, (b) primary schools, (c) special schools and (d) pupil referral units in 1996–97. [6931]

Mr. Byers: The funding of OFSTED, and the numbers of schools and nursery settings inspected, are matters for HMCI. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member, placing a copy of his letter in the Library.

Primary Class Sizes

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are (a) the average and (b) the maximum numbers of children in primary school classes in Stoke on Trent, North; and how many are educated in class sizes of over 30 pupils. [7328]

Mr. Byers: The available information is shown in the following tables.

The information in Table 2 puts into context the information on maximum class sizes in Table 1.

Table 1: Average and maximum class size and number of pupils in classes of 31 or more pupils for classes taught by one teacher in maintained primary schools in the Stoke on Trent, North Parliamentary Constituency in January 1997[1]

Assisted Places (Taunton)

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the schools in the constituency of Taunton with pupils on the assisted places scheme, indicating in each case the number of pupils and the income which the school receives under the scheme. [7050]

Mr. Byers: The number of assisted places taken-up and the cost of those places for each participating school in Taunton in the 1996–97 academic year are given in the following table:

Assisted places scheme: Taunton

School name		Academic year 1996–97
King's College, Taunton	Number of assisted pupils	20
	Cost of places £000s	108
Queen's College, Taunton	Number of assisted pupils	86
	Cost of places £000s	387
Taunton School	Number of assisted pupils	77
	Cost of places £000s	427

National Curriculum (Engineering)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons the study of engineering is not included in the national curriculum. [7056]

Ms Estelle Morris: The National Curriculum aims to ensure that all pupils aged 5–16 at maintained schools benefit from a broad and balanced curriculum. It was not designed to train pupils for specialised careers such as engineering. There is, however, scope within the programmes of study for a number of National Curriculum subjects, including design and technology, maths, science and art, for schools to ensure that pupils have the opportunity to gain the knowledge, skills and understanding which they will need to study engineering.

Parenthood Lessons

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to promote parenthood lessons in schools as part of his programme to meet the "The Health of the Nation" target for teenage pregnancies. [6825]

Ms Estelle Morris: As stated in the White Paper "Excellence in Schools" published yesterday, the Government intends that all secondary schools should have a role in teaching young people the skills of good parenting, both formally and through contact with good adult role models. Schools need to impress upon young people at an early stage the emotional, financial, social and practical responsibilities which parenthood entails and the lifelong nature of the commitment it brings. The Department will be considering with teachers and others how this might best be achieved and what parenting education programmes should contain.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Dial-a-ride Companies

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many vehicles each dial-a-ride company operates; and what is the age of each vehicle. [6907]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The answer is as follows:

Company	0–1 year	1–2 years	2–3 years	3–4 years	4–5 years	5–6 years	6–7 years	7–8 years	8–9 years	Total
Central	1	4	5	7	1	8	7	1	0	34
North	4	1	9	4	2	8	8	7	1	44
North-east	8	1	13	2	3	8	12	4	0	51
South	1	1	8	9	4	5	5	1	0	34
South-east	6	1	10	1	3	6	8	3	0	38
West	4	1	6	0	11	4	7	4	6	43
Total	24	9	51	23	24	39	47	20	7	244

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what contribution London Transport made to the cost of replacing dial-a-ride vehicles in each of the last three financial years; and how many vehicles were replaced. [6908]

Ms Jackson: Dial-a-ride vehicles are purchased by London Transport on behalf of the dial-a-ride companies. The cost and numbers of additional vehicles are included as well as vehicles which were purchased as replacements.

	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Total cost of additional replacement vehicles	£2.03 million	£0.11 million	£0.81 million
Number of additional vehicles that entered services	26	0	9
Number of replacement vehicles that entered service	20	17	14

The basic vehicles may be paid for in one year but the cost of conversion (including equipment such as a tail lift) and delivery may fall in the following financial year. In some cases all the costs may be incurred in the year before the vehicle enters service.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much each dial-a-ride company has paid to London Transport in depreciation costs in each of the last three years. [6909]

Ms Jackson: The answer is as follows.

London dial-a-ride companies—depreciation charges

	Central	North	North-east	South	South-east	West
1994–95	158	177	212	167	183	197
1995–96	121	148	166	128	131	127
1996–97	139	151	176	133	148	136

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the staffing establishment in London Transport responsible for administering dial-a-ride companies. [6911]

Ms Jackson: I understand that there are three full time equivalent posts and one part time post (three days per week).

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimates he has made of the financial implications of his Department funding dial-a-ride companies directly. [6912]

Ms Jackson: None.

Rail Freight

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the recent decision by a major retailer to transport more of its goods by rail rather than road; and if he will take steps to encourage other retailers to do the same. [6558]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government wants to see more freight go by rail, and we welcome new initiatives which support that aim.

Our White Paper on integrated transport policy, to be published next spring, will consider ways of increasing the proportion of freight carried by rail.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will consider including within future guidelines for transport policies and programmes submitted by local authorities a requirement to promote greater use of railways for freight, with special reference to the provision of inter-modal terminals. [7065]

Ms Jackson: Measures to promote the use of railways for freight transport are not funded through the Transport Policies and Programme (TPP) system and have therefore not been the subject of Departmental TPP Guidance to local authorities.

Our White Paper on integrated transport policy, to be published next spring, will consider ways of increasing the proportion of freight carried by rail, including the role of the planning system.

Roads Programme

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what method of appraisal of traffic generation has been used in respect of (a) each road scheme approved since May 1997 and (b) those road schemes currently under review; and if he will a statement. [6870]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No major trunk road schemes have passed an approval stage since May 1997. Local authority schemes subject to the Secretary of State's approval and the trunk road schemes currently under review are subject to appraisal for traffic generation in accordance with the "Guidance on Induced Traffic", published in December 1994, where appropriate or, where there are complex traffic interactions, using the updated Guidance incorporated in the "Design Manual for Roads and Bridges" in February 1997 (Volume 12 section 2 part 2).

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he will take to ensure that the current review of the roads programme will not result in delays to those schemes chosen to proceed. [5950]

Ms Jackson: We are undertaking an accelerated review of 12 trunk road schemes. For others, work is proceeding to the end of the current stage. This will minimise the delay to schemes should they be chosen to proceed and ensure that work done to date is not lost.

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the DBFO road schemes for which tenders have been received will be able to proceed as planned. [6940]

Ms Jackson: These DBFO projects are being considered within the accelerated review of trunk road schemes which is currently underway. We are aiming to announce decisions on these schemes later this month.

Private Hire Vehicles

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has following the case in the Queen's Bench Division between L. Benson and Copeland Borough Council to seek to restore the previous position whereby the spouse of a licence holder could use a private hire vehicle for any purpose other than for hire. [6766]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I am aware of the concerns of the private hire trade following the decision in the case of Benson v. Boyce and I am considering what should be done in the light of this judgment.

Railtrack

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the present regulatory arrangements provide a mechanism for Railtrack to be rewarded for improvements to railway infrastructure through the price review mechanism rather than having to recover all the costs from a train operating company during its franchise period. [7063]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The costs of enhancement investment do not have to be recovered from a train operating company over one franchise period. The treatment of access charges in respect of network enhancements at future periodic reviews should generally take account of any agreement between the funding body or bodies and Railtrack on the future basis of charging, while having regard to specific public interest concerns.

Traffic Wardens

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review with the Home Secretary the duties and powers of traffic wardens, with special reference to offences involving moving traffic. [7064]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The duties and powers of traffic wardens are matters for the Home Secretary and Chief Officers of Police. Traffic enforcement is one of the matters I expect to be regularly discussed between my Department and the Home Office.

Motorway Lighting

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the accuracy of the map of motorway lighting produced by the Highways Agency in June; [7106]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 24 June, Official Report, columns 521–22, for what reasons (a) the map supplied by the Highways Agency shows the M65 as unlit and (b) the list of motorways excludes the M65. [7107]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency to reply to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Nutt to Mr. Peter L. Pike, dated 8 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked Lawrie Haynes to reply to your recent questions about the accuracy of the map of motorway lighting prepared by the Highways Agency. Lawrie is away from the office at present, and has asked me to deal with correspondence in his absence.

The map of motorway lighting provided by the Highways Agency was produced to indicate the approximate distribution of lighting on motorways across England. Regional information was gathered and centrally collated onto a base map. Whilst every endeavour has been made to ensure the accuracy of the information, unfortunately an error occurred in the categorisation of the section of the M65 operated by the Highways Agency.

I apologise for this error and confirm that the Agency's section of the M65 is completely lit. An updated list and map is enclosed for your information and updated copies of the map will be sent to the Library.

Belmont Stables, Barnet

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations his Department has received concerning the planning applications submitted by Belmont Stables for the Totteridge valley, Barnet area; and if he will make a statement. [6486]

Mr. Caborn: The application affecting the Totteridge valley submitted by the Belmont Riding Centre have been taken to appeal. The Planning Inspectorate are arranging a local inquiry into the proposals. Over 150 individual representations have been received by the Inspectorate all raising concerns about the proposals. A 450-signature petition in support of the proposals was received by the local planning authority. As the appeals are still to be heard it would not be appropriate to comment on the merits of the proposed developments.

Mink and Arctic Fox

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he plans to list mink and arctic fox under the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976. [6548]

Angela Eagle: I have no plans to add mink and arctic fox to the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976. The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have lead responsibility for legislation concerning animals farmed for fur.

Housing

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what structures exist at ministerial level to allow inter-departmental co-operation on housing matters. [6637]

Mr. Raynsford: The Ministerial Committee on Home and Social Affairs (HS) considers housing matters. Other committees may also consider particular housing issues from time to time as necessary.

Travellers

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will consider reintroducing the provisions of the Caravan Sites Act 1968, with special reference to the requirement on local authorities to provide sites for travellers. [6639]

Mr. Raynsford: We have no plans to reintroduce a statutory duty on local authorities to provide gypsy caravan sites. Local authorities already have a discretionary power (in section 24 of the Caravan Sites and Control of Development Act 1960) to provide sites for gypsies if necessary. My Department's Circular number 18/94, "Gypsy Sites Policy and Unauthorised Camping" also advises local authorities to keep their existing gypsy sites open and well maintained, and to consider the provision of emergency stopping places for gypsies visiting their area.

Humane Trapping

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has made to (a) his European counterparts and (b) other bodies in respect of the proposed international agreement on humane trapping standards discussed at the European Environment Ministers' meeting on 19 June. [6681]

Angela Eagle: My hon. Friend the Minister of State has met his opposite numbers from a number of Member States to discuss the Commission's proposals for a "Framework Agreement on humane trapping standards". We have made it clear that we do not support the Commission's proposal since we believe that it does not go far enough in banning the use of leghold traps.

Ground Rents

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in which parts of the country the system of ground rents still exists; what representations he has received concerning abuses of the ground rent system; and what plans he has to review the legislation concerning ground rents. [7108]

Mr. Raynsford: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to rent charges levied by landowners who have released their land for development, which are otherwise known as ground rents or chief rents, rather than to ground rents for leasehold property.

The vast majority of rent charges are on properties in the Bristol, Manchester and Wearside areas. The Rentcharges Act 1977 enables some householders who are liable to pay rent charges to redeem them cheaply and easily. However, certain rent charges are excluded from the Act and we are actively studying suggestions that there may as a result be scope for abuse by owners of such rent charges.

Biotechnological Inventions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has undertaken into the possible environment implications of the draft European Parliament and Council directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions; and if he will make a statement. [7354]

Angela Eagle: The Department has a research programme to consider the environmental implications arising from the release of biotechnological products, in particular to identify the potential hazards and assess the risks to the environment from the proposed release of genetically modified organisms. The Department has no responsibility for the legal protection of biotechnological inventions.

Abstraction Licences

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government will be conducting its review of abstraction licences; if he will make a statement on the review; and if it will include a review of pricing mechanisms. [7331]

Angela Eagle: We shall be launching the review shortly. A key aim will be to ensure that the environment is properly protected, while providing fair and flexible arrangements for access to water resources to meet properly managed demands in a sustainable way. Economic instruments including pricing mechanisms will be amongst the measures to be studied.

Water Companies

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government plan to take steps to establish duties on water companies to (a) conserve water when carrying out their functions and (b) prepare and implement drought contingency plans. [7335]

Angela Eagle: We shall bring forward legislation on these matters when Parliamentary time allows. Following the Water Summit in May, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister asked water companies what steps they were taking to prepare and agree drought contingency plans voluntarily and he will be making an announcement on their responses shortly.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the replies he has received from the water companies in response to the Government's water summit will be available to interested parties. [7330]

Angela Eagle: The replies will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the timetable for the Government's review of water company charging systems. [7334]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment launched the Government's review of the system of charging for water in a written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) on 25 June 1997 Official Report, column 514. My Department has written to interested bodies seeking their representations on the full range of issues which will be considered in the review. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library. The closing date for comments on the review is 31 July 1997. The Government intends to set out its proposals in the autumn. There will then be a period of formal consultation, with a view to reaching decisions fairly early in 1998.

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those water companies that have agreed voluntarily to (a) offer domestic customers free simple devices to reduce toilet flushes, (b) offer free water efficiency audits to domestic customers, (c) increase efforts to encourage water efficient gardening and (d) publish more performance and financial information [7333]

Angela Eagle: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister will be making an announcement on these matters shortly.

Tax Credits

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment his Department has made of the reduction in the income of occupational pension funds administered on behalf of local authority employees from the abolition of payable tax credits; [7338]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of the cost of local authorities of the increase in pension contributions following the abolition of payable tax credits. [7339]

Ms Armstrong: An assessment of the abolition of tax credits on the income flow of local authority pension funds will in the first instance be a matter for each of the funds to consider, in discussion with their actuaries, investment managers and other advisers. The findings can then be built into the 1998 valuation of the funds and used to inform decisions on employers' future contribution rates with effect from the financial year 1999–2000.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the value of the tax credits available on occupational pension schemes for local authority employees during the last financial year. [7337]

Ms Armstrong: The information requested is not collected in such a way that is readily identifiable to individual pension schemes.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultations he has had with the Local Government Association about the effect on occupational pension schemes of the abolition of payable tax credits.

Ms Armstrong: Liaison between my Department, the Local Government Association and the United Kingdom Steering Committee on local authority pensions continues on a regular basis on these matters.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment his Department has made of the impact on council tax bands of the abolition of payable tax credits. [7336]

Ms Armstrong: None. The council tax is based on a system of banded valuations according to the open market value of properties on 1 April 1991 and these valuations will be unaffected by the abolition of payable tax credits.

Office of Water Services

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what Ofwat's environmental responsibilities are; and to what extent these will be included in the forthcoming price review. [7332]

Angela Eagle: The statutory duties of the Director General of Water Services are set out in the Water Industry Act 1991. Subject to his primary duties, the Director General has a general environmental duty, set out in Section 3. The Director General will take all his statutory duties into account during the forthcoming review.

Local Government Officers (Political Activity)

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to relax the rules in relation to local government officers and political activity. [7157]

Mr. Raynsford: These rules are currently the subject of a case before the European Commission of Human Rights, whose findings we will wish to consider carefully before deciding what action, if any, would be appropriate.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7208]

Ms Angela Eagle: Under The Lord Chancellor's Instrument (LCI) number 28 dated 13 July 1995 the Department of Transport renewed its requirement to retain "Maps and plans (MNA series) relating to consents and proposals for work on foreshores and in tidal waters (1840–1990)". The dates were the best estimate before reviewing the collection.

These records are in the process of being reviewed and the oldest record discovered in the collection to date is circa 1771 a survey map of the River Dee, Cheshire. The Public Record Office has the full catalogue of the material and advise that it is inappropriate to apply for another LCI showing (1771–1990) as the work should be completed and transfer effected by March 1998 latest.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to change the 1997–98 cash limit for Ordnance Survey. [7542]

Mr. Raynsford: The cash limit for Ordnance Survey, Class VI Vote 8 has been reduced by £23,000 from £6,759,000 to £6,736,000 as a result of a transfer of provision from Ordnance Survey to the Department of National Heritage, Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments, Class X, Vote 1 for a rent on a jointly occupied property.

CITES

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the conference of the parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species which took place in Harare from 9 to 20 June. [7710]

Mr. Meacher: A record number of 125 member countries attended the conference, the majority of whom favoured greater liberalisation of controls in favour of sustainable use in line with the agreements reached at the Earth summit in 1992 and since confirmed at the UN General Assembly Special Session last week.

Three southern African countries, Botswana, Namibia, and Zimbabwe, secured approval to transfer their elephant populations from Appendix I to Appendix II with the intention of allowing a limited resumption of trade in ivory stockpiles, live animals, and hunting trophies. During the Conference it became clear that a majority of countries supported an immediate resumption of trade in ivory. The United Kingdom and other EU Member States, working with African countries, were instrumental in deferring a final decision until stronger controls, verified by an independent panel of experts, are confirmed to be in place. In consequence, there will be no trade in ivory for at least 21 months. If trade in raw ivory does resume, the stockpiles will be exported to a single country, Japan, in a one-off experiment, subject to review. The UK abstained on the final vote in line with the European Union's Common Position.

After active interventions by the UK and other EU Member States, the Conference voted to maintain controls on a number of key species. Proposals from Japan and Norway to block the International Whaling Commission's primacy in matters concerning commercial whaling, whilst allowing trade to resume in several whale species, were rejected, as were South Africa's proposal for a limited trade in rhinoceros horn from their white rhino population, and a proposal from Cuba to resume trade in their stockpiles of hawksbill turtle shells.

With support from the EU the Conference adopted Germany's proposal to include all species of sturgeon on Appendix II, thereby ensuring that future trade in these species will be monitored and controlled. Agreement was reached on increased collaboration between CITES and the Food and Agriculture Organisation to gather data on shark landings, but the Conference rejected proposals from the USA, strongly supported by the UK, to establish a marine fish working group.

The Conference endorsed a major UK initiative to tackle the impact of traditional medicines on wild animals and plants. It agreed a resolution sponsored by the UK, Japan and Korea detailing actions to reduce over-exploitation of wild species for medicinal use though better communication with traditional medicine communities, the introduction of comprehensive legislation in consumer countries and range states, effective enforcement, and more research into substitutes for endangered species. The proposals were agreed by consensus following constructive discussions between the sponsor countries and China.

Proposals from Argentina, Bolivia, and Peru for a limited and controlled trade in sheared wool, cloth, and handicraft products from wild vicuna were adopted, but with a zero quota for the Bolivian population and other safeguards. The EU supported the proposals on the basis of the scientific evidence and after detailed discussions with the range states on their internal controls.

Finland withdrew from a proposal, which they had submitted jointly with Bulgaria and Jordan, to transfer all populations of the European Brown Bear from Appendix II to Appendix I. Most range states, including Russia, strongly opposed the proposal. In a series of votes, the Conference rejected the original proposal and subsequent amendments which would have confined its application to specific populations. In the absence of a common position, the UK and other EU Member States abstained on the first vote. Member States opposed the amended proposals which would have been impossible to enforce.

The UK and other EU Member States strongly supported a proposal from the USA and Bolivia to include Big Leaf Mahogany on Appendix II of the Convention. However, as in 1994, this was rejected by the Conference. Instead, a working group will examine ways of protecting this species from unsustainable logging.

In total, conference decisions will result in stricter controls on 17 species; one of these will transfer from Appendix III of the Convention to Appendix II, three from Appendix II to Appendix I, and thirteen will be added to the Convention for the first time. Less strict controls will apply to six species which will move from Appendix I to Appendix II. A further eleven species, which are presently on Appendix II but not in international trade, will be removed from the Convention altogether. Controls will also be removed from over a thousand artificially propagated hybrid plants widely sold through retail outlets.

With UK support, the Conference adopted an important initiative by tiger range states for stronger action to protect this critically endangered species. As the new Chair of the Convention's Standing Committee, we will ensure there are opportunities to discuss progress before the next Conference.

A proposal by the USA to establish a permanent Enforcement Working Group was rejected despite strong UK support, but Customs and Police members of the UK delegation organised an enforcement workshop during the Conference to discuss training, information exchange and co-operation between agencies. Several other countries took part, including the USA, Canada, South Africa, Mexico and a number of EU Member States.

The UK delegation also played an active role in discussions on other key issues, chairing a working group which produced an action plan to implement the findings of a report on the effectiveness of CITES, and a resolution calling for increased co-operation between CITES and other conventions, in particular, the Biodiversity Convention. The UK also brokered a compromise agreement on the Convention's budget over the next three years which will allow extra work to be done whilst limiting the overall increase in contributions to 5 per cent. An offer by the UK, strongly supported by the EU to host the next conference, was narrowly rejected in favour of Indonesia.

The United Kingdom was elected to Chair the Convention's Standing Committee which will be taking major decisions on behalf of all the Parties in the period before the next Conference in two and a half years.

Local Government Act 1988

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy in respect of Section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988. [6895]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 1 July 1997]: The Government has long made it clear that we are opposed to Section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988. We are therefore intending to repeal it; however, there is no legislative opportunity available at present.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has for a review of the structure and operation of the Child Support Agency; over what time scale and with what terms of reference; and if she will make a statement. [4889]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Over the coming months we will be looking closely at all areas of the Child Support Agency's operations, in particular to ensure that cases are processed faster, backlogs are tackled and fathers do not avoid paying maintenance.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the proportion of the new work intake of the Child Support Agency during 1996–97 and the number of live assessed cases on 31 March 1997 relating to persons with care (a) claiming (i) income support, (ii) income-based jobseekers allowance, (iii) family credit and (iv) disability working allowance and (b) not in receipt of means-tested benefits; if she will list the figures for the three previous years; and if she will estimate the proportion of maintenance collected which is not offset against means-tested benefits. [5265]

Mr. Bradley: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients throughout the Child Support assessment process. We are looking for substantial and sustained improvements from the Agency in particular on getting more maintenance paid, reducing the backlog and improving customer service.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about new work intake by the Child Support Agency.

The Agency intake of new work in 1996–97 was 368,026. The intake for the 3 previous years was 356,317 in 1995–96; 398,584 in 1994–95; and 858,011 in 1993–94.

Information is not available to break down each years new intake of work into the categories that you have requested. However, data relating to the Agency's live and assessed caseload is produced by the Analytical Services Division of the Department of Social Security. Figures are not available, as at the month of March for each of the years you have requested; the nearest figures available are those at 30 June 1994, 31 March 1995 and 28 February for both 1996 and 1997. The table attached shows the total live and assessed caseload, and the number of cases with full maintenance assessments at the dates mentioned.

The table also outlines the proportion of parents/persons with care claiming means tested benefits and those who are not. Data is only available for full maintenance assessments. The number of cases where the parent with care is in receipt of Disabled Working Allowance is small, and these are included with Family Credit cases. Income-based Job Seekers Allowance cases are not counted separately, and they are included with Income Support cases.

Of the £399.9m collected or arranged for payment by the Agency in 1996–97, £267.7m (67%) has been calculated as offsetting benefit spending. This leaves an estimated £132.2m (33%) which did not offset benefit spending.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons with care have received payments of interest on delay from the Child Support Agency. [5271]

Mr. Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of persons with care who have received payments of interest on delay from the Child Support Agency.

The measure whereby persons with care are compensated for delays caused by the Agency in passing on maintenance payments was introduced in March 1996, and was applicable to payments made from 1 April 1995. At the 30 April 1997, the total number of persons with care who have received payments under this measure from the Agency was 835, from a live and assessed caseload of approximately half a million.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will give a breakdown of the level of Child Support Agency full assessment against absent parents' income in bands of £50 a week; and what proportion of absent parents have an assessment which is higher than the maintenance requirement for the relevant children. [5293]

Mr. Bradley: The formula provisions are designed to ensure that absent parents pay a reasonable amount towards the costs of their children, and contain a number of safeguards to ensure they retain a fair proportion of their income to meet other commitments. The additional maintenance payable when absent parents have sufficient income to meet the basic maintenance requirement helps to ensure that children share their higher standard of living.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security regarding the level of Child Support Agency full maintenance assessments against absent parents net income and the proportion of absent parents that have a maintenance assessment that is higher than the maintenance requirement.

The tables below outline full maintenance assessments of absent parents by net income as requested.

The proportion of absent parents with a final maintenance higher than the maintenance requirement is approximately 12%.

I hope this is helpful.

Absent parents with a net income of £0.00 includes all cases where the absent parent is on income support JSA(IB). This includes a small number of cases where the maintenance assessment is greater than £4.80. These are normally suspended cases where the CSA is investigating the current status of the absent parent.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list for each quarter for which information is available since April 1993 (a) the total debt in Child Support Agency accounts, (b) the debt attributable to interim maintenance assessments and (c) for both IMA-only cases and fully assessed cases, the number and percentage of accounts (i) fully paid up, (ii) partly paid up and (iii) without any payments made; and if he will add these data to the CSA performance statistical information placed in the Library. [5261]

Mr. Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the amount of debt in Child Support Agency accounts.

The amount of debt, which includes final maintenance assessments and all interim maintenance assessments (except Category A maintenance assessments) remaining to be collected by the Agency at the end of March 1997 was £513,124,641.

The amount of maintenance outstanding attributable to Category A assessments remaining to be collected by the Agency at the end of March 1997 was £613,765,094.

Compliance rates are only available from November 1995. Prior to that date information available was of insufficient reliability to produce accurate results. The tables attached reflect the position from November 1995.

We will not be including these statistics in the CSA Statistical Information report which is placed in the House of Commons Library, as these statistics are available to the public in the DSS Analytical Services Division CSA Quarterly Summary of Statistics.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of child maintenance assessments were processed by the Child Support Agency (i) within six months, (ii) within a year and (iii) after more than a year in 1996–97. [5446]

Mr. Bradley: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients throughout the child support assessment process. We are looking for substantial and sustained operational improvements from the Agency, in particular on getting more maintenance paid, reducing the backlog and improving customer service.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Chris Pond, dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the processing of maintenance assessments. I am afraid that I am unable to provide precise information in the format requested, as we do not have a breakdown of the proportion of clearances within a year and greater than a year.

The clearance of maintenance assessments is the subject of a Secretary of State target, which in 1996/97 required that 60% of new applications be cleared within 26 weeks. We therefore monitored the progress of applications with this target in mind.

In 1996/97, we reported that 54% of new applications were cleared within 26 weeks. This was the figure for the full year. Performance was improving as the year-end approached in February and March, the in-month achievement was 60% and 63% respectively.

Performance this year shows a continuing upward trend in the clearance of cases.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the caseload of the Child Support Agency, in respect of (a) cases awaiting assessment and (b) live assessed cases at the end of each financial year of its operation; and what estimates she has made of these figures over the next five years. [5280]

Mr. Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the caseload of the Child Support Agency.

Details of the number of cases awaiting assessment at the end of each year of operation are as follows:

1993–94: 550,000

1994–95: 425,561

1995–96: 409,659

1996–97: 406,649

Details of the Agency's live and assessed cases are provided by the Department of Social Security Analytical Services Division, and are measured for the Agency's Quarterly Summary of Statistics (QSS). The quarterly measurement has not always coincided with the end of the financial year; the following figures are therefore from the QSS nearest to the year-end:

1993–94: 203,600 (June 1994 QSS)

1994–95: 345,400 (March 1995 QSS)

1995–96: 460,800 (February 1996 QSS)

1996–97: 579,200 (February 1997 QSS).

We would expect to have reduced work on hand to around 200,000 by the end of 1998–99. The Agency is constantly seeking to improve clearance times and taking this into account would expect to have around 150,000–200,000 cases on hand during the following three years.

The number of live and assessed cases at the end of each of the next five years is expected to be as follows:

1997–98: 730,000

1998–99: 855,000

1999–2000: 950,000

2000–01: 1,035,000

2001–02: 1,115,000

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of Sate for Social Security how many complaints concerning the Child Support Agency were sent in the last six quarters to (a) its customer services manager, (b) its chief executive and (c) Ministers; and when complainants were informed of the establishment of the office of independent case examiner. [5316]

Mr. Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about complaints concerning the Child Support Agency. I am afraid that I am unable to provide precise information in the format requested.

Most letters of complaint to the Agency are not dealt with centrally, but are handled by the Child Support Agency Centres (or, in a small number of instances, field offices) responsible for the complainants case. The number of complaints received by the Centres (or the field) over the last six quarters is as follows:

Quarter	Number of complaints
October to December 1995	7,609
January to March 1996	6,257
April to June 1996	6,275
July to September 1996	6,259
October to December 1996	5,808
January to March 1997	5,870

Whilst figures are collated on correspondence received by Ministers and Chief Executive offices, this is not broken down into different categories, and it is not possible to say what proportion of that correspondence relates to complaints. Details of the number of letters received by the Chief Executive and by Ministers over the last six quarters is as follows:

Quarter	Chief Executive	Ministers
October to December 1995	2,322	455
January to March 1996	2,412	370
April to June 1996	2,338	402
July to September 1996	2,102	319
October to December 1996	2,333	346
January to March 1997	2,266	347

It is important to consider the amount of correspondence, whether complaints or other matters, in the context of the Agency's overall business. From launch in April 1993 to the end of 1996/97, the Agency has taken on just under two million cases. A relatively small proportion of the Agency's workload, therefore, results in complaints or other correspondence.

In response to a written Parliamentary Question, the then Parliamentary Under Secretary of State announced on 25 March 1996, that an Independent Complaints Examiner would be recruited for the Agency. This was followed by a press release, on the same day, stating his intentions to recruit an Independent Complaints Examiner, following a pilot to inform the guidelines within which the Examiner would operate. The appointment of Anne Parker as Independent Case Examiner was announced in a press release on 31st December 1996 and a leaflet explaining the service was published at the end of March 1997. Additionally, moves to publicise the service have included meetings between the Examiner and stakeholder organisations, and correspondence from the Ombudsman to MPs.

The Office of the Independent Case Examiner opened for business on 7th April 1997, but there were some restrictions on publicity during the General Election period.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many Child Support Agency cases have had initial period arrears of over six months deferred in each quarter since April 1995; and in how many of these cases the person with care has been compensated. [5254]

Mr. Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency initial period arrears cases.

This measure was introduced to encourage absent parents to start paying maintenance where significant levels of arrears had accrued, as a direct result of Agency delays in processing initial maintenance assessments in the early period of the Agency. Under this arrangement, if absent parents continue to comply for 52 weeks, they would only be liable for the latest 6 months of arrears. Where this results in a balance of arrears being due to the person with care, this is paid by the Agency in the form of a special payment.

The table attached shows the number of cases where initial period arrears have been deferred and the number of cases where the person with care has been compensated.

Because of the 52 week qualifying period no payments were made during 1995/96. It follows that any agreements made for 1996/97 would not be actioned until the beginning of the following financial year, namely 1997/98.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Child Support Agency performance statistics for the final quarter of 1996–97 will be placed in the Library; and if the CSA met its performance targets and its charter targets for that year. [5288]

Mr. Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the performance of the Child Support Agency in 1996/97.

Performance statistics for the final quarter of the year were placed in the Library on 4th June 1997.

The Agency was given a demanding set of targets for 1996/97 by the Secretary of State, and performance indicated the good progress made in its main activities, with four out of five targets achieved in full. Full details of performance against the targets are shown in the attached table 1.

The original Agency Charter was published in April 1993 to coincide with the launch of the Agency. It has now been revised, following consultation with Agency staff, client representative groups, DSS Headquarters, and the Citizen's Charter Unit. The new Charter was published in November 1996, and was the first Agency leaflet to be awarded the Plain English Campaign "Crystal Mark". Performance in 1996/97 against the revised standards is shown in the attached table 2.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many Child Support Agency cases (a) liability orders have been registered in the county court, (b) inspectors have been appointed and (c) category C IMAs have been made. [5258]

Mr. Bradley: The Government believes all children are entitled to the support of both parents, irrespective of where they live. We cannot tolerate absent parents not paying the maintenance that they owe. It is therefore right that the Child Support Agency should chase up fathers who avoid paying.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Archy Kirkwood dated 7 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the enforcement of maintenance assessments.

Legal action against an absent parent is a serious step, and is not taken lightly by the Agency. Nevertheless, if all other voluntary methods have failed, and if a deduction from earnings order is not a possibility, then a liability order is applied for. The Agency's intention in such cases is to secure maintenance—it is hoped that the threat of such action will be enough to ensure compliance.

During 1996/7 the Agency initiated liability order action in 2101 cases. The number of cases where a liability order was granted during 1996/7 was 1136.

Additionally, since May 1996 the Agency has been able to enter liability orders in the County Court Register of Judgments in England and Wales. In 1996/97, 110 liability orders were entered in the County Court Register. In the first two months of 1997/98, 78 liability orders have been entered in the Register.

Under Section 15 of the Child Support Agency 1991, the Secretary of State may appoint a designated officer to act as an inspector, to visit an employer or self-employed absent parent in order to obtain relevant information on a specific case. The Agency does not employ staff specifically to undertake the role of an inspector. Where it is appropriate to utilise inspectorate powers, a suitably qualified and experienced officer is designated. We do not collate information on the number of cases where it has been necessary to invoke the powers of an inspector.

Category C interim maintenance assessments are only used where a self-employed person is genuinely attempting to cooperate, but is having difficulty providing all the necessary information. Where a self-employed person is being deliberately uncooperative a punitive Category A interim maintenance assessment is imposed. Very few Category C interim maintenance assessments have been made since their introduction in April 1995; the numbers are as follows:

1995/96: 10

1996/97: 3

1997/98: 1 (to 31.5.97)

I hope this is helpful.

Child Care Disregard

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Wales have been in receipt of child care disregard since April 1996; and how many are lone parents. [7155]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. Work is the best form of welfare for people of working age.

There were around 1,600 family credit awards that included help with childcare made to people in Wales between 1 April 1996 and 30 November 1996, the latest date for which figures are available. Of these 1,400 were lone parents.

Information on families receiving the help through disability working allowance is not available, and housing benefit information will not be available until later in the year.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by her Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7202]

Mr. Field: The oldest file in the Department of Social Security awaiting transfer to the Public Record Office is:- Ministry of Pensions Hospital, Leopardstown Park, Dublin. Surrender by Mr. Bernard Dunning of his reversionary interests in the property to the Crown. The file was raised on 7 February 1932 and closed on 25 April 1933.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the savings that will accrue from the benefit integrity project for (a) the current year and (b) subsequent years. [6326]

Mr. Field: One of our key aims is to restore confidence in the benefits system by tackling fraud and ensuring value for taxpayers' money. Questions on Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of the Chief Executive, Peter Mathison. I have asked him to write directly and for his reply to be published with this answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow dated 7 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the estimate that has been made of the savings that will accrue from the Benefit Integrity Project for (a) the current year and (b) subsequent years.

The estimated programme expenditure savings attributed to the Benefit Integrity Project for the current year are £27m. Savings for the years 1998/99 and 1999/2000 are estimated to be £40m and £35m respectively.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 9 July 1997

PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Privy Council

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the President of the Council if she will list the names of those who have resigned from the Privy Council since 1967, indicating the reasons they have given. [6481]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: Since 1967, Mr. John Stonehouse and Mr. Jonathan Aitken have asked for their names to be removed from the list of Privy Counsellors. In both cases, the reasons given were personal.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Council of Europe

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Council if she will arrange for the yellow Demand Form for European Printed Papers to include reports, recommendations, resolutions and orders adopted by the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe. [7105]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The yellow Demand Form lists only titles which are held in stock in the Vote Office. Stocks of publications from the Council of Europe are not held but copies may be ordered through the Vote Office by use of the green Demand Form. Reference copies of many such publications are held in the House of Commons Library.

Division Lobbies (Alterations)

Mr. Forth: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what was the cost of the alterations to the division lobbies. [6948]

Mr. Kirkwood: The total cost of the alterations to the division lobbies was some £2,500.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Electoral Register

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints (a) his Department and (b) electoral registration offices received from those whose names did not appear on registration lists for the last General Election; and if he will make a statement. [6020]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: (a) We have received around 400 complaints about non-registration for the last General Election. (b) Information on the number of complaints received by electoral registration officers is not compiled centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of homeless people who fail to qualify for electoral registration because of the residence requirement; and if he will make a statement. [6013]

Mr. Howarth [holding answer 1 July 1997]: Information on the number of homeless people who are not included on the electoral register is not available. The guidance issued to electoral registration officers makes it clear that no one should be denied the right to register simply because they are homeless. Although an elector must be registered at an address at which he or she is resident, that address need not be a conventional one.

Altcourse Prison

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if category A prisoners will be housed in Altcourse Prison. [7046]

Ms Joyce Quin: It is planned that Altcourse prison, Liverpool, will house up to 25 category A prisoners.

Young Offenders

Ms Kelly: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persistent young offenders in Bolton, West he estimates will be affected by the Government's plans for fast-track punishment. [6474]

Mr. Michael: It is not possible to give an estimate of how many persistent young offenders in Bolton, West will be affected by the Government's commitment to halving the time between arrest and sentence for persistent young offenders. We are taking early action to encourage all youth agencies to deal with cases more speedily and will be monitoring progress in achieving this aim.

We also believe that certainty and speed of outcome will send a clear message which will help deter some youngsters from offending. We are also encouraging the police and local authorities together to assess accurately the level of crime and disorder affecting the public in their area as a basis for a strategic partnership. It is hoped that this will provide a more accurate assessment of youth crime than basing a local estimate on an extrapolation from national averages.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to expand the number of non-custodial schemes to divert convicted youths from further crime. [5544]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 7 July 1997]: It is the Government's policy to "nip things in the bud" with young offenders. For example, we have signalled an intention that offenders will be punished by ending the practice of repeat police cautions, introducing a new Final Warning which will trigger effective intervention by the new locally based Youth Offender Teams.

We will require the police and local authorities to identify local problems of crime and disorder and to develop a strategy to tackle local problems. This will build on best practice in preventing crime and diverting young offenders from further offending.

We will also introduce reparation orders and a new action plan order and will introduce Youth Offender Teams to plan and supervise community sentences aimed at changing offending behaviour.

Police Act 1997

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to implement Part III of the Police Act 1997. [6926]

Mr. Michael: We will implement these provisions as quickly as possible, but a number of issues need to be addressed first. In particular, Part III cannot be implemented until a code of practice has been approved by Parliament. I hope to announce shortly the start of a consultation exercise on a draft of the code.

Rohypnol

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has evaluated of the illegal use of the drug Rohypnol; and what plans he has to warn people of the dangers of this drug. [6920]

Mr. George Howarth: Rohypnol (which is the proprietary name for the benzodiazepine drug flunitrazepam) is controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 as a Class C drug. Statistical data on seizures and offenders and on those presenting for treatment do not separately identify Class C drugs, but there is anecdotal evidence of the misuse of flunitrazepam in Scotland and in the London area. There were three police seizures of the drug reported to the Forensic Science Service in 1996 which implies that there is little flunitrazepam misuse in the United Kingdom.

In accordance with a decision by the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs to control flunitrazepam more tightly under the United Nations Convention on Psychotropic Substances 1971, we intend bringing forward later this year amendments to the Misuse of Drugs Regulations 1985 to increase the controls on the drug in the United Kingdom.

Government funded publicity campaigns about the risks of drug misuse warn of the dangers associated with the benzodiazepines, such as valium and temazepam, generally. There are no current plans to highlight this particular drug within these campaigns.

Attendance Centres

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve the facilities in attendance centres. [6921]

Mr. Michael: Attendance centres are operated from accommodation rented from local authorities, usually schools, with the centre making use of the facilities available at the location. The Officer in Charge of the centre can apply to the Home Office for funds to purchase additional equipment to ensure that the centre is able to offer a constructive and challenging regime.

CS Gas

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the guidance given to the police on the use of CS gas. [6923]

Mr. Michael: We will review guidance to chief officers on the use of CS for dealing with public disorder in the light of any proposals resulting from current consideration of the subject by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO). Guidance to chief police officers on the use of CS spray for self-defence is issued by ACPO, which keep it under continuous review.

Urban Disturbances

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many serious youth-led urban disturbances have occurred in the United Kingdom in the past 10 years; and when and where each such disturbance occurred. [7049]

Mr. Michael: The information is not available in the form requested. The available information indicates that serious disturbances have occurred at:

Rehabilitation of Offenders

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend SI 1975/1023 relating to the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974. [6925]

Mr. Michael: I expect to lay a new Exceptions Order before the House by the end of this year. This will replace SI 1975/1023, rationalise the present categories of exceptions and include those new ones that meet the criteria of:

national security;

the protection of particularly vulnerable members of society, such as the handicapped, elderly, young or sick; maintaining confidence in the administration of the law and in certain licensing systems; and ensuring probity in the areas of banking and financial services.

Consultations are now under way on all outstanding requests for new categories of exceptions.

Blind and Partially Sighted Voters

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the advantages of a trial use of large print ballot papers and braille templates for elections; and what meetings officials from his Department have held with organisations representing blind and partially sighted people to discuss this issue. [6454]

Mr. George Howarth: Officials from this Department last met representatives of the Royal National Institute for the blind (RNIB) on 20 March 1997 to discuss proposals to help blind and partially sighted voters to vote in person. RNIB's clear print guidelines, which include advice on the use of large print and the typeface for ballot papers, were circulated by the Home Office to Acting Returning Officers in February. There is no provision in legislation for the use of templates carrying the details of candidates in braille and large print, to be used in conjunction with the ballot paper available to all other voters at the polling station. Further research would be required to test the practical and timetabling implications of such templates and to ensure that they could be used without becoming subject to error or abuse.

Drink Driving

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will assess the advantages of introducing legislation to increase the penalties for drunken driving and related offences; [6619]

(2) if he will increase the penalties for drivers exceeding the permissible limits for alcohol in the blood. [6620]

Mr. Michael: The offence of driving when unfit through drink attracts a maximum penalty of six months' imprisonment or a fine of £5,000 or both, obligatory disqualification and endorsement of the offender's driving licence. Driving with excess alcohol in the blood attracts the same maximum penalty. We have no plans to increase these penalties or the maximum penalties for related offences.

Handguns (Compensation)

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that (a) his officials and (b) police forces provide detailed information to firearms certificate holders about the levels of compensation they are entitled to receive for handguns and handgun accessories surrendered in accordance with the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997. [7126]

Mr. Michael: By now, all firearm certificate holders and registered dealers should have received from their local police force copies of an information pack, including the full text and annexes to the Compensation Scheme as debated and approved by Parliament on 9 June. The levels of compensation are clearly set out in these documents. The pack also includes the claim form, a leaflet on how to complete the form and advice on where and when to surrender their weapons. In addition, the Home Office has written to clubs about the arrangements.

Perjury

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) pursuant to his answer of 26 June, Official Report, column 574, how many convictions for perjury since 1979 resulted in (a) a custodial sentence, (b) a fine and (c) a conditional discharge; [6426]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 26 June, Official Report, column 574, how many convictions for perjury since 1979 arose from court proceedings in an action for defamation. [6427]

Mr. Michael: The table below shows a breakdown of the number of convictions for perjury offences by type of sentence given.

Court data held centrally by the Home Office do not separately identify actions for defamation.

Voting (Residential Homes)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to introduce voting points in residential homes, sheltered housing and hospitals at elections on a trial basis. [6455]

Mr. George Howarth: We have no plans to do so at this time.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Royal Fine Art Commission

Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will define the roles of (a) the Royal Fine Art Commission and (b) English Heritage in commenting on major proposals for new buildings in historically and environmentally sensitive areas. [6634]

Mr. Fisher: Local planning authorities were advised in a DoE letter of 17 March 1997 to seek the advice of the Royal Fine Art Commission (RFAC) on development schemes of national or major regional importance. The Royal Fine Art Commission is able to examine about 140 such schemes each year, not all of which have an impact on historic environments. The Royal Fine Art Commission will examine the design quality of a building itself and its impact on its surroundings. Its recommendations have no statutory force but there is a good record of their being adopted.

English Heritage is the Government's statutory adviser on the management of the historic environment in England. Local Authorities are advised in PPG 15 to consult English Heritage on all planning applications for developments affecting the setting of grade I and II* buildings and of grade II buildings in Greater London, and on major applications for development in conservation areas. In order to give advice about the impact of new buildings on their historic environment, English Heritage must take a view on both the quality and the appropriateness of proposed extensions or new buildings. English Heritage saw over 5,000 such applications in 1995–96.

There is some degree of overlap between these functions and the staff of the Royal Fine Art Commission and English Heritage liaise to avoid duplication.

Seaside Piers

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage for which seaside piers national lottery funding has been applied for; which have been successful; and what amounts have been allocated to those successful applicants. [7182]

Mr. Banks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 4 July 1997, Official Report, column 292.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7209]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The oldest document, dated 1895/6, comprises loose correspondence and drawings relating to the erection of a memorial in Windsor Castle. These were recently found in my Department and will shortly be transferred to the Public Record Office or the Royal Archivist. There is only one other registered record of papers over 30 years old retained by this Department.

Sporting Events (Television Coverage)

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the absence of terrestrial television coverage of the British Lions tour of South Africa; and if this represents a breakdown of the unbundling agreement between the satellite and terrestrial television broadcasters. [7153]

Mr. Fisher: I understand that the South African Rugby Union own the television rights to the British Lions tour of South Africa. Consequently those rights were not covered by the voluntary code of conduct for the broadcasting of sports events which a number of UK sports organisations have adopted. However, rights to show highlights of the matches were acquired by S4C. The review of listed events will need to assess the effectiveness of the voluntary arrangements for unbundling the various types of broadcasting rights as a substitute form of access to some events.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6033]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 4 July 1997, Official Report, columns 293-94.

English Heritage Grants

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to discuss with English Heritage ways in which greater regional input can be achieved in respect of its grant-making procedures. [6575]

Mr. Banks: None at present. Though English Heritage's Conservation staff are based in London, they are organised in regional teams, spend much time in those regions, and liaise closely with local authorities and Government Offices for the Regions.

Dance and Drama Students

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of the response by local authorities to the new arrangements for the funding of dance and drama students; and if he will make a statement. [6927]

Mr. Fisher: On 6 March the Arts Council of England announced the terms of its interim scheme for assisting the funding of professional training for dance and drama students. The scheme is administered by the Arts Council which is monitoring the level of response by local authorities to the new arrangements. As at 2 July the Council had received responses from 44 local education authorities, of which 30 had confirmed that they intended to participate in the scheme or had agreed to provide awards, and a further four were still considering their position.

Royal Parks

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals he has for additional public funding for the Royal Parks. [5888]

Mr. Tom Clarke: My Department is reviewing all its expenditure within the overall spending plans set by the previous Government for 1997–98 and 1998–99. Spending on the Royal Parks will be considered alongside the Department's other responsibilities.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7134]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The Department of National Heritage is currently auditing all computer systems that it uses for Year 2000 compliance. This audit should be complete by the autumn and it is intended to complete any remedial work by the summer of 1998. The project is being managed by the Department's Information Systems Branch with one member of staff co-ordinating the work which is being carried out by Sema Group, the Department's outsourced service provider. The Department is making use of the recent guidance from CCTA "Tackling the Year 2000". The cost of resolving the problem will be known by the autumn. The project is currently on schedule.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Debt

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will take steps to cancel the debt of poor countries. [7233]

Clare Short: The Government is pushing for full and rapid implementation of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative. We believe that debt relief should accompany a wider commitment by debtors to create the conditions necessary for sustainable economic growth and lasting poverty reduction. The Government has already forgiven over £1.2 billion of old loans to many of the poorest countries. We will be prepared to consider cancelling aid loans to other low-income countries where necessary, on a case-by-case basis.

United Nations Industrial Development Organisation

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment her Department has made of the role of the UN Industrial Development Organisation. [7188]

Clare Short: During the last four years UNIDO has undertaken a comprehensive and impressive reform programme. Fundamental change has been made, substantial staff reductions achieved and new management procedures introduced. I greatly welcome these changes and it is because of these changes that I announced on 3 July our decision to remain a member of UNIDO.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what are her future plans in respect of support for the United Nations Industrial Development Organisation. [7189]

Clare Short: We will continue to support the process of narrowing and refocusing UNIDO'S activities into high priority areas which meet the changing needs of developing countries.

TREASURY

Unemployment

Ms Walley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many persons aged under 25 years in the constituency of Stoke-on-Trent, North and nationally (a) are registered unemployed and (b) have never been employed. [6863]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Tim Holt to Ms Joan Walley, dated 8 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has asked me to reply as Director of the Office for National Statistics to your recent question on how many persons under 25 are (a) registered unemployed and (b) have never been employed nationally and in the parliamentary constituency of Stoke-on-Trent North.

The measure of unemployment, derived from the quarterly Labour Force Survey (LFS), is defined on a consistent and internationally recognised basis set out by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) and counts as unemployed people who are: a) without a paid job; b) available to start work within the next two weeks and c) have either looked for work in the last four weeks or are waiting to start a job already obtained. However, largely because it is a sample survey, information is not available from the LFS in as much geographical detail as from the claimant count measure described below.

ONS also publishes the monthly claimant count, which is based on the administrative system and includes all people claiming unemployment-related benefits (i.e. Jobseekers Allowance, Income Support or National Insurance credits) at Employment Service offices on the day of the monthly count, who on that day had signed on as unemployed and available to do any suitable work. Essentially, all people who attend an Employment Service office to sign are counted, irrespective of whether they are actually receiving benefit.

Data for the number of registered unemployed can only be derived from the claimant count. However, the claimant count does not have information on the numbers of people who have never been employed.

The data you have requested for Stoke-on-Trent North can only be derived from the claimant count, as the LFS does not give details down to constituency level.

The winter 1996/7 LFS shows that there were 1,592,000 people aged 16–24 who have never been employed (other than in casual or holiday jobs) in the United Kingdom. To put this information into context the attached table shows the total breakdown by educational and economic status. For example, you can see that, from the total of 1,592,000 nearly 83 per cent (1,322,000) were economically inactive, that is they had not looked for work in the past four weeks or were neither available to start work in the next two weeks nor waiting to start a job they had already obtained. 1,186,000 of the total were full-time school, college or university students.

The claimant count in April 1997 showed that there were 575 claimants under 25 in the Stoke-on-Trent North parliamentary constituency. This compared to a figure of 440,028 claimants under 25 in the United Kingdom in April 1997.

Drugs

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list by department the total amount allocated to tackling problems relating to drugs for the five most recent years for which figures are available. [4798]

Mr. Darling: The Treasury does not yet hold this data centrally and information on total Government and individual departments' expenditure on tackling drug misuse is not recorded on an annual basis. The Government recognises the importance of greater clarity of information relating to drugs related issues and will therefore be appointing a "drug czar" to co-ordinate action against drugs. The drug czar will be working to the President of the Council as Chair of the Cabinet's co-ordinating committee on drug misuse. One of his or her first tasks will be to review urgently the existing drugs strategy, and put forward proposals for tackling the problem with renewed vigour. This review will include evaluating current Government expenditure.

The most recently available estimates we currently hold were published in the White Paper "Tackling Drugs Together" in May 1995. They show that at least £526 million of expenditure in 1993–94 could be directly attributable to drug programmes and activities across the UK.

Bereavement Allowance

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's policy on equalising the treatment of sexes in respect of the bereavement allowance; and if he will make a statement. [6320]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 July 1997]: There are no plans to extend the widows bereavement allowance to widowers.

Insurance Premium Tax

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the rates of insurance premium tax charged on travel insurance sold by (a) travel agents and (b) other outlets. [7184]

Dawn Primarolo: As is usual with new tax measures, the impact of the higher rate of insurance premium tax of 17.5 per cent., which from 1 April 1997 has been applied to certain specified insurance sales, including travel insurance sold by travel agents and tour operators, will be kept under review.

Hotels (VAT)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will establish a review of the imposition of VAT charged on tourist rates for hotel accommodation. [7257]

Dawn Primarolo: VAT is payable under EC legislation on hotel accommodation, and this is accurately reflected in United Kingdom law.

Double Taxation

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual loss of revenue to the British Exchequer from the requirement under the UK/Danish Double Taxation Convention and Protocol that retired Danish citizens permanently resident in the United Kingdom pay only Danish tax upon their Danish pensions. [6449]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The Double Taxation Convention and Protocol permit Denmark to charge its normal tax regime on pensions paid to persons in the UK who formerly lived in Denmark. The UK will allow credit for that Danish tax when assessing the pension to UK tax. The cost to the UK exchequer will be negligible, because of the small number of pensioners who will be affected.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the Commission of the European Union that double taxation conventions between member states be harmonised. [6447]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 July 1997]: I have received no such representations.

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the harmonising of double taxation conventions between the United Kingdom and other EU nations. [6448]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 July 1997]: Bilateral double taxation agreements are a matter for the member states concerned. There is no process of harmonisation of double taxation conventions between the United Kingdom and other EU nations under way, nor is there a need for any such harmonisation.

Public Expenditure

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total amount of public expenditure per head of population in each of the constituent nations of the United Kingdom in the most recent year for which figures are available. [6655]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The latest breakdown of expenditure per head of population for countries of the UK was published in table 7.1 of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 1997–98, Cm 3601.

Budget Leaks

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the Ministers who (a) gave interviews to (b) made statements to and (c) answered questions from journalists or representatives of the Financial Times in the period of 48 hours before the Budget Statement. [7265]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 8 July 1997]: No Treasury Minister gave interviews to, made statements to or answered questions from journalists or representatives of the Financial Times in the 48 hours before the Budget Statement.

Windfall Tax

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Inland Revenue staff will be required to administer and collect the windfall tax. [7387]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The additional staffing requirement will be negligible.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the latest list of major signed PFI/Public Private Partnerships deals; and if he will update that list at regular intervals. [7903]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: I will arrange for the list to be placed in the Library, and for it to be updated every six months.

Personal Pensions (Misselling)

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made towards providing redress for the victims of misselling of personal pensions. [7904]

Mrs. Liddell: In my earlier reply to my hon. Friend the Member for East Ham (Mr. Timms) on 24 June, Official Report, columns 454–55 I undertook to publish information each month about the cases handled by the 24 firms which have most cases to review. These are the firms for which the regulators (the Securities and Investments Board and the Personal Investment Authority) have published targets for completion of case reviews. Below is a table containing the information provided to me by these firms about progress with their casework to end June.

The figures in the table, which are those submitted by the 24 firms themselves, provide a benchmark from which future progress can be measured.

The volume of cases cleared is extremely disappointing. All the firms in the table have a great deal more work to do. Some appear hardly to have begun.

It is now imperative that all firms—not just these 24—which have sold personal pensions should make serious efforts to improve their performance in completing their caseloads. This is not only in the interests of their customers but also of their own reputations with the general public. The regulators will continue to monitor the firms' performance against the targets they have been set.

I will decide once I have seen some further figures to measure progress what further action may be called for.

A = Cases identified as requiring review. B = Of A, cases where investor was informed that information gained during assessment excluded cases for review.
C = Number of assessments completed.
D = Cases where redress has been offered.
E = Cases where redress has been accepted. This is a subset of assessments completed.
F = Cases where redress has been accepted as a percentage of cases identified for review.
Some further cases will have been completed without redress being due.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Small Claims Procedure

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will review the operation of the small claims procedure in respect of the requirement for cases to be heard in the place of residence of the person against whom a claim is being pursued. [6579]

Mr. Hoon: There is, in fact, no such requirement. In the county courts, liquidated claims are transferred to the defendant's home court on receipt of a defence. However, the plaintiff may apply for the claim to be returned to a court more convenient to him or her. The Lord Chancellor's Department is undertaking consultation on judicial case management, of which choice of venue is one element. Comments are sought by 26 September 1997.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Benefits

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the costs and benefits of extending the relaxation of the 16 hour rule to all adults unemployed for (a) more than six months, (b) more than 12 months and (c) more than 18 months. [7111]

Mr. Alan Howarth: No such assessment has been made. The New Deal announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 3 July will provide a range of quality options for unemployed people to help them make the transition back into work, with a strong emphasis on the importance of education and training.

The New Deal for people aged 25 and over, who have been unemployed for two years or more will include opportunities for full-time study while receiving JSA.

In addition, and subject to Parliamentary approval, we will be expanding Workskill Pilots to four more areas of Britain so that those unemployed for six months or more will be able to take up education or training and remain on Jobseeker's Allowance. The pilots will provide us with valuable information on the extent to which allowing people to study on benefit affects their chances of gaining and remaining in employment.

Primary Teaching

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to ensure that primary school teachers are fully able to teach technology to five to eight-year-olds; and if he will make a statement. [7055]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government has announced that proceeds from the National Lottery will be made available to support in-service training for teachers in information technology. On 26 June I announced new requirements for initial teacher training, which will require all newly qualified teachers to demonstrate a knowledge and understanding of information technology, and asked the Teacher Training Agency to develop a curriculum for information technology in initial teacher training.

Deal Primary School

Mr. Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he has been able to determine the public notice issued by the Governors of the Deal Parochial CE Voluntary Aided Primary School (Kent) on 20 June 1996 to reduce the standard number from 40 to 27. [7262]

Ms Estelle Morris: The application is still under consideration, but a decision is expected shortly.

Class Sizes

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by local education authority the (a) numbers and (b) percentages of pupils according to the January 1997 Form 7 for (i) key stage 1 and (ii) key stage 2 in classes of (1) 31 or more, (2) 35 or more and (3) 40 or more; and if he will list the corresponding figures for 1996. [6559]

Mr. Byers. The available information is shown in a table, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children throughout England and Wales with severe learning disabilities have been excluded from schools on (a) a temporary and (b) a permanent basis (i) at present and (ii) in the last 12 months. [6621]

Ms Estelle Morris: In 1994–95 some 1,800 pupils with statements of special educational need were permanently excluded from schools in England. Details of exclusions in 1995–96 are currently being collated and will be available later in the year. Information of fixed period exclusions is not collected centrally.

Data on exclusions from schools in Wales are matters for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each person advising or assisting his Department who has (a) membership of and (b) involvement in (i) the European Round Table of industrialists, (ii) the European Centre for Infrastructure Studies, (iii) the Competitiveness Advisory Group, (iv) Transatlantic Business Dialogue, (v) the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe, (vi) Union of Industrial and Employers Confederations of Europe, (vii) Europa Bio and (viii) the World Business Council for Sustainable Development. [5310]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Membership of the European Round Table of Industrialists, the Competitiveness Advisory Group and the Transatlantic Business Dialogue is on a personal basis. No advisers to this Department have reported membership of these bodies.

Membership of the European Centre for Infrastructure Studies, the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe, the Union of Industrial and Employers' Confederations of Europe, Europa Bio and the World Business Council for Sustainable Development is on a corporate basis. Representatives from companies and organisations involved with these groups may advise Departments from time to time.

Bermuda

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement of British relations with Bermuda. [6937]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Britain has an excellent relationship with Bermuda—its oldest and now its most populous Dependent Territory. Although Bermuda is self-governing, Britain has retained responsibility for its external affairs and security. Independence, which was rejected in a referendum held in 1995, remains a matter for the Bermudian people to decide.

Plutonium

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response the Government have made to the international plutonium disposition initiatives undertaken by President Clinton's administration; and if he will make a statement. [7317]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: International expert discussions on the disposal of surplus US and Russian military plutonium have concluded that the two most promising options are the conversion of plutonium into MOX (mixed oxide of both plutonium and uranium) fuel and its subsequent consumption in nuclear power reactors, and the immobilisation of plutonium through vitrification. The UK was involved in these discussions and supports these conclusions. Future discussions are likely to focus on the most effective means of implementing these disposal options in the US and Russia. The UK will continue to participate fully in international consideration of this issue.

EU Social Agreement

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which words (a) are in the Social Agreement attached to Protocol 14 of the treaty on Economic Union signed at Maastricht and have not been transposed into the social chapter of the draft Treaty of Amsterdam and (b) have been added to draft articles in that draft treaty and do not appear in the current Social Agreement; and what are the reasons for the changes specified in (a) and (b) above. [7378]

Mr. Doug Henderson: A copy of the draft Treaty of Amsterdam has been placed in the libraries of the House. The Social provisions, which incorporate the Social Agreement, are on pages 59–66 (Articles 117–120). The changes that have been made to the Social Agreement text are intended to: incorporate elements of the existing Articles 117–120 TEC; replace co-operation with co-decision as the mechanism for consulting the European Parliament when legislation is adopted by QMV; allow the adoption by QMV of measures to encourage co-operation between Member States on combatting social exclusion; slightly broaden the provisions on the equality of men and women.

Russia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the outstanding issues delaying the setting up of a permanent joint council between NATO and Russia; and when the inaugural meeting will take place. [7258]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The NATO/Russia Founding Act which was signed on 27 May provided for the establishment of a NATO/Russia Joint Permanent Council as a forum for members of the Alliance and Russia to discuss matters of European security. The Act provides for the Council to meet within four months of signature. We expect the inaugural meeting to take place before the end of September.

NATO

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the consequence for the excluded European countries of US and British decisions to support a limited enlargement of NATO. [7259]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Decisions on the membership of NATO are taken collectively by The Alliance. NATO's door will remain open to the applicant countries not invited to begin accession negotiations in Madrid. We are determined that NATO enlargement will not mean a reduction in security for others or the creation of new dividing lines in Europe.

NATO's 27 Partner countries will also benefit from the new opportunities for cooperation provided by the Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council and the enhanced Partnership for Peace Programme. These encourage Partner countries to draw closer to the Alliance.

Arms Exports

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress he has made with his review of the mechanics and detailed criteria used in the issuing of licences for exports of conventional arms; and when he expects to reach conclusions on individual countries. [7240]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The review of detailed criteria used in considering licence applications to export conventional arms, which was announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 22 May, Official Report, column 135, is being taken forward as a matter of urgency. The new criteria will be made available to the House when the review is complete. The aim of the review is not to focus on individual countries but to draw up criteria applicable to all destinations.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7139]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Whilst the Year 2000 Computer problem effect on computer systems generally may be significant, within the Cabinet Office and its Agencies, it is likely to be minimal. It has therefore not been necessary to establish a project team to deal with the issue.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Aid

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she has taken to review the existing criteria in determining eligibility for European Union regional aid; and if he will make a statement. [5376]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 26 June 1997]: The regulations setting out the criteria for eligibility for the European Structural and Cohesion Funds are due to be re-examined before the end of 1999 by the Council of Ministers, acting on proposals from the Commission. The Commission are likely to give an initial indication of their ideas for the future of the Funds in a communication in July, with detailed proposals for amending the regulations coming at a later date. The Government is looking for a package which is affordable, simple and more efficient, and fair.

Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in which departments the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe has private offices; how many officials are employed in those private offices; and if she will list his special advisers. [5998]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 30 June 1997]: The Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe, Lord Simon, has one private office which serves him in both the DTI and in the Treasury. The private office consists of a Private Secretary, and Assistant Private Secretary, a Diary Secretary, a Correspondence Manager and a Personal Secretary. Lord Simon has office facilities in both departments. He has no political advisers.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what part her Department will play in the Strategic Defence Review, with particular reference to representing the interests of manufacturing industry. [5630]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 1 July 1997]: Several departments and other interested bodies will be involved in the Government's Strategic Defence Review. My Department will participate fully in aspects where the competitiveness of UK industry, and its contribution to the wider economy, are being considered.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will take steps to ensure that Euratom does nto impede the work of the IAEA in carrying out its verification inspections. [6402]

Mrs. Roche: My Department will continue to work closely with the IAEA and Euratom in order that nuclear safeguards inspections are undertaken in an effective and cost efficient manner which enables each inspectorate to draw its own independent conclusions.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the minimum quantity of fissile material that would be required for a criticality in an underground nuclear waste repository. [6403]

Mr. Battle: The minimum quantity of fissile material required for criticality in an underground nuclear repository would be the same as that in any other nuclear facility. This quantity is dependent on a number of factors including the geometry of the fissile material, the presence of moderating materials which reduce the velocity of neutrons, the presence of reflecting materials retaining neutrons within the system, and the presence of materials such as uranium-238, iron, and calcium, which absorb neutrons.

Limits and conditions of authorisation for any repository being developed in the UK would be based on "Guidance on Requirements for Authorisation" which has been issued by the Environment Agencies. This states that a developer would "need to demonstrate that the possibility of a local accumulation of fissile material such as to produce a neutron chain reaction is not a significant concern." This would be achieved by e.g. the establishment of fissile material limits on waste packages, constraints on packaging, provision of backfill and the maintenance of a high pH to suppress the solubility of plutonium.

Car Boot Sales

Mr. Kidney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received in support of the licensing of car boot sales. [6444]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My Department has received one representation about car boot sales since the election. ITSA and LACOTS have also made me aware of concerns about certain practices. I am of course willing to consider any further representations that are made. Car boot sales can raise a number of different issues, some of which would come within the responsibility of other Government Departments.

Climate Change

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what reports she has received from the British Antarctic Survey on the rate of temperature rises and the effect on ice melting. [6345]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 3 July 1997]: All of the climatically sensitive ice shelves on the Antarctic Peninsula have suffered major disintegration, which is significant and unique within recorded history and results from the fact that summer temperatures now regularly exceed 0°C. Given a continued warming, the ice shelves are predicted to disintegrate further in the coming decades.

The British Antarctic Survey has continuous records which begin in the 1940s and show a warming of 0.5°C per decade in the Antarctic Peninsula. This is interpreted to be a regional effect, and has not been observed to the same extent elsewhere in Antarctica. It will be some time before it can be established whether these observed trends are part of a wider manifestation of global warming.

European Patent System

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals she has to consult industrialists over the proposals contained in the EU green paper on a European patent system based on a single patent application; and if she will make a statement. [7048]

Mr. Battle: The European Commission's Green Paper is in the form of a questionnaire seeking views from European industry, including that of the United Kingdom, on a wide range of issues concerning the development of the patent system in Europe. We are taking steps to ensure that UK industry is aware of the Commission's initiative so that it can make its views known to the Commission and at the same time advise the Department of its position. The Green Paper will be discussed by the Standing Advisory Committee on Industrial Property which was established so that not only industrialists, representing large to small industries, but also consumer representatives and legal and professional bodies can advise the Government on all aspects of industrial property policy.

Newspaper Publishing

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of a recent report, a copy of which has been sent to her, in respect of the imposition of margins by newspaper publishers and the reduction in the amount of space available for minority titles; and if she will make a statement. [6945]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has recently received copies of reports from the Committee for Diversity and Pluralism and the National Federation of Retail Newsagents. All those with concerns about the distribution of magazines and newspapers must make them known to the Director General of Fair Trading. It is for the Director General to consider whether action under the competition legislation is appropriate.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many set off cases she has approved in the liquidation of BCCI; what is the total amount outstanding in respect of such cases; and what representations she has received on this subject. [7051]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The application of the rules as regards mutual credits and set off, set out in Rule 4.90 of The Insolvency Rules 1986 is mandatory in any liquidation and is not subject to any form of official approval. Once an account has been taken of what is due to and from the liquidating company as a result of mutual dealings the process of set off is automatic.

Solar Energy

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans the Government have to support the solar energy industry in the United Kingdom. [7345]

Mr. Battle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Stoke on Trent, North (Ms Walley) on 10 June 1997, Official Report, column 417.

Public Records

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by her Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7207]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The earliest known file, selected for the Public Record Office, but still retained in the Department under the provisions of the Public Records Act 1958 for the retention of records on grounds of continuing sensitivity, is dated 1952, title: Atomic Energy Board: minutes and papers.

The general arrangements for retaining public records are set out in Chapter 9 of the White Paper Open Government of July 1993 (Cm 2290).

Post Office

Mr. Colvin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the Government intends to publish its plans for the future of the Post Office; and if she will make a statement. [7651]

Mr. Ian McCartney: It is too early yet to say when the review of the Post Office will be completed or when we will be in a position to announce our future plans.

EU Internal Market Council

Mr. Mike Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what decisions were taken at the EU Ministerial Council on the Internal Market on 21 May; and what matters were voted upon. [7983]

Mrs. Beckett: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe represented the UK at the Internal Market Council in Brussels on 21 May.

The Council reached political agreement by qualified majority voting on proposals on the free movement of lawyers and in vitro diagnostic medical devices. A Common Position was agreed by qualified majority on a proposal on foodstuffs treated with ionising radiation.

The Council discussed the Single Market Action Plan, Legislative Simplification, Reform of Customs Transit Regime, European Company Statute, Electronic Commerce, the Green Paper on Public Procurement and, in Any Other Business, attacks on Spanish produce in France, anti-dumping duties on cotton fabric and medical device safety.

EU Telecommunications Council

Mr. Heppell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Telecommunications Council on 27 June. [7982]

Mrs. Roche: I represented the UK at the Telecommunications Council held in Luxembourg on 27 June.

The Council agreed a resolution on the further development of a policy for numbering in the European Community. Following European Commission presentations, the Council adopted conclusions on three Commission communications: on the further development of mobile and wireless communications in Europe (universal mobile telecommunications systems); a Commission action plan for satellite communications; and on implementation by Member States of Community legislation in the telecommunications sector. There were also lunchtime presentations by the Commission on its communication on the World Radiocommunications Conference 1997, and on its interim report on Member States' initiatives concerning illegal and harmful content on the internet.

Trade Associations

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she intends to allocate ministerial responsibility for trade associations. [2870]

Mrs. Beckett: The Minister for science, energy and industry, John Battle MP, is responsible for policy towards trade associations.

DEFENCE

Defence Postal and Courier Services

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the Defence Review will cover the Defence Postal and Courier Services of the Royal Logistic Corps; how many commissioned ranks there are in the Defence Postal and Courier Services; what is the number in each rank; and what are the corresponding figures for an average line regiment; [6768]

(2) how many disciplinary cases within the Defence Postal and Courier Services have been initiated by military line management against civilian Defence couriers in each of the past 10 years; [6769]

(3) for what reason civilian staff in the Defence Postal and Courier Services have been replaced by serving military personnel; and how many posts which fell vacant in the past two years were filled by serving military personnel instead of civilian (service retired) personnel. [6767]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Postal and Courier Services. I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from T. McG Brown to Mr. Bob Russell, dated 9 July 1997:

I have been asked to reply to your three Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Defence regarding staffing and other matters related to the Defence Postal and Courier Service. As Chief Executive of the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency (DPCSA) I am responsible for the management within my Agency and I am therefore providing the details you have requested.

Taking each question in turn:

1. "For what reason civilian staff in the Defence Postal and Courier Service have been replaced by serving military personnel; and how many posts which fell vacant in the past two years were filled by serving military personnel instead of civilian (service retired) personnel?"

Overall, no civilian posts falling vacant in the last two years have been filled with military personnel. It is in fact the case that a number of military posts have been filled by civilians.

2. "How many disciplinary cases within the Defence Postal and Courier Service have been initiated by military line management against civilian Defence Couriers in each of the past 10 years?"

The management of the Defence Courier Service, which is a part of DPCSA, rests with military personnel. As all disciplinary cases are initiated by line management all cases against civilian Defence Couriers have therefore been initiated by military personnel. There have been 25 cases initiated in the past 10 years. The breakdown by year, from available records, is as follows:

1987: 2

1990: 1

1991: 3

1995: 9

1996: 5

1997: 5

Records are readily available only for those presently employed or who have recently left.

3. "Will the Defence Review cover the Defence Postal and Courier Service of the Royal Logistic Corps; how many commissioned ranks there are in the Defence Postal and Courier Service; what is the number of each rank; and what are the corresponding figures for an average line regiment?"

The Review will be wide ranging and all aspects of defence will be considered in this process. In addition to issues of policy and strategy, the Review will look at how we should get the best possible output from defence resources and the contribution of our defence effort to the wider economy. As part of the MOD, the Defence Postal and Courier Service will no doubt be included in this review.

The number of commissioned ranks within the DPCSA, an average Infantry Line Regiment (which is not easy to define) and a typical RLC regiment is as follows:

	DPCSA	Average ILR	General service regiment RLC
Lt. Colonel	5	1	1
Major	9	9	8
Captain	7	11	21
Lieutenant/2nd Lt.	0	14	10
	24	35	40

I hope this information is helpful.

Defence Industry

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals the Government have to improve co-operation with the United Kingdom defence industry. [6463]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 16 June to the hon. Member for Barrow and Furness (Mr. Hutton) (Official Report, column 78).

Challenger Tanks

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Challenger 2 tanks have been (a) ordered from the manufacturer, (b) delivered and (c) accepted for service. [6667]

Mr. Spellar: Three hundred and eighty-six Challenger 2 Main Battle Tanks have been ordered from Vickers plc. To date 36 have been delivered and these have been accepted for service.

Low Flying

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the number of low-flying sorties over Scotland. [6984]

Mr. Spellar: As reported to the House on 20 March (Official Report, column 860), Scotland has received less military low flying than most other parts of the United Kingdom. The geographic distribution of this activity is reviewed annually.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many operational low-flying sorties were authorised in (a) the Highlands, (b) Argyll and Bute and (c) Scotland in each of the last 12 months. [6985]

Mr. Spellar: Operational low flying is only permitted in three specially designated Tactical Training Areas (TTAs) located in the Borders (which covers southern Scotland and part of northern England and is called Low Flying Area 20T), northern Scotland (called Low Flying Area 14T) and central Wales (Low Flying Area 7T). Argyll and Bute is not located within a TTA and does not see operational low flying. The numbers of operational low flying movements, which equate to sorties in this context, authorised in each of the last 12 months are detailed below. Figures for the movements flown within the part of LFA 20T in Scotland are not recorded separately.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures he is taking to reduce the need for low-flying sorties through the use of flight simulators. [6986]

Mr. Spellar: Flight simulators are extensively used in training but at present they can only complement, not replace, actual experience of low flying. We do, however, continue to monitor closely all developments in simulator technology.

Eurofighter

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to meet German Ministers to discuss the Eurofighter project. [6684]

Mr. Spellar: I can assure the hon. Member that very close and frequent contact at ministerial level has been and will be maintained with German Defence Ministers on Eurofighter. The Government is determined to secure a four nation commitment to move to the production phase of the Eurofighter programme as soon as possible.

Ghurka Soldiers

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the pensions of Ghurka soldiers who have served in the British Army. [7348]

Dr. Reid: Pensions paid to ex-British Army Gurkhas are regularly reviewed. Each year both new and existing pensions are increased in line with the rate of inflation in Nepal. This review, which is currently being undertaken, is effective from April each year. In addition to this, and in accordance with our responsibilities under the Tri-Partite Agreement 1947 which links the pensions paid to ex-British Army Gurkhas to pensions paid in the Indian Army, pensions paid to our Gurkhas are reviewed in the light of any changes that the Indian Army may make to ensure that equity of treatment is maintained. The results of the latest 10 year review undertaken by the Indian Government are expected to be announced later this year.

SCOTLAND

NHS Trust Executives

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many executive positions there are in each Scottish health trust; and what the salary is for each post. [2670]

Mr. Galbraith [holding answer 11 June 1997]: Information relating to current salary of Executive Directors at Board level is shown in the table below, starting with the Chief Executive. Full information is already given in many Trust Annual Reports.

Monktonhall Colliery Site

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Coal Authority will transfer the cleared Monktonhall Colliery Site to the ownership of Midlothian Council. [6774]

Mr. Wilson: This is a matter for the Coal Authority. Under Section 3(4) of the Coal Industry Act 1994, it is the duty of the Authority to secure the best terms reasonably available for disposal of the site if a buyer cannot be found to keep the mine operational.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Russell Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will initiate (a) a further detailed survey of Beaufort's Dyke and the surrounding area and (b) a public inquiry into the matters raised by the survey. [6643]

Mr. Dewar: The levels of radioactivity throughout the Irish Sea are routinely monitored by the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science an executive agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The most recent report, which is entitled "Radioactivity in Food and the Environment 1995", is available in the Library of the House of Commons. The monitoring undertaken since the early 1960s has not detected any measurable effect on radioactivity levels in the Beaufort's Dyke area, which remain well within internationally agreed safety levels. At the moment I see no need to initiate any additional surveys or a public inquiry.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will commission the Aberdeen Marine Research Laboratory to conduct an investigation into radiation levels in the Beaufort's Dyke area. [6830]

Mr. Dewar: The Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science, an executive agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, carried out comprehensive monitoring for levels of radioactivity throughout the Irish Sea. Such monitoring takes place on a regular basis and will continue. Involvement of the Marine Laboratory Aberdeen would therefore not be justified.

Highlands and Islands Convention

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the current members of the Convention of the Highlands and Islands, together with their qualification for membership. [6826]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 4 July 1997]: Membership comprises all MPs and MEPs whose constituencies lie wholly or partially within the area of operation of Highlands and Islands Enterprise together with nominees of the local authorities and public sector economic development agencies operating in the Highlands and Islands. A list of the current members of the Convention of the Highlands and Islands is set out below:

A80

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the upgrading of the existing A80 as the preferred line of route for the M80; and when he expects work to commence. [7183]

Mr. Chisholm: Consideration of how the upgrading of the A80 might be taken forward will be included in the Strategic Review of the Trunk Road Programme, which I have announced. This will include the options available for alternative routes.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Leyton Relief Road

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if it is his policy that the proposed Leyton Relief Road southern section will be funded by public money. [7349]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The southern junction of the Leyton Relief Road with Ruckholt Road (locally known as the southern section) will be funded by the landowners: London and Continental Railways.

Drivers (Alcohol Levels)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will consider introducing legislation reducing the permissible alcohol levels for drivers. [6623]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are looking at a number of options for improving road safety. The legal limit for drinking and driving is one of the issues we shall be considering.

Heathrow Airport (Terminal 5)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions pursuant to his answer of 30 June, Official Report, column 57 (1) what assessment he has made of the consistency between that answer and the evidence given on 27 February by Mr. Tom Dockerty at the Terminal 5 inquiry on behalf of the Department of Transport regarding the M25 and its relationship with the proposed spur road and Terminal 5; [6617]

(2) what assessment he has made of the transcript of the evidence given by Mr. Tom Dockerty on behalf of the Department of Transport at the Terminal 5 inquiry on 27 February, including the replies to questions by the Inspector. [6618]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend will assess the evidence in the light of the recommendations made by the Inspector when he submits his report on the Terminal 5 inquiry.

Zinc Air Batteries

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent evaluation has been made by his Department of the suitability of vehicles powered by zinc air batteries for commercial fleet usage. [7358]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department, in collaboration with other bodies, is evaluating in a three-year field trial, the role that vehicles powered by alternative fuels such as electricity might play in minimising transport emissions. The results will be available later this year.

In general terms, factors such as battery technology and infrastructure/recharging systems have meant that electric vehicles have not as yet gained customer acceptance due to higher price, inferior performance and range. It is encouraging that industry is responding to this through the development of systems and products such as zinc air batteries which appear to offer improvements in these areas.

Rivers Wye and Lugg

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the estimated cost to the Environment Agency of assuming navigation authority status on the Rivers Wye and Lugg; what has been the cost to date of their assessment of these proposals; and if he will make a statement. [6362]

Angela Eagle: The costs incurred to date by the Environment Agency and its predecessor body, the National Rivers Authority, in promoting an Order to become navigation authority on the Rivers Wye and Lugg are estimated at £400,000 since 1995 when the proposals were first put forward. The total cost of assessing these proposals will not be known until the public inquiry into the application for an Order has closed, but the inspector's fees to date are approximately £19,000. The additional costs of managing the navigation function are unlikely to be significant, but the Agency expects to appoint one additional full time member of staff who would have significant navigation responsibilities.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions on what statutory basis the Environment Agency is seeking to assume navigation authority status on the Rivers Wye and Lugg; and if he will make a statement. [6363]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency is seeking to become navigation authority on the Rivers Wye and Lugg by means of an Order under Section 3 of the Transport and Works Act 1992. A public inquiry into the Agency's application is currently taking place. The decision on the application will be a joint one by the Secretaries of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions and for Wales.

Oil and Gas Exploration

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will transfer to the Environment Agency responsibility for the regulation and licensing of oil and gas exploration and extraction. [7097]

Angela Eagle: The statutory responsibility for the general regulation and licensing of oil and gas exploration and extraction lies with my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. The Government has no proposals for change.

Dry Stone Walls

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what consultations he has had with (a) the Peak District and (b) the North Yorkshire National Parks about the destruction of dry stone walls; [7100]

(2) what proposals he has to protect dry stone walls in areas of outstanding national beauty or conservation; and if he will make a statement. [7101]

Angela Eagle: Dry stone walls are an important landscape feature. The main threats to their conservation stem from damage and neglect. To help address this, the Government provides grant assistance for the restoration of dry stone walls under the Countryside Stewardship and Environmentally Sensitive Areas schemes operated by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. Local authorities and National Parks also have powers to operate local environmental grant schemes which may include assistance for the management of dry stone walls and local planning authorities have planning powers to control the demolition of dry stone walls in conservation areas. There are a number of such schemes operated by the Peak District and North Yorkshire 'National Parks, and information on these is provided to the Secretary of State every year in the context of his discussions of the National Park Authorities' Corporate Financial Plans.

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of dry stone walls which have been removed from the upland countryside over the past (a) five and (b) 10 years. [7099]

Angela Eagle: The latest information on national losses of dry stone walls are derived from a survey of the countryside in 1990 (Countryside Survey 1990: Main Report, DOE, London, 1993). The survey estimated that the total length of dry stone walls in the uplands of Great Britain in 1990 was about 103,000 km and that the overall length of dry stone walls had decreased by about 14 per cent. since 1984. However, due to the sample design used in the survey, there were substantial uncertainties attached to these estimates. The Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions is currently planning a repeat of this survey in 1998.

Education Standard Spending Assessment

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment Transport and the Regions if he will review provision for the additional educational needs index within the education standard spending assessment; and if he will make a statement. [6934]

Mr. Raynsford: I am committed to a fair distribution of government grant to local authorities through Standard Spending Assessments (SSAs). As part of our programme of work on SSAs, we intend to review the allowance for additional educational needs within the Education SSA. The review is likely to continue into 1998.

Hybrid Wolves

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what representations he has received from the RSPCA on the interpretation of the legislation governing hybrid wolves; and what plans he has to meet the RSPCA to discuss these; [6989]

(2) what plans he has to issue new guidelines to local authorities about the interpretation of the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976, with particular reference to hybrid wolves. [6990]

Angela Eagle: My hon. Friend the Minister of State has received a letter from the Director General of the RSPCA expressing the Society's concerns about the legislation covering the keeping of wolf hybrids. Officials from my Department will be meeting the Society shortly to discuss this issue.

Under the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976, a licence is required to keep a wolf or a wolf hybrid where one parent is (or both parents are) of a kind so specified in the schedule to the Act. I appreciate that there are detailed arguments about the make up and characteristics of wolf hybrids and there may be different interpretations of the meaning of "hybrid" and "parent" in the context of the Act. A number of local authorities have sought to clarify the position in the Courts. I am aware that a recent Court ruling has confirmed that a licence is required to keep a wolf hybrid under the Act.

I have no immediate plans to issue new guidance on the Act and the keeping of wolf hybrids, but I will wish to consider whether further guidance is required in the light of detailed consideration of the Court ruling and the RSPCA meeting.

Council Houses (Solar Power)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will ensure that new council house building schemes incorporate (a) higher insulation standards than have been required up to now and (b) consideration of the applicability of solar power. [7096]

Mr. Raynsford: Council house building, in common with private sector house building, has to comply with the Building Regulations which include requirements for the conservation of fuel and power. Strengthened requirements were introduced only two years ago, from July 1995, since when there has been little in the way of council house building. The strengthened requirements should ensure that the annual energy consumption for space and hot water in average new dwellings is 25 per cent. to 35 per cent. lower than before. The requirements represent the minimum compliance level for new housing in England and Wales and my Department is keeping them under review. Local authorities are of course free to apply higher standards in any of their schemes. They and other house builders are encouraged to do so through my Department's Energy Efficiency Best Practice Programme. Local authorities are required by Planning Policy Guidance Note 22 to have regard to renewable energy—including solar energy. Detailed technical guidance is freely available from the DTI and my own Department on how to make the most of this energy source.

Water Regulations (Health and Safety)

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the advantages of including health and safety requirements in those water regulations currently subject to public consultation. [6935]

Angela Eagle: I understand that the Water Regulations Advisory Committee considered the health and safety of the occupants of premises when formulating its proposals for water regulations. Any representations about the scope and substance of these requirements should be made as a response to the consultation document which the Committee issued on 19 June.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7147]

Mr. Prescott: The DETR and its Executive Agencies are undertaking systems audits and holding discussions with product and service suppliers to analyse the problem in detail in order to produce costed plans by October 1997. Details of costs, schedules and resources will be determined when these are produced, but the target is to complete essential changes by December 1998. Approximately, the equivalent effort of 14 staff is employed on the projects at this stage, excluding work in contracted service suppliers.

Directors and Agency Chief Executives are responsible for addressing the problem in their businesses and in most cases each has appointed a project manager. Government Offices for the Regions are responsible for the Year 2000 compliance of their local applications. GO Central Unit has corporate responsibility for these offices and is setting up a formal project to manage all Year 2000 issues.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to co-ordinate Local Agenda 21 plans for sustainable development; and if he will make a statement. [6599]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 7 July 1997]: In his recent speech to the UN General Assembly Special Session on the environment my Right hon. Friend the Prime Minister paid tribute to the good record of United Kingdom local authorities on Local Agenda 21 and said that he wanted all authorities to adopt Local Agenda 21 strategies by the year 2000.

The Government will be working closely with the local authority associations and the Local Government Management Board to encourage local authorities to meet this target. In doing so, we will take care not to take on a "co-ordinating" role because the strength of Local Agenda 21 derives from the ability of local authorities, community groups, businesses and others to work co-operatively for sustainable development in the light of local and regional needs.

Empty Council Properties

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the 10 local authorities with the highest number of empty residential council properties. [7225]

Mr. Raynsford: The latest available data are for 1 April 1996 when the 10 local authorities in England with the highest numbers of reported management vacants, i.e. dwellings available for letting immediately or after minor repairs, were:

	Management vacants
	Number	As a percentage of total stock
Sheffield	1,505	2.12
Birmingham	1,500	1.52
Islington	1,484	4.01
Leeds	1,434	1.86
Manchester	1,348	1.67
Hackney	1,098	2.85
Liverpool	1,095	2.28
Sandwell	998	2.30
Lambeth	885	2.07
Southwark	817	1.53

Local Authorities (Debt)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the 10 local authorities with the highest amount of debt. [7224]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is as follows. It should be noted that authorities with high levels of debt are generally those which have undertaken capital investment and that longer term borrowing to finance capital expenditure is regulated by Government through the issue of credit approvals.

Authority	Outstanding debt at 31 March 1996 £ million
Birmingham	1,218
Manchester	1,206
Lambeth	929
Islington	868
Liverpool	802
Sheffield	802
Southwark	788
Hackney	762
Leeds	697
Tower Hamlets	658

Note:

The outstanding debt figures include both long term and short term borrowing. Local authorities provide data on outstanding amounts for temporary debt and investments in the Department's regular monthly and quarterly borrowing and lending inquiries, but information on longer term debt is collected as flows i.e. transactions during the relevant period. The Department conducted special surveys in 1991, 1993 and 1994 seeking information on the amount of outstanding longer term debt and investment. The figure for 1996 has been calculated from information supplied to the Department in the 1994 survey and the regular monthly and quarterly surveys, and may include estimated values.

Carers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps his Department is taking to increase awareness of the discount for council tax bills that is available to carers. [6458]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department will be writing shortly to all local authorities to remind them of the need to present information in council tax bills on discount disregards, including the carers disregard, as clearly as possible.

Capital Receipts Initiative

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reasons organisations of disabled people or representing disabled people have not been sent without request the consultation paper on proposals for implementing the Government's Capital Receipts Initiative. [6979]

Mr. Raynsford: The arrangements for issuing the consultation paper setting out proposals for a Capital Receipts Initiative in England focused on local authorities in England and a limited number of other organisations with direct interest in the proposals. However, we have already sent an additional 400 copies of the paper to other organisations or individuals on request.

Sports Grounds (Wheelchair Spaces)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment his Department has made of the (a) advantages and (b) disadvantages of modifying Part M of the Building Regulations so as to provide for a smaller proportion of wheelchair spaces in large sports grounds. [7081]

Mr. Raynsford: The Approved Document for Part M provides guidance on reasonable provision of wheelchair spaces in sports stadia including an acceptance that it would be reasonable to provide a smaller proportion of wheelchair spaces in large stadia. The Department has made no assessment of either the advantages or the disadvantages of modifying Part M of the Building Regulations so as to provide for a smaller proportion of wheelchair spaces in large sports grounds.

Postal Votes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what his Department plans to spend on advertising the availability of postal votes before the proposed referendum on a strategic authority for London. [7085]

Mr. Raynsford: No decisions have yet been taken on detailed arrangements in respect of the proposed referendum on a Greater London Authority.

HEALTH

GP Fundholders

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the differences in the method of operation between GP fundholders and locality commissioning; and when commissioning will be introduced. [6746]

Mr. Milburn: General practitioner fundholders are allocated a budget with which to purchase for their patients those health services included in the fundholding List of Goods and Services. A range of approaches to commissioning have already begun to develop locally. Details vary, but the usual pattern is that GP practices, (sometimes including fundholders) collaborate with their health authority to plan the local health strategy, determine priorities, and in some cases also commission services for all patients to ensure that all have equal access to high quality health care.

I announced on 26 June a programme to evaluate 20 GP Commissioning Group pilots over 2 years from April 1998, to complement an assessment of the range of existing activity.

NHS Appointments (Members of Parliament)

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the Labour and Liberal Democrat hon. Members of the current House of Commons and of the House of Lords who have served as members of (a) NHS trusts and (b) health authorities in the past seven years. [6651]

Mr. Milburn: The Department does not hold all the information on trust and health authority board posts held by current members of the House prior to this Parliament.

Current Members of the House of Commons, of whatever party, are disqualified from serving as non-executive members of National Health Service trusts or health authorities. Ten Members of the House of Lords are currently also non-executive members of trust and health authority boards. Of these, one takes the Labour Whip, seven take the Conservative Whip and two sit on the cross benches.

NHS Management

Mr. Norman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general and senior managers currently work in the NHS hospital and community health services; and how many of these have direct contact with patients. [6941]

Mr. Milburn: There were 20,590 whole-time equivalent senior managers and other administrative managers employed by the National Health Service Hospital and Community Health Service at 30 September 1996. Information on how many of these have direct contact with patients is not centrally available. The Government is committed to maximising the proportion of NHS resources devoted to patient care by removing the bureaucratic processes of the internal market and reducing management costs in health authorities and trusts.

NHS Funding Formula

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will reconsider the recommendations made in 1994 by University of York health economists who were commissioned to produce new funding formulae for health care; [7228]

(2) what assessment he has made of the equity of the operation of the market forces factor within the funding formula; [7227]

(3) what change there has been in the needs weighting element of health authority allocations for 1997–98; [7231]

(4) when he expects the review of the national distribution of central Government resources to primary and secondary health care to be completed; [7226]

(5) what assessment his Department has made of the advantages of increasing the weighting for needs in health authority funding allocations. [7230]

Mr. Milburn: In 1997–98 an interim needs weighting for Community Health Services was introduced and applied to 11 per cent. of expenditure (leaving 14 per cent. not weighted for need).

It is the Government's intention to look at how resources are distributed across both secondary and primary care to ensure that these fully reflect local population needs and operate as fairly as possible. Details will be announced in due course.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the (a) actual and (b) percentage change in the health resources allocated to each region of England in the financial year following the introduction of the market forces factor in the funding formula. [7229]

Mr. Milburn: Allocations are made direct to health authorities and not to regions. Changes to the formula directly affect target allocations rather than actual allocations. The attached table shows the changes to health authority target allocations which resulted from the implementation of the latest market forces factor:

Vitamin, B_6

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to change the recommended daily intake of vitamin B_6 for women; and if he will make a statement. [7243]

Ms Jowell: The Reference Nutrient Intake is one of several Dietary Reference Values. These estimates of nutritional requirements of healthy people are made by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy. They were last reviewed in 1991 and there are no plans for a further review. The current Reference Nutrient Intake of around 1.5mg/day for vitamin B_6 is enough to meet the nutritional needs of virtually all healthy adults. The British National Formulary says that there is little sound evidence for claims that supplements of vitamin B_6 can alleviate the premenstrual syndrome.

The Government is acting on the advice of the Food Advisory Committee and Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment to control the sales of vitamin B_6 products because of the risk of adverse effects following consumption of supplements at doses of 50mg or above of vitamin B_6. The levels of vitamin B_6 in dietary supplements will be limited to a daily dose of 10mg. Products containing higher daily doses will continue to be available as licensed medicinal products, or under the supervision of a pharmacist or doctor.

Eye Tests

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if eligibility for free NHS eye tests entitles an individual to a free domiciliary visit; and what assessment his Department has made of the availability of domiciliary eye test visits. [6456]

Mr. Milburn: Patients eligible for National Health Service sight tests, who are unable to attend an optical practice, are eligible for a free domiciliary visit. There were 222,500 domiciliary visits paid for by health authorities in 1995–96.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons statistics on the total number of eye tests performed in Great Britain were not collected between 1989 and 1993. [6459]

Mr. Milburn: The Department had never collected any information on numbers of private sight tests and, in 1989, it was Government policy to restrict the amount of information required from the private sector. In 1993 agreement was reached with the optical profession on the introduction of an annual survey of a sample of opticians' workloads, which provides the information on private sight tests currently used to make estimates of the total number of sight tests.

Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what costs relating to (a) legal fees, (b) financial advisers and consultants and (c) other consultants have been incurred by the Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS Trust in respect of (i) PFI proposals to extend hospital facilities at Basildon Hospital and (ii) the proposed development of land at Orsett Hospital; [6656]

(2) with which (a) financial institutions, (b) developers and (c) chartered surveyors the Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS Trust has had discussions with in respect of developing land at Orsett Hospital; [6657]

(3) with which (a) financial institutions and (b) developers or their agents the Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS Trust has had discussions in respect of proposals relating to a PFI concerning Basildon Hospital. [6659]

Mr. Milburn: Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals National Health Service Trust has not held discussions with any financial institutions or developers relating to proposals for a Private Finance Initiative project for acute rationalisation at Basildon Hospital and Orsett Hospital. They have held discussions with the Chartered Surveyors Drivers Jonas concerning Orsett Hospital development. As a consequence, no expenditure has been incurred in respect of financial advisers; £14,900 has been incurred in respect of legal advisers; and £29,963 has been incurred in respect of chartered surveyors.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 1 July, Official Report, column 146, if he will list those consultants on (a) whole-time contracts and (b) maximum part-time contracts doing (i) eight and (ii) 10 sessions a week in the Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS Trust. [7086]

Mr. Milburn: The contracts of employment between the trust and individual consultants are matters for the parties concerned.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 1 July, Official Report, column 146, which members serve on the remuneration committee of the Basildon and Thurrock General Hospitals NHS Trust Board. [7083]

Mr. Milburn: The remuneration committee is made up of all the current non-executive board members, including the trust chairman. They are:

Mr. Ian Macpherson (Chairman)

Mr. Derek Harman

Mrs. Joan Sladden

Mr. Peter Wallis

Mr. Melvyn Lambert

Ms Fiona East

Community Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the community care budget. [6974]

Mr. Boateng: The level of resources for community care in 1997–98 was announced in February 1997 as part of the local government settlement. That issue is now closed. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister will announce the government's plans for local government expenditure in 1998–99, including provision for personal social services, in the autumn.

Drug Costs

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average cost to public funds of a course of drugs administered in hospital. [7272]

Mr. Milburn: Although it is possible to be specific for costs of some courses of drugs in hospital, the wide range of different drug treatments make it impossible to specify an average cost. However, the total cost of all drugs purchased by hospitals was £874,353 million in 1995–96, the latest year for which the data are available.

Clinical Effectiveness

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what definition his Department uses of "clinically effective". [7430]

Ms Jowell: The Departments's 1996 publication Promoting Clinical Effectiveness defined clinical effectiveness as the extent to which specific clinical interventions, when deployed in the field for a particular patient of population, do what they are intended to do—that is, maintain and improve health and secure the greatest possible health gain from the available resources. This definition is still used.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Transport

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce exemptions for Highlands and Islands farmers from the Welfare of Animals During Transport Order 1997; and if he will make a statement. [7242]

Mr. Chisholm: I have been asked to reply.

The Welfare of Animals (Transport) Order 1997 enables my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland to grant exemption from most of its provisions, to any person transporting animals within the Highlands and Islands Enterprise area. Applications for such exemption will each be considered on the basis of all the relevant circumstances and shall be granted only where the welfare of the animals would not be put at risk as a result.

Rabies

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on keeping the United Kingdom rabies free; [6879]

(2) if he will review the use of (a) rabies vaccinations and (b) microchipping as alternatives to quarantine. [6880]

Mr. Rooker: The current arrangements for keeping the United Kingdom rabies free are contained in the Rabies (Importation of Dogs, Cats and Other Mammals) Order 1974 (as amended). This requires certain rabies susceptible mammals to be quarantined for six months on entry to the UK. In the light of our commitment to do so, we are reviewing whether alternatives to quarantine might give equal or better protection against rabies. The review is taking account of the possibilities of vaccination and microchipping of animals.

Quarantine

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he proposes to improve welfare conditions in quarantine. [6881]

Mr. Morley: We are currently inspecting those quarantine kennels which have signed up to a Voluntary Code of Practice for the Welfare of Dogs and Cats in Quarantine Premises to ensure they can meet all its requirements. We would like to put this Code on a statutory basis when parliamentary time can be found.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the year 2000 computer problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7130]

Mr. Morley: The Ministry's Director of IT is co-ordinating a programme of millennium preparations consisting of a number of parallel projects covering different aspects of the Department's computer systems and associated technical infrastructure. Another project has been established, within that management framework, to address "non-IT" equipment containing embedded microprocessor chip technology.

The current rate of progress is consistent with the targets set by the Central IT Unit (CITU) of the Cabinet Office and preparations for all business critical systems are expected to be completed by 31 December 1998, subject, where appropriate, to a final check of end-of-year financial systems by April 1999.

Headcount details are difficult to estimate precisely because the work is so diverse and involves contributions (some full-time but often involving smaller proportions of individuals' time) from staff in many parts of MAFF and its Executive Agencies, as well as external IT consultants and contractors. The overall cost of millenium preparations, however, is currently estimated to be about £7 million. Prioritised and costed plans will be provided to CITU by October 1997.

Live Poultry Sales

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outlaw the sale of live poultry door-to-door for slaughter and consumption. [7124]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 July 1997]: It would be difficult to outlaw this trade without affecting other, legitimate trade. Meat produced in accordance with special religious and cultural requirements is available from regulated outlets, so there is no need for customers to turn to this door-to-door trade. We shall be taking steps to spread awareness of this.

Cattle Cull (Orkney)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions in June 1997 the Intervention Board made arrangements for blood from cattle culled in Orkney to be transported to the Scottish mainland for disposal; what was the volume of blood involved in each case and what was the capacity of the vehicle used to transport the blood; and what was the total cost to public funds. [6976]

Mr. Rooker: Commission Regulation 716/96, under which the Over Thirty Month Scheme (OTMS), operates, requires the remains of cattle slaughtered under the scheme to be incinerated, or rendered and destroyed. This requirement covers the whole of the animal, other than the hide, and the Intervention Board have instigated a system of collecting OTMS blood from scheme abattoirs by means of tanker round. The blood is taken to one of two rendering plants in Great Britain for processing, prior to destruction.

Orkney Islands Council (OIC) have a contract with the intervention board to slaughter OTMS cattle offered to the scheme on Orkney, and to destroy the remains, including the blood, in a newly developed gasification facility. Because of difficulties with the chill facilities at the OIC plant in the first few weeks of June, the Intervention Board arranged for the remains of the OTMS animals slaughtered at the plant, including the blood, to be delivered to the renderer at Kintore in Aberdeenshire for processing.

A total of 4.2 tonnes of OTMS blood was collected from the Orkney cull abattoir on three separate occasions in June by the special tanker used to collect OTMS blood from the other participating abattoirs in scotland. This vehicle has a capacity of around 22 tonnes. All the invoices for this work have not yet been received, but it is estimated that the collection service, including ferry crossing, and rendering will cost in the order of £5,000.

I am pleased to say that the difficulties with the chills have now been resolved, that the integrated slaughter and gasification process in Orkney is now fully operational again and that the blood from the OTMS animals slaughtered on Orkney is now processed on the island.

Wild Plant Seeds

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that there are adequate supplies of domestic wild plant seed to restore meadows under the Countryside Stewardship Scheme. [7359]

Mr. Morley: Domestic supplies of wild plant seed are obtained from harvesting existing species rich grassland meadows. The Countryside Stewardship scheme expects wild plant seed of local provenance to be used in the re-creation of species rich grassland or the restoration of hay meadows thereby generating a market for the material.

Weald Meadows Initiative

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the minimum amount of grant, and over what period, for which the Weald Meadows Initiative may apply to employ a specialist adviser on the replanting of degraded grass; [7360]

(2) if he will list (a) the grants applied for and (b) the grants given and their amount on behalf of the Weald Meadows Initiative. [7362]

Mr. Morley: This Department has no grant scheme that could offer support for the employment of such an adviser. Last October, shortly before the closure in England of the Marketing Development Scheme, the Weald Meadows Initiative sought a grant for a products co-ordinator and a marketing campaign for its wildflower products. This application did not fit well with the scheme criteria, and with strong competition for the limited funds available, it was not successful.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the grants for which application can be made to replant degraded grassland in the area covered by the Weald Meadows Initiative. [7361]

Mr. Morley: The re-creation, restoration and maintenance of unimproved grassland can be grant aided through the Countryside Stewardship scheme. Payments of £85 a hectare per year are available for managing lowland hay meadows together with a supplement of £30 a hectare per year for fields of less than 3 ha in size. Many of the remaining valuable grassland meadows are small in size and the additional payment is in recognition of the difficulties of managing small fields. A one year supplementary payment is also available (normally for one year but occasionally up to five years) for additional measures to assist with initial grassland management work such as scrub control or spreading hay from species rich grassland to introduce flowers and grasses.

WALES

Bowel Cancer

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which health authorities currently allow use of CPT-II in the treatment of bowel cancer. [5594]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Health Authorities in Wales do not currently allow the routine use of this drug in the treatment of bowel cancer, as they are awaiting further evaluation of its clinical effectiveness.

Social Housing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to assist unitary authorities in Wales to increase their provision of social housing in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6100]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I have asked Tai Cymru to increase the provision of social housing this year. We will also assist unitary authorities through our capital receipts initiative. This will enable them to increase the provision of social housing which can include partnership arrangements with private and registered social landlords; reduce the number of local authority void properties and make more efficient use of the housing stock. I have issued a consultation paper which encourages Welsh housing authorities to determine the most effective and cost efficient ways of increasing the provision of social housing and improving existing housing stock.

Pyrethroid Sheep Dips

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the effect of pyrethroid sheep dips on aquatic life in rivers and streams in Wales. [6387]

Mr. Wyn Griffiths: On 13 June the Environment Agency issued a press release about the impact on the aquatic environment, including in Wales, of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips which describes the action that the Agency is taking. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his Department plans to spend on advertising the availability of postal votes before the proposed referendum on Welsh devolution. [7084]

Mr. Ron Davies: I plan to include information on absent voting in the leaflet setting out the Government's proposals which is to be distributed to all households in Wales. These costs will therefore be subsumed within the overall costs of producing the leaflet.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Sinn Fein

8. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the preconditions under which Sinn Fein will be admitted to peace talks with the Government. [5897]

Mr. Murphy: There is no need for a further statement on this matter. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made it clear in his statement of 25 June what Sinn Fein need to do to enter talks, and he published at that time the aide memoire which had been sent to Sinn Fein following their two meetings with officials in May.

Political Process

9. Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions she has had with representatives of the Irish Government to plan the agenda for negotiations on the three strands of the political process. [5898]

Mr. Murphy: The agenda for talks is a matter for the participants. I hope that, in the light of previous discussions in the talks, there will be early agreement on the agenda following a resolution of the decommissioning issue.

Peace Process

11. Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress made in the peace process since 25 June. [5901]

17. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the peace process in Northern Ireland. [5907]

19. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the Northern Ireland peace process. [5909]

Dr. Mowlam: I refer to the oral answer that I gave earlier to my hon. Friends the Members for Luton, South (Ms Moran), Stevenage (Barbara Follett) and North-west Norfolk (Dr. Turner).

12. Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on support from the United States Administration for the peace process in Northern Ireland. [5902]

28. Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on support from the United States Administration for the peace process in Northern Ireland. [5918]

Dr. Mowlam: The United States administration share this Government's wish to see an end to all violence in Northern Ireland and to reach a lasting political settlement which has the broad support of people on both sides of the community. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minster and the President continue to discuss developments in Northern Ireland on a regular basis. We are grateful for the close personal interest that the President has taken, and for the valuable work of Senator George Mitchell in the Talks process.

Marches and Parades

13. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what additional steps she proposes to take to minimise the risk of disorder during the marching season. [5903]

Dr. Mowlam: I, my Ministers and senior officials have been involved in intensive discussions with representatives of the Orange Order, residents' groups and others to resolve the problem of contentious parades. These efforts will continue.

Considerable disorder has followed the Orange Order parade along the Garvaghy Road on Sunday. While recognising the anger felt in the Nationalist community, there can be no justification for the scenes of violence witnessed over the past few days.

21. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the cost of police and military security at marches and parades. [5911]

Dr. Mowlam: The information requested could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

24. Ms Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on parades and marches in Northern Ireland. [5914]

29. Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on parades and marches in Northern Ireland. [5919]

Dr. Mowlam: The Government will continue to seek a resolution to the difficult problems of contentious marches in Northern Ireland. We remain firmly committed to the principle of local accommodation and dialogue as offering the best solution.

An agreed settlement could not be reached at Drumcree. The Chief Constable took his decision in the interests of public safety and the Government fully supports him. Decisions on future parades will be made using the criteria set down by the relevant legislation.

The Government is committed to bringing forward new legislation on parades later this year which will provide the basis for a new approach to this issue.

Electricity Interconnector

14. Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress towards the establishment of the electricity interconnector. [5904]

22. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made towards the construction of the electricity interconnector. [5912]

Mr. Ingram: Progress depends on the outcome of planning applications in Northern Ireland and Scotland. Northern Ireland Electricity plc submitted a second planning application for the Northern Ireland element of the project on 4 April 1997. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland hopes to announce his decision on the application for the Scotland element shortly.

Unemployment

15. Mrs. Organ: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps she is taking to combat long-term and youth employment in Northern Ireland. [5905]

Mr. Worthington: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Dartford, (Dr. Stoate).

27. Mr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current number of long-term unemployed claimants; and what was the number in (a) 1991, (b) 1993 and (c) 1995. [5917]

Mr. Worthington: The latest available information relates to April 1997 and at that time there were 34,807 long-term unemployed in Northern Ireland. For April of each of the other years requested the numbers were (a) 50,006 in 1991, (b) 56,818 in 1993 and (c) 49,885 in 1995.

Employment Equality Review

18. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the employment equality review being conducted by the Northern Ireland Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights. [5908]

Dr. Mowlam: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Greenock and Inverclyde (Mr. Godman) on Thursday 26 June, Official Report, column 623.

Economy (Expansion)

23. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress to expand the Northern Ireland economy. [5913]

Mr. Ingram: We are working with business, the community and the unions to assist companies become more competitive, to attract tourists and high calibre inward investment, and to develop and harness the talents of everyone with a contribution to make to economic development in Northern Ireland. Our task will be immeasurably easier in a peaceful, stable environment.

Belfast Port

25. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on future proposals for the port of Belfast. [5915]

Mr. Murphy: Government has not yet had the opportunity to consider the possible options for the future of the port of Belfast. I understand that the Belfast Harbour Commissioners have engaged consultants to advise them on available options and have formed a special committee to consider proposals under the Ports (NI) Order 1994. The Commissioners have not yet submitted any proposals to Government.

Cross-border Security

26. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions she has had with the new Irish Government regarding cross-border security. [5916]

Mr. Ingram: Maintaining the existing high levels of cross-border security co-operation with the new Irish Government will remain as a high priority. We shall continue to keep this under regular review with the Irish.

Irish Language Teaching

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what new proposals he has to increase Irish language. [5906]

Mr. Worthington: Steps have been taken to ensure an adequate supply of suitably trained teachers of Irish Medium schools. St. Mary's College of Education now offers a four-year Bed (Primary) course for those wishing to teach in the Irish Medium Sector. Pending the output of teachers from this new course my Department has approved five additional one-year Post Graduate Certificate in Education intake places each year.

Outside the irish medium sector, where Irish is compulsory, it is a matter for individual schools to decide whether to teach Irish, and I have no plans to change that.

Punishment Beatings

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the incidence of punishment beatings over the last six months. [5910]

Mr. Ingram: Between 1 January 1997 and 29 June 1997 the number of causalities resulting from paramilitary assaults as recorded by the RUC were:

	Loyalists	Republican
Beatings	40	48
Shootings	32	4
Total	72	52

Clearly this type of brutal vigilante activity is barbaric and indefensible. The RUC remains the only legitimate law enforcement agency in Northern Ireland.

Hospitals (Complaints)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on the number of complaints concerning inadequate care in hospitals in the last year. [6175]

Mr. Worthington: The information is not centrally available in the form requested. Information on complaints to HSS Trusts in Northern Ireland is collected by Programme of Care. Of the total number of 3,188 complaints to HSS in Northern Ireland in the year 1996–97, 1,508 were in the Acute Programme of Care and 224 were in the Maternity and Child Health Programme of Care, the two Programmes of Care which are most strongly associated with hospital based rather than community-based care.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Means Testing

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to widen the scope of means testing for benefits. [4599]

Mr. Field: Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We will develop a system that supports work, savings and honesty. Our first steps are to focus on helping people off welfare and into work and to review the central areas of insecurity for older people.

Benefit Take-up

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps are planned to increase the uptake of benefits by individuals entitled to them who are not currently claiming. [4866]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We are concerned that up to one million pensioners currently miss out on the Income Support to which they are entitled. We want to get help to Britain's poorest pensioners and are commissioning research into the reasons why pensioners fail to claim the Income Support which is their due.

Child Maintenance Bonus

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many parents returning to work have been paid a child maintenance bonus since its introduction, and what was the average amount paid. [5441]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is as follows:

Child maintenance bonus statistics[1]

	All claimants[2]
Number of bonus payments made from 7 April 1997 to 30 May 1997[3]	79
Total amount of bonus payments made from 7 April 1997 to 30 May 1997[4]	£1,538
Estimated average bonus payment[5]	£19.50

Notes:

[1] The Child Maintenance Bonus allows people to accrue a bonus over a period of time therefore it is difficult to judge its effectiveness on 2 months data.

[2] Provisional data based on claims held on the Income Support Computer System (ISCS). Information on clerically processed claims or Jobseeker Allowance (JSA) claimants is not yet available.

[3] Claims authorised for payment recorded on ISCS.

[4] Total amount authorised for payment recorded on ISCS.

[5] Based on total amount authorised for payment recorded on ISCS.

Back to Work Bonus

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people returning to work have been paid a Back to Work Bonus since the scheme's introduction; and what was the average amount of the payment. [5440]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We will be evaluating the effectiveness of the Back to Work Bonus scheme in contributing to our welfare to work objectives, which are to provide work incentives and to reduce poverty and welfare dependency.

The information requested is in the table.

Back to Work Bonus statistics[1]

	All claimants
Number of bonus payments made from October 1996 to May 1997[2]	15,000
Total amount of bonus payments made[3] from October 1996 to May 1997	£2,487,450
Estimated average bonus payment[4]	£172.11
Claimants with an accrued bonus at the end of May 1997[5]	152,000

Notes:

1. These figures are subject to revision.

[1] Provisional data based on claims held on the Income Support Computer System (ISCS) and the Jobseeker's Allowance Payment System (JSAPS). No clerically processed claims included. Numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand.

[2] Claims authorised for payment recorded on JSAPS and ISCS. They include 500 payments made to claimants on reaching an age threshold (age 60 in Income Support, and age 65 for men and age 60 for women in Jobseeker's Allowance).

[3] Total amount authorised for payment recorded on ISCS and JSAPS.

[4] Based on total amount authorised for payment recorded on ISCS and JSAPS.

[5] Live claims on ISCS and JSAPS with a bonus accrual plus claims which have ended with a bonus accrual but no bonus payment has been made (claimants who return to benefit within 12 weeks and have not claimed a bonus retain the amount accrued during the previous claim).

Child Support Agency

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Child Support Agency will be given instructions to act on cases brought to its attention voluntarily by parents with care who are not in receipt of income support, family credit or disability working allowance. [5666]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Government believes that all children are entitled to the support of both parents. Children should only be supported by the taxpayer when their parents are unable to do so.

The Child Support Agency already takes on cases where the parent with care is not receiving a relevant benefit and there is no court order, or written maintenance agreement which was made before 5 April 1993 for regular payments of child maintenance. Where there is such an order or agreement the parent with care can continue to use the courts to enforce or vary the amounts of maintenance.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to review housing benefit; and if she will make a statement. [6291]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Housing Benefit is one of the major components of the Social Security system. We will be examining it, and links with housing support generally with the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, as part of the comprehensive review of Government expenditure.

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to increase the 25p per week augmentation of pensions given when pensioners reach the age of 80 years. [6626]

Mr. Denham: We will examine means of delivering more automatic help to the poorest pensioners, many of whom are over 80. We will shortly be announcing details of a review of the central areas of insecurity for older people. We have no plans to increase the 25p weekly age addition in 1997.

Pensioners' Christmas Bonus

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to increase the pensioners' £10 Christmas bonus. [6627]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Colchester (Mr. Russell) on 1 July, Official Report, column 136.

Widows

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will give priority to the circumstances of widows in her general review of social security; and if she will make a statement. [6988]

Mr. Denham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh West (Mr. Gorrie) on 23 June, Official Report, column 413.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the benefits integrity programme in respect of disability living allowance will commence; how many benefit recipients will be subject to face to face interviews; when the programme will be completed; and what is the estimated cost of the programme. [6435]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. Research indicates that we may be paying £0.5 billion a year to people who are not entitled to receive it.

This is why we have set up the Benefit Integrity Project to focus on those people who are properly entitled to receive it. However, we regard it as essential that disabled people are treated with respect and in an unthreatening way. The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 8 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Benefit Integrity Programme.

The Benefit Integrity Project formally commenced on 28 April 1997, the first postal enquiries were issued on 6 May 1997. Starting from the end of July a two year programme will commence to visit some 150,000 Disability Living Allowance recipients at home.

The project is due to be completed by 31 March 1999, the findings of which will help to inform decisions about future integrity work. It is estimated that the cost of the project will be £10m a year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what means increases in the duty on petrol are incorporated into the mobility component of disability living allowance. [6622]

Mr. Denham: Disability Living Allowance is increased every year, by law, by the rate of inflation as measured by the movement in the Retail Prices Index (PRI). The basket of goods used to calculate the RPI includes the cost of petrol as well as other motoring costs.

Carers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the advantages of sending to each recipient of invalid care allowance information on the discount for council tax bills that is available to carers; and what estimate she has made of the cost of sending such a mailing. [6457]

Mr. Denham: We will streamline services to provide better, simpler more efficient services to clients.

There would be little advantage in writing to all recipients of Invalid Care Allowance because, although there may be some overlap, the criteria for entitlement to that benefit and to the council tax discount for carers differ significantly.

The cost of such an exercise is likely to be in the region of £80,000–£105,000.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if foster carers can claim (a) incapacity benefit, (b) invalid care allowance and (c) other non-means tested benefits and in what circumstances. [6968]

Mr. Denham: We will streamline services to provide better, simpler more efficient services to clients.

Foster carers can claim Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance, Invalid Care Allowance, Disability Living Allowance, Attendance Allowance and other non means tested benefits provided they meet the normal eligibility criteria for these benefits.

Social Fund

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average award made under the social fund in each of the last five years. [6977]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Average Payments for 1991–92 to 1995–96 are in the table. Figures for 1996–97 will be published in the Department of Social Security's Annual Report on the Social Fund later this month.

	Regulated scheme		Discretionary fund
Year	Maternity payments	Funeral payments	Cold weather payments	Community care grants[1]	Budgeting loans[1]	Crisis loans[1]
1991–92	101	706	6	281	217	62
1992–93	101	789	6	314	226	65
1993–94	101	873	6	322	239	64
1994–95	101	924	7	340	255	65
1995–96	101	791	8.50	351	271	66

[1] Does not include awards on review.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to (a) revise the criteria for awarding and (b) increase the amount of moneys available to the social fund. [6969]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Social Fund is made up of two parts; the regulated and discretionary schemes. The regulated scheme is based on rules of entitlement and payments are not cash limited. Discretionary Social Fund payments are made from a national cash limited budget which is allocated to individual Benefits Agency District Offices.

The overall size of the gross discretionary Social Fund budget, and its allocation, is decided annually. It depends principally on the size of loan recoveries expected during the course of each coming year plus planned new provision voted for each year.

Details of the annual gross budget for the discretionary Social Fund and the principles used for its allocation are placed in the Library in March each year. The allocations principles will be reviewed as part of each annual budget setting exercise.

Income Support

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will withdraw new instructions issued to social security staff in August 1995 that require them when assessing eligibility for income support in circumstances where the claimant was alleging abuse or significant harm, to probe into the nature and extent of that abuse. [6970]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We want a system that supports work, savings and honesty; and provides better, simpler and more efficient services to claimants. The guidance on claims from young people in the circumstances described ensures handling by staff trained in these sensitive matters. The Government has no plans to withdraw the guidance which provides an opportunity to highlight cases of abuse and to take necessary action.

As Income Support for the unemployed has been replaced by income based Jobseeker's Allowance any further consideration of this matter will be for the Secretary of State for Education and Employment.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to simplify the process for claiming income support by people who go into residential care for temporary periods. [6973]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We will streamline services to provide better, simpler, more efficient services to clients. We fully recognise the importance that temporary placements have in providing respite care for carers and for those needing care. We are examining the current process for dealing with benefit claims to make procedures as simple and straightforward as possible and this will include the particular difficulties which can arise for people who need to claim Income Support for temporary periods in residential care.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she will be publishing details of the proposals set out in the Budget statement relating to disabled people on incapacity benefit. [7082]

Mr. Denham: The Government strongly believes that for people of working age work is the best form of welfare. We are committed to giving opportunities to sick and disabled people who have some capacity for work to do so. Some £200 million from the windfall levy has been set aside to fund this important programme of work and other measures.

Over the coming months we will be looking to see what changes are necessary to ensure that the particular needs of people who have disabilities or who have lost contact with the labour market because of long-term sickness are provided for. We will make more detailed announcements in due course.

Community Care Grants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the number of applications for community care grants, the number of applications which were turned down and the number of refusals as a percentage of the total number of applications in each of the last three financial years. [6971]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The Social Fund provides lump sum payments to help with exceptional or intermittent expenses. Applications to the discretionary Social Fund are made to the discretionary fund as a whole; not to parts of it. This means that an applicant may receive either a Community Care Grant or a loan depending on the social fund officer's assessment of the nature, extent and urgency of the need and the circumstances of the individual.

In 1995–96 for example, over half a million applicants who were refused a grant were instead awarded a loan. Similarly over 41,000 applications for budgeting loans were instead awarded a community care grant. Of those applicants who specifically request a Community Care Grant, the vast majority do not satisfy the appropriate criteria to demonstrate a grant is needed to promote care in the community. Over the three years to 1995–96, over 70 per cent. of the 1.25 million applications received annually for community care grants were refused on these grounds.

Further details can be found in the Department of Social Security's Annual Reports on the Social Fund which are available in the Library. The report for 1996–97 will be published later this month.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will publish her Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6035]

Mr. Field [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Prime Minister on 4 July, Official Report, columns 293–94.

Written Answers to Questions

HOME DEPARTMENT

Elections (Communication Costs)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances communication costs for a blind, visually impaired or deaf person standing in (a) European, (b) parliamentary and (c) local authority elections may be exempted from the limits from the candidate's personal election expenses. [7087]

Mr. George Howarth: There is no statutory provision to exempt such costs at parliamentary or European parliamentary elections. The limit of £600 on a candidate's personal election expenses does not apply at local elections.

Immigration

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice is given to chief immigration officers on the handling of representations from hon. Members on deportation cases; and when this was last amended. [7767]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Guidelines for hon. Members making representations in immigration cases have been published by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate and were most recently updated in April 1994. Officials who handle immigration cases raised by hon. Members are trained and have instructions about these guidelines. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and I are currently considering issuing new guidance and will be holding a seminar for hon. Members who would like a more detailed explanation of immigration work.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 14 May, ref. 7870/97. [7456]

Mr. Michael: I replied to the hon. Member's letter on 7 July.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions were given to Leeds/Bradford Airport immigration officers following the telephone conversation with his private office by the hon. Member for Bradford, North on 4 July concerning Zaffer Iqbal, Home Office ref. J270919. [7768]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I am given to understand that, following the hon. Member's telephone call to my private office on 4 July, it was agreed that he would discuss Mr. Iqbal's immigration status with Mr. Iqbal himself and members of his family on 5 July and make further contact with my private office if he wished to make representations about the case. No agreement was given to defer arrangements for Mr. Iqbal's removal to Pakistan as an illegal entrant, which had been arranged for 16.40 hours on Sunday, 6 July.

My private office advised the Immigration Service at Leeds/Bradford airport of the hon. Member's interest in this case and that there might be further contact as a result.

In the event, I understand that the hon. Member did not make further contact with my private office and that his office did not make contact with the Immigration Service at Leeds/Bradford Airport before Mr. Iqbal's departure.

Police Act 1997

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he intends to give as to the meaning of the word "urgency" in section 97(3) of the Police Act 1997. [6924]

Mr. Michael: The urgency of any case will depend upon individual circumstances and commonsense. It will be a matter for the authorising officer to assess whether the authorisation needs to become effective immediately and the Commissioner notified subsequently. The Commissioner will consider the reasonableness of that decision and may quash any authorisation or renewal which he believes has not reasonably been given.

Perjury

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 July, Official Report, column 77, on what date Mr. Jonathan Aitken was interviewed by police officers in connection with his alleged perjury in his discontinued libel action against The Guardian. [7787]

Mr. Michael: The Commissioner informs me that the investigations into the alleged offences by Mr. Aitken are continuing. This investigation is an operational matter for the Commissioner. I am therefore unable to comment on the details.

Theft Cases

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the savings there would be to the Exchequer if all theft cases including less than £500 were dealt with by summary trial. [7470]

Mr. Michael: Court proceedings data collected centrally do not record the amount or value of items stolen. Therefore it is not possible to estimate the savings that would accrue if all theft cases involving less than £500 were dealt with summarily.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many theft cases involving under £500 were disposed of in the Crown court in 1996; and how many of them resulted in a custodial sentence. [7487]

Mr. Michael: Court proceedings data collected centrally do not record the amount or value of items stolen.

In 1995, there were 10,219 cases dealt with at the Crown Court for offences of theft. Of these, 4,430 resulted in a custodial sentence.

1996 data will not be available until the autumn.

Drinking (Public Places)

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when model byelaws will be in place to enable local authorities to control drinking in public places. [7440]

Mr. George Howarth: A model byelaw, prohibiting the consumption of intoxicating liquor in designated places within a local authority area after a request to stop by a police officer, has been available to local authorities since October 1990.

Probation Officers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many probation officers there are; how many are currently seconded to the Prison Service; and what are the projected figures over the next five years. [7216]

Ms Joyce Quin: The number of probation officers at 31 December 1996 (the latest date for which figures are as yet available) was 7,313, of which 543 were working in prisons. The previous Government's spending plans for the probation service, as set out in the Home Office Annual Report 1997, envisaged expenditure of £428 million in the present financial year, falling to £425 million next year and £417 million in 1999–2000. We shall maintain central government support at the planned level this financial year, and consider what level of funding the probation service needs in future years, in order to provide community sentences which are effective and which command public confidence, as part of the comprehensive review of spending on Home Office services. It is then for individual probation committees to determine the number of probation officers which they can employ within total available provision to carry out their responsibilities under the Probation Service Act 1993.

The number of probation officers seconded to the Prison Service in future years will depend on the outcome of the comprehensive spending review and of discussions between governors and chief probation officers about the number of officers necessary to support effective throughcare in prisons, within governors' overall budgets.

Hunting with Hounds

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the employment generated (a) directly and (b) indirectly by hunting with hounds. [7836]

Mr. George Howarth: A Private Member's Bill to ban hunting with hounds is currently before the House. This will provide the opportunity for Parliament to consider all the effects of a ban.

Obscenity Working Group

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to continue the work of the interdepartmental working group on obscenity. [5654]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The Government attaches great importance to the work of the Interdepartmental Group on Obscenity which was established in 1995 and consists of officials from various Government Departments, the police and the Crown Prosecution Service with the task of monitoring developments in the area of obscenity, with particular reference to emerging trends in child and computer pornography; to identify any difficulties in enforcement or weaknesses in the relevant law; and to consider ways of overcoming them.

Up to now, the main subjects the Group has discussed have been the availability of pornographic material on the Internet and self-regulation by Internet service providers; police enforcement of the law on obscenity and child pornography; the display of indecent publications in newsagents; guidance on the sexual content of teenage magazines; international treaties on obscenity; the workings of the Obscene Publications Act 1959; unlicensed sex establishments; satellite pornography; the Home Office research study "Testing obscenity; an international comparison of laws and controls relating to obscene material"; and Lord Halsbury's Bill on obscenity.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Opposition Benefits (Cost)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the President of the Council if she will list the benefits and the monetary value of benefits granted to the official Opposition, other than those funded from the Short allocation to Opposition parties, with special reference to (a) salaries of Opposition Leader and Whips, (b) salaries and costs of civil servants attached to the Opposition Whips' Office, (c) the provision of a car and driver to the Leader of the Opposition and (d) the supply of newspapers to the Opposition Whips' Office. [6930]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The information requested is as follows. All figures are per year.

(a) Salaries:

Leader of the Opposition:	£55,000
Opposition Chief Whip:	£31,125
Opposition Deputy Chief Whip:	£20,029
Assistant Opposition Whip:	£20,029
Total:	126,183

(b) The total salary bill is: £88,657

(c) £58,095

(d) The House authorities supply the Office with three copies of each of 12 daily newspapers for each day the House is sitting. An exact figure for the total cost is not readily available.

Workings of the House Review

Mr. Forth: To ask the President of the Council if she will give for the review of the workings of the House of Commons (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8244]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: The House has ordered that the Select Committee on the Modernisation of the practices and procedures of the House should seek to make a first report to the House before the Summer Adjournment and I expect it to do so. It is not yet possible to estimate the timing of future reports or the costs of the Committee's work.

Parental Leave

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what is the Commission's policy on parental leave for staff. [6663]

Mr. Kirkwood: The Commission's policy on parental leave is set out in the Staff Handbook. Parental leave covers entitlements to maternity leave as well as a range of discretionary provisions covering such circumstances as short term domestic crises, marriage, paternity leave, and a career break scheme which includes provision for the care of young children.

PRIME MINISTER

Armistice (80th Anniversary)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if he will constitute a committee to consult other interested bodies, including the ex-service men's organisations, to commemorate the 80th anniversary of the Armistice on 11 November 1998; and if he will make a statement. [7273]

The Prime Minister: There are currently no plans to constitute a consultative committee for the commemoration of the 80th anniversary of the Armistice on 11 November next year.

The Government will continue to support the national Service of Remembrance held in London at the Cenotaph.

Hairdressing Costs

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Prime Minister what budget exists for hairdressing for (a) the Prime Minister and (b) members of his family accompanying him on official visits overseas; and what payments were (i) initially authorised and (ii) paid for such expenses during the Prime Minister's recent visit to the United States for (1) the Prime Minister and (2) members of his family accompanying him. [7695]

The Prime Minister: The Government would in the normal way meet necessary expenses connected with official visits overseas. The costs of hairdressing during the Denver Summit were met privately.

Budget Leaks

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister which Ministers or their staff gave information to the media in advance of the Budget speech by the Chancellor. [7815]

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what is the Government's policy on disclosure of information about the Budget prior to a Budget statement; [7072]

(2) what is his Government's policy on press briefing before the Budget statement. [7076]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the replies that I gave to the Right hon. Member, the Leader of the Opposition, on 2 July, Official Report, columns 288–89.

China

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to visit the People's Republic of China. [7168]

The Prime Minister: When we met in Hong Kong, the Chinese President, Jiang Zemin, invited me to visit China. I have no immediate plans to take advantage of the invitation, which I have accepted, but I would like to do so soon.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his discussions in Hong Kong with the Chinese President Jiang Zemin. [7167]

The Prime Minister: My meeting in Hong Kong was the first with the Chinese President since taking office. This was an historic occasion and provided a unique opportunity to set the tune for future relations. I emphasised the importance of the Joint Declaration to Hong Kong's future. We both expressed a wish to improve and broaden bilateral relations.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on Anglo-Chinese relations. [7169]

The Prime Minister: We aim to build a new, broad and forward-looking relationship with China. Britain and China have substantial common interests, including a special interest in Hong Kong. We look forward to dialogue and closer co-operation across a full range of bilateral and global issues.

Indian Subcontinent (Visits)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to visit India in connection with the 50th anniversary of independence. [7170]

The Prime Minister: None at present, but I look forward to seeing the Indian Prime Minister at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Edinburgh in October. Her Majesty the Queen will make a State Visit to India earlier that month.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to visit (a) Pakistan, (b) Bangladesh and (c) Sri Lanka. [7171]

The Prime Minister: None at present. I look forward to meeting the Heads of Government of all three countries at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in Edinburgh in October. Earlier that month Her Majesty the Queen will make a state visit to Pakistan to mark the 50th anniversary of independence.

10 Downing Street (Energy Efficiency)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Prime Minister what measures have been taken during the past five years to improve the energy efficiency of 10 Downing Street; at what point on the National Home Energy Rating Scheme 10 Downing Street lies; and what future measures are planned to increase its energy efficiency. [7104]

The Prime Minister: Over the past five years, the Cabinet Office Estate, including 10 and 11 Downing Street, has had in place a programme to maximise energy efficiency and minimise waste. A reduction of 15 per cent. in energy consumption has been achieved over the period. The programme of work in support of increasing energy efficiency will continue.

The National Home Energy Rating Scheme is designed for use in assessing domestic energy efficiency and is not appropriate for application to buildings such as those in the Downing Street complex.

Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the division of responsibilities between the Secretary of State for National Heritage and the Minister without Portfolio in respect of the Millennium Exhibition at Greenwich. [4432]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 23 June 1997]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage has responsibility overall for arrangements to mark the Millennium nation-wide. The shares in Millennium Central Limited, the Millennium Exhibition operating company, are being transferred to my hon. Friend, the Minister without Portfolio. As sole shareholder, he will have detailed responsibility for preparation of the Exhibition.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if the decision to proceed with the Millennium Experience was taken by a vote within Cabinet. [6886]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 7 July 1997]: Details relating to proceedings of Cabinet and Cabinet Committees are not published.

Ministerial Committee on the Environment

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister for what reason membership of the Ministerial Committee on the Environment does not include the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. [6889]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The Ministerial Committee on the Environment considers environmental policy issues. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment is invited to attend or be represented for items in which he has a departmental interest.

DEFENCE

Defence Medical Training Organisation

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Defence Medical Training Organisation. [8516]

Dr. Reid: The Defence Medical Training Organisation (DMTO), which formed initially on 1 April 1996 and brought together the provision of individual medical services training previously provided on a single Service basis, was established as a joint Service Agency on 1 April 1997 under the control of a Chief Executive. The Headquarters of the DMTO will be based initially in Portsmouth, moving to HMS DOLPHIN in late 1998. The DMTO consists of the following:

(a) The Royal Defence Medical College, currently on two sites at Millbank, London and HMS DOLPHIN, Gosport. The London element will move to HMS DOLPHIN later this year.

(b) The Defence Medical Services Training, Keogh Barracks, Aldershot.

The aim of the Agency is to deliver individual medical services training, to prescribed standards, to meet the operational requirement.

The Chief Executive, Major General C. G. Callow OBE QHP L/RAMC, will be afforded greater responsibility and flexibility to build upon the reputation for excellence of medical services training. Thus the MOD will continue to have access to the training necessary to provide highly trained and motivated medical services personnel in support of military operations while ensuring best value for money is obtained.

The Chief Executive has been set the following key targets for the first year of operation:

1. To achieve the following success rates for the categories of training shown:

   Common Core Course: 90 per cent.

   Specialist Register: 95 per cent.

   Pre-Registration Nurses: 95 per cent.

2. To achieve £0.332 million savings in Year 1 and thereafter set targets in terms of annual reduction in unit cost of output.

3. To actively seek ways of improving the quality and relevance of medical services training by assisting customers to review their training objectives and to respond to customers within 3 months of each review.

4. To develop measures of unit cost of output which will allow targets for reduction to be set for Year 2 and beyond.

5. To develop an effective means of targeting timeliness.

6. To establish mechanisms for assessing customer satisfaction and set targets for Year 2 and beyond.

Copies of the Agency's Framework Document have been placed in the Library of both Houses.

Medical Supplies Agency

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Medical Supplies Agency for 1997–98. [8517]

Dr. Reid: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Medical Supplies Agency for financial year 1997–98. The targets build on the progress already made by the Agency since it formed in March 1996 and are as follows:

(a) By 31 October 1997, to agree quantifiable performance standards for building, holding, maintaining and supplying the agreed number of kits, outfits and associated items of equipment, as defined in endorsed Equipment Tables. To set challenging targets for the remainder of 1997–98 with a view to improving standards in 1998–99.

(b) To meet 100 per cent. of the Services requirements for stocked medical material and blood products for operations, training and exercises as defined by the Service Level Agreements.

(c) To ensure, in conjunction with HQ Land and the single Service manning branches, 100 per cent. provision of professional and militarily trained personnel for 84 FMED.

(d) During financial year 1997–98, to meet 95 per cent. of the timeliness and quality targets using JSP 336 Pam (1996 Standard Priority System) as the minimum benchmark standard.

(e) To deliver efficiency savings to a value of £4.6 million in 1997–98.

(f) As an integral part of the Surgeon General's Information Strategy, to publish the Agency's Information Strategy by January 1998.

Defence Dental Agency

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Dental Agency for 1997–98. [8562]

Dr. Reid: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Dental Agency for financial year 1997–98. The targets build on the progress already made by the Agency since it formed in March 1996 and are as follows:

(a) From within available personnel resources, to achieve 100 per cent. of required professionally and militarily trained personnel, at the specified readiness required for deployment in support of the National Contingency Force.

(b) For each Service, to maintain the agreed dental fitness targets of 75 per cent. of all Service personnel and 90 per cent. in priority groups, to be fit for deployment.

(c) By 28 February 1998 to have developed a performance indicator to measure the outstanding treatment need and have set a baseline of performance to enable challenging targets to be set for 1988–99 onwards.

(d) By 28 February 1998 to have developed a performance indicator to measure the improvements in the failure to attend rate and have set a baseline of performance to enable challenging targets to be set for 1988–99 onwards.

(e) By 28 February 1998 to have developed a performance indicator to measure the improvement in dental morbidity and have set a baseline of performance to enable challenging targets to be set for 1988–99 onwards.

(f) To complete all Service Level Agreements with major customers and other Agencies by 31 December 1997, and develop a system of ongoing review to allow maintenance of SLAs in successive years.

Defence Secondary Care Agency

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Secondary Care Agency for 1997–98. [8563]

Dr. Reid: Key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Secondary Care Agency for financial year 1997–98. The targets build on the progress already made by the Agency since it formed in April 1996 and are as follows:

(a) From within available personnel resources, to meet 100 per cent. of the Services' requirements for secondary care skill mix in support operations.

(b) To ensure that 50 per cent. of Service patients are offered a first outpatient appointment within 4 weeks of receipt of a referral, and 90 per cent. within 13 weeks.

(c) To ensure that 75 per cent. of Service patients are offered a treatment date that is within three months of the decision to give inpatient treatment.

(d) To reduce average DSCA Finished Consultant Episodes (FCE) costs by 3 per cent. over the course of the year.

(e) By 31 March 1998, to develop and implement a co-ordinated quality strategy for patient care and a mechanism for assessing performance against the strategy.

(f) To ensure that 80 per cent. of all DSCA Service personnel, whose medical category permits it, receive the annual military training which is mandatory within their Service.

(g) To ensure that 80 per cent. of places on all exercises covered by relevant Service Legal Agreements with Commanders in Chief are filled by DSCA staff within the appropriate specialities.

Regimental Museums

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) actual and (b) percentage change was in the Government funding of regimental museums between 1997–98 and 1998–99. [7113]

Mr. Spellar: We have advised museum trustees that there will be an overall reduction of 12.7 per cent. in the contribution the Ministry of Defence makes to the funding of regimental and corps museums from April 1998. At current prices, this will mean that the 65 regimental and corps museums in mainland Britain will be required to share a reduction of £138,466 per annum from that date.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the regimental museums currently maintained out of public funds. [7112]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence contributes some funding to 69 regimental and corps museums. They are listed below:

Strategic Defence Review

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration is being given to his Department's procurement plans in the Strategic Defence Review. [8518]

Dr. Reid: One of the aims of the Strategic Defence Review is to ensure that the Armed Forces are properly equipped to undertake the tasks asked of them. Our procurement plans will therefore be considered as part of the Review, including projects already on contract.

However, during the review there will be no moratorium and projects where contracts have already been placed will continue. Decisions on major equipment programmes not yet under contract will be considered on their individual circumstances in relation to progress with the Review.

Departmental Property

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the property and assets owned, leased or rented by his Department and its agencies at home and overseas, stating their current value and their current use. [7151]

Dr. Reid: The information requested is not yet available. As part of the Department's preparation for the introduction of Resource Accounting on 1 April 1998 an exercise to identify, register and value departmental assets is currently being undertaken. However, the scale of the exercise is considerable and the work will not be concluded until next year.

Open Government Review

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the chief executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency about the Government's Review on Open Government. [7251]

Dr. Reid: None. The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, like all my Department's Agencies, is, of course, subject to the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Britannia

Mr. Desmond Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy towards the presentation of the Royal Yacht Britannia. [7579]

Dr. Reid: The Government is considering the future of Her Majesty's Yacht Britannia in the light of proposals for preservation submitted by several organisations.

Regiment Manning Levels

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, for each regiment, the number by which it was below complement on 30 April; and what plans he has to bring each up to its complement. [6817]

Dr. Reid [pursuant to his answer, 8 July 1997, c. 422–24]: I regret that the information on the manning level against the complement within the Household Cavalry and Royal Armoured Corps (RAC) were omitted in error. The information is set out in the following table.

Regiment	Manning level
Household Cavalry
Household Cavalry Regiment	–22
Household Cavalry Mounted Regiment	–38
Total	–60
Royal Armoured Corps
Queens Dragoon Guards	–23
Scots Dragoon Guards	–38
Royal Dragoon Guards	–4
Queens Royal Hussars	–51
9/12 Lancers	–45
Kings Royal Hussars	–42
Light Dragoons	–5
Queens Royal Lancers	–39
1st Royal Tank Regiment	–39
2nd Royal Tank Regiment	+28
Total	–258

Prisoners of War (Pay)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the report following the Review of Officer Prisoners of War Protected Personnel Pay Deductions will be published. [7556]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Galloway and Upper Nithsdale (Mr. Morgan) on 11 June (Official Report), column 485.

Defence Test and Research Organisation

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the report on the strategic review initiated by the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency in 1996 into the Defence Test and Evaluation Organisation; and if he will make a statement. [6429]

Mr. Spellar: There has not been a "strategic review" of DTEO but in 1996 there was a review of the mixture of contracts that were in place to support the DTEO ranges. The outcome of this review was made public in December 1996.

Maritime Patrol Aircraft

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the estimated costs for the next 10 years for the replacement maritime patrol aircraft. [6752]

Mr. Spellar: The total procurement cost of the Nimrod 2000 replacement maritime patrol aircraft is around £2 billion. The Department's internal plans represent projections and assumptions which inform advice to Ministers on the affordability of particular elements of the Defence programme. Accordingly, I am withholding the information requested under exemption two of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. In addition, disclosure of some elements of this information could prejudice the competitive position of the Department in future negotiations with contractors and reveal commercially confidential data. Accordingly, exemptions 7 and 13 of the Code also apply.

Defence Sales

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many meetings he has had with ministerial colleagues at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Department of Trade and Industry on the defence sales policy review. [6650]

Mr. Spellar: My right hon. Friend Secretary of State for Defence has had a number of formal meetings with my right hon. Friends the Foreign Secretary and the President of the Board of Trade at which the criteria used in considering licence applications for the export of conventional arms were discussed.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the year 2000 computer problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7132]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence programme for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem is led by the Director General Information and Communication Services (DGICS). The programme complies with guidelines issued by the Cabinet Office and CCTA Year 2000 Public Sector Group which call for costed programmes to modify or replace affected systems to be in place by October of this year with all work on critical systems completed by 31 December 1998. DGICS heads a coordination group of MOD Top Level Budget Holders to direct the programme. Projet managers have been appointed throughout the Department to oversee work on systems in their respective areas of responsibility. A Year 2000 awareness campaign has been mounted and private sector computing assistance is being provided to Year 2000 projects. It is too early to say what the final costs might be, but work to identify and cost the necessary remedial measures is on schedule to be completed by October, when the results will be reported to the Cabinet Office in accordance with the overall Government timetable.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the analysis by Professor Graham Rook and Dr. Alimuddin Zumla of University College, London, published in The Lancet, on the relationship between vaccines, exposure to insecticides and Gulf War illness. [6949]

Dr. Reid: Officials in my Department have held discussions with Professor Rook and Dr. Zumla concerning their hypothesis. Whenever my Department receives suggestions for additional research into subjects which could have a bearing on Gulf veterans' illnesses, our advice is always that the researcher(s) should submit a formal proposal to the Medical Research Council. I understand that Professor Rook and Dr. Zumla intend to submit a proposal for work to test their hypothesis in due course and we therefore await the MRC's advice.

Equipment Exhibition (Farnborough)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 5 June, Official Report, columns 220–21, for what reasons (a) Algeria, (b) Belgium, (c) Russia and (d) Sri Lanka have not been invited to send delegations to the forthcoming Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition in Farnborough. [7324]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 8 July 1997]: Invitations to the Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition are influenced by a number of factors including our perception of market opportunities for British defence companies as well as our political, strategic and security interests. Taking into account all of these factors, Algeria, Russia and Sri Lanka were not seen as priority candidates on this occasion; Belgium has now been invited.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Malins: To ask the Attorney-General what proportion of those employed by the Crown Prosecution Service are qualified (a) solicitors and (b) barristers. [7472]

The Attorney-General: As at 30 June 1997, the Crown Prosecution Service employed 2,106 qualified lawyers. Of those, 1,520 (72 per cent.) are employed as solicitors and 586 (28 per cent.) are employed as barristers.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what measures he plans to cut the criminal legal aid bill. [7471]

Mr. Hoon: Sir Peter Middleton has been appointed to undertake a review of civil justice and legal aid reforms. The review will cover criminal legal aid. Sir Peter is to produce a preliminary report by the end of September. No decisions about legal aid will be made in advance of the report.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the cost to the Exchequer in legal aid in the Crown Court of (a) barristers and (b) instructing solicitors, in the most recent year for which figures are available. [7466]

Mr. Hoon: The cost to legal aid in the Crown Court for 1996–97 was as follows:

	1996–97
	£ million
Solicitors	141.85
Barrister[1]	172.93
Total	314.78

[1] The expenditure on barristers includes £0.25 million in respect of graduated fees which may include a small proportion of costs for solicitor advocates.

Consumer Protection

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when his Department will allow consumer protection bodies to seek injunctions to stop traders contravening consumer protection rights. [7781]

Mr. Hoon: On the 23 May the Lord Chancellor announced that he had decided that a change in the law was needed to open up the courts in England and Wales to allow representative actions. This would allow an organisation such as a consumer group to take action on behalf of an individual whose rights had been infringed. A working group is being set up to consider to whom the new rights and duties might extend and to work on the new procedures and rules.

Gwent Magistrates' Courts

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the amount transferred from Mid Glamorgan to the Gwent magistrates' courts following the change in boundaries; and how much of that money has been spent to date and upon which projects. [6836]

Mr. Hoon: The South Wales and Gwent Magistrates' Courts Committees notified the Lord Chancellor's Department in February 1997 that the amount required to be transferred from the South Wales Magistrates' Courts Committee to the Gwent Magistrates' Courts Committee in respect of the transfer of the Upper and Lower Rhmney Valley Petty Sessional Division areas from the former Mid Glamorgan Magistrates' Courts Committee to the Gwent Magistrates' Courts Committee should be £456,805 for 1996–97 and £460,072 for 1997–98. No information is held nationally on how much of that transfer has been spent to date or how it has been spent.

Gwent Justices

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the present annual cost of (a) the Gwent Justices' chief executive and his staff and (b) of the lease and accommodation of the chief executive and staff. [6835]

Mr. Hoon: (a) In its annual magistrates' courts revenue grant claim return to the Lord Chancellor's Department for 1995–96, the Gwent County Council reported that total expenditure by it on salaries, special or additional allowances and national insurance and superannuation contributions for the Gwent Magistrates' Courts Committee was £1,722,568 of which £66,250 was in respect of the Justices' Chief Executive. 1995-96 is the most recent financial year for which such expenditure information is currently available. No breakdown is available between expenditure on staff working directly and immediately to the Justices' Chief Executive and between other staff employed by the Gwent Magistrates' Courts Committee.

(b) In a return submitted by the Gwent Magistrates' Courts Committee to the Lord Chancellor's Department in September 1996, it estimated that the 1997–98 rental cost of Gwent House, Cwmbran, where its Justices' Chief Executive's office is located, would be £58,200. It also estimated that the 1997–98 business rates liability would be £18,176. No other information is held nationally about the cost of the lease and accommodation of the Justices' Chief Executive.

Crown Courts

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of the cases heard in the Crown Court in 1996 were heard there at the defendants' request. [7486]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Humfrey Malins, dated 10 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the percentage of cases heard in the Crown Court at the defendant's request.

The information requested is not held centrally and can only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of all Crown Court cases in 1996 resulted in a non-custodial disposal. [7468]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Humfrey Malins, dated 10 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the proportion of cases in 1996 that resulted in a non-custodial disposal.

The information requested is not available as each case can involve several defendants and the sentences imposed on them may vary. However, 39 per cent. of defendants who pleaded, or were found guilty, in the Crown Court in 1996 received a non-custodial sentence, a total of 29,160 defendants. In addition, 49 per cent. of the defendants who were referred to the Crown Court for sentencing only received a non-custodial sentence, a total of 6,917 defendants.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average cost per day to the Exchequer of each Crown Court. [7469]

Mr. Hoon: The question concerns a matter which has been assigned to the Court Service under the terms of its framework document. I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Humfrey Malins, dated 10 July 1997:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the average cost per day of each Crown Court.

Information about the cost of each Crown Court Centre is not held centrally and can only be obtained at a disproportionate cost. However, I can report that the average cost per day of a court room in use in the Crown Court is £7,800. This includes all costs to the Exchequer, such as the cost of the judiciary, juries, staff, accommodation, Legal Aid, the Prison Service, the Probation Service and prosecution and police costs.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Immigration (Computer Problems)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning the computer problems at the United Kingdom post at Islamabad. [6589]

Mr. Fatchett: We have recently been carrying out urgent work to improve the handling of very large volumes of data held on the computer system in the Visa Section of the British High Commission in Islamabad. Unfortunately, a number of technical difficulties have caused that system to crash several times during that period. This has prevented staff from gaining access to data bases to carry out the necessary checks on applications. We are making every effort to ensure that the system functions properly. In the meantime, the Section is running a restricted service, dealing with compassionate cases and applications for settlement from those joining family already in the UK. We also have in hand arrangements for the installation of a completely new system, which we intend will come into operation within a few weeks.

Mr. Eamon Peter Helly

Mr. Beard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what position has been reached by the Indian authorities in investigating the murder of Mr. Eamon Peter Helly in Goa on 8 November 1991; and if he will urge the Indian authorities to proceed with their inquiries and bring charges without delay. [6885]

Mr. Fatchett: I would like to express my sympathy to Mr. Helly's family over this tragic case. The Indian authorities are still investigating.

DNA tests have been conducted. A suspect was arrested but subsequently released on bail.

On 4 July the Indian Ministry of External Affairs said they still awaited a report from the Indian Central Bureau of Investigation. Our High Commission will continue to press the Indian authorities for the report to be made available as quickly as possible.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent discussions between his Minister of State and the Foreign Minister of Sri Lanka. [7175]

Mr. Fatchett: I met the Sri Lankan Foreign Minister, Mr. Kadirgamar, on 5 June. We discussed bilateral relations and the current situation in Sri Lanka, including the Sri Lankan government's effort to find a resolution to the ethnic conflict.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals Her Majesty's Government have advanced regarding the possibility of playing a mediating role in the ethnic conflict in Sri Lanka. [7176]

Mr. Fatchett: We have said publicly that we stand ready to help in the resolution of the ethnic conflict in Sri Lanka if both sides ask us to play a role.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to visit Sri Lanka. [7177]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, has no plans to visit at present, but I hope to do so before very long.

Anglo-Chinese Relations

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Anglo-Chinese relations. [7179]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave today.

Mr. David Mathieson

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if members of the News Department at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are required to assist Mr. David Mathieson with his work. [7696]

Mr. Robin Cook: No.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the dates and attendees, by department and grade, of meetings of officials which have taken place in her Department on the strategic defence review. [7152]

Clare Short: Development issues of relevance to the Strategic Defence Review have been discussed on a number of occasions in my Department. My officials are also involved as appropriate in inter-departmental consultations on the Review.

Montserrat

Mr. Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what further consideration she has given to the needs of the people of Montserrat following the recent volcanic eruptions. [8564]

Clare Short: Immediately following the volcanic activity two weeks ago, my department gave immediate approval for vital emergency work such as transport services, communications equipment and maintaining of fuel and food supplies and sanitation.

We have also been looking urgently at the best way of providing temporary shelter and upgrading health care for those displaced on Montserrat. I have now approved a further £6.5 million to help build emergency shelter for those left homeless. I also approved £450,000 for emergency repair work on the hospital at St. Johns.

At the same time we want to give the people of Montserrat real choices about their future; and will be undertaking a full consultation process within weeks.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sporting Events (Televising)

Kali Mountford: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made in his review of the sporting events listed for live television broadcasting purposes; and if he will make a statement. [8410]

Mr. Fisher: We announced on 16 May that we would review the list of events which must be made available for general free to air broadcast under the 1996 Broadcasting Act, in line with our policy of ensuring that broadcasts of events of genuine national interest are available to the many not the few. As part of that review we are developing criteria to help decide which events fall into this category. We believe that an agreed set of criteria would make the listing process more consistent and more transparent; and would be helpful to broadcasters, sports bodies and viewers; and would assist my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in considering which events should be listed. My right hon. Friend wrote today to sports bodies, broadcasters and organisations representing viewers and listeners to seek their views on these listing criteria.

BBC

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the extent of the control still exercised by Her Majesty's Government on the management of the BBC; if he was consulted over the pay rises for chief executives of the Corporation; and if he will make a statement. [7794]

Mr. Fisher: Under the terms of its Royal Charter, rates of remuneration and conditions of employment for BBC employees are a matter for the Corporation itself. The Government has no locus to intervene. It is for the BBC Governors to ensure that they are delivering good value for money and paying only what is necessary, in a competitive market, to attract and retain the staff needed to maintain high quality services.

Tourism

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals he has to increase Britain's share of world tourism. [6576]

Mr. Tom Clarke: We set out our main priorities for tourism in the "Breaking New Ground" document. These include: a positive approach from government to the industry; effective marketing of Britain overseas; reinvigorating domestic tourism; improving the quality of the product; jobs, training and investment in people; and sustainable development. We will work in partnership with the industry and others to pursue these priorities and ensure that Britain has a world class tourism industry.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list each person advising or assisting his Department who has (a) membership of and (b) involvement in (i) the European Round Table of industrialists, (ii) the European Centre for Infrastructure Studies, (iii) the Competitiveness Advisory Group, (iv) Transatlantic Business Dialogue, (v) the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe, (vi) Union of Industrial and Employers Confederations of Europe, (vii) Europa Bio and (viii) the World Business Council for Sustainable Development. [5309]

Angela Eagle: Membership of the European Round Table of Industrialists, the Competitiveness Advisory Group and the Transatlantic Business Dialogue is on a personal basis. No-one who presently advises or assists in this Department is a member of any of these groups.

Membership of the European Centre for Infrastructure Studies, the Association for the Monetary Union of Europe, the Union of Industrial and Employers Confederations of Europe, Europe Bio, and the World Business Council for Sustainable Development is on a corporate basis. Representatives from companies and organisations involved with these groups may advise Departments from time to time.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will include in the legislation for the creation of regional development agencies proposals to allow those regions he considers have the necessary expertise and experience to become shadow agencies or pilot schemes in advance of 1 April 1999. [6641]

Angela Eagle: On 11 June the Government launched a wide-ranging consultation on our proposals for setting up regional development agencies in England. It is too early to say what transitional arrangements might be made in advance of the agencies beginning operation, but we have invited views on this. Any such arrangements will build on the good work already being done at the regional level.

Non-domestic Rates

Mrs. Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the future of national non-domestic rates. [7347]

Mr. Raynsford: We have said in our Manifesto that there are sound democratic reasons why business rates should be set locally. We are currently considering the options to achieve this. No changes will be made until we have fully consulted businesses, local authorities and other interested parties.

Valuation Tribunals

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 20 May on valuation tribunals. [7457]

Ms Armstrong: A letter was sent to the hon. Member on 9 July 1997.

Air Quality Management

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to lay regulations before Parliament under the Environment Act 1995 to introduce local authority powers for air quality management. [7583]

Angela Eagle: An announcement on the commencement of local authority duties under Part IV of the Environment Act will be made in due course.

Council Tax (Mobile Homes)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the payment of council tax by residents who live in mobile homes. [7592]

Mr. Raynsford: The council tax is payable in respect of all chargeable dwellings include mobile homes and caravans which are a person's sole or main residence. All dwellings are placed into a valuation band determined by their open market value on 1 April 1991.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if his Department defines a publicly funded body with a contract under a compulsory competitive tendering project as being in the public sector; and if he will make a statement. [7586]

Mr. Raynsford: A local authority may undertake a defined activity if it has satisfied the six competition conditions set out in the legislation governing compulsory competitive tendering. A joint venture company or other local authority company may also undertake a defined activity and, if the company is controlled or influenced by the authority, as defined in Part V of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, it is regarded as being in the public sector.

Regional Development Offices, Cambridge

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in what accommodation he proposes to locate the Regional Development Agency and the Regional Representative Body for East Anglia; and what assessment he has made of the potential of City House, Cambridge, in this respect. [7485]

Angela Eagle: On 11 June the Government launched a wide-ranging consultation on its proposals for setting up regional development agencies in England. It is too early to say where the head offices of the agencies will be located.

Homelessness

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many people are classified by his Department as homeless in (a) Newham (b) Tower Hamlets, (c) Hackney, (d) Redbridge, (e) Waltham Forest and (f) Barking and Dagenham; what this figures is as a proportion of the population; and what are the corresponding figures for the United Kingdom. [6857]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 7 July 1997]: Local authorities in England report to my Department, on their quarterly P1E return, the number of households for which they accept responsibility to secure accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985. The latest report date for 1996 for the Boroughs listed are as follows:

London borough	Households accepted as homeless	Annual acceptances per 1,000 households
Barking and Dagenham	170	2.7
Hackney	[1]830	[2]13.5
Newham	[3]224	[2]10.5
Redbridge	324	3.6
Tower Hamlets	[1]536	[2]10.5
Waltham Forest	771	8.3

[1] Part-year information for 3 quarters only.
[2] Scaled up to an annual rate.
[3] Part-year information for 1 quarter only.

The corresponding estimates for England are total acceptances in 1996 of some 116,870 households and 5.9 acceptances per 1,000 households. For information about other parts of the United Kingdom, I refer my hon. Friend to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

Power Boats

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions by what means his Department intends local authorities should control the use of (a) jet skis and (b) other powered boats in the vicinity of bathing beaches in the absence of a general registration system. [6951]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 7 July 1997]: As I said in my reply to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Fearn) on 27 June 1997 Official Report, column 672, local authorities already have powers to make byelaws to regulate seaside pleasure boats for the prevention of danger, obstruction or annoyance to persons bathing in the sea or using the seashore.

The safe use of recreation craft is promoted by the Coastguard Agency and other bodies including the Sea Safety Liaison Group established by the Royal National Lifeboat Institution. The Coastguard Agency is analysing the response to the consultative document it issued on "Non-legislative measures for the improvement of safety of non-regulated pleasure vessels".

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Staff Relocation, Cambridge

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to relocate staff presently working in Government offices at Brooklands Avenue, Cambridge, in order to free the site for suitable redevelopment. [7484]

Mr. Rooker: The buildings on the Brooklands Avenue site, Cambridge, are of temporary wartime construction and are now reaching the end of their lives. We are therefore looking to provide suitable accommodation for the staff who work on the site. Proposals are being prepared to redevelop the site, in accordance with the Cambridge City Local Plan.

BSE (Organophosphates)

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the relationship between the use of organophosphates in the treatment of cattle and the incidence of BSE. [7352]

Mr. Rooker: The original epidemiological investigation into BSE carried out in 1987 considered any possible association between the use of agricultural chemicals, including organophosphate insecticides, and the occurrence of BSE. None was found.

More recently, SEAC invited Mr. Purdey, a leading proponent of the theory of a link between the use of organophosphates and the occurrence of BSE, to address their meeting of 15 April 1997. The meeting was also attended by experts from the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and the Veterinary Products Committee. They did not form a view on the validity of the theory, but they did agree further avenues of enquiry into this issue. They will consider the matter again when additional data are available.

Beef Imports

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the reliability of the documentation accompanying imported beef in respect of its description and its health status. [7351]

Mr. Rooker: All consignments of beef imported from third countries are subject to veterinary checks, including a documentary check in all cases, at the point of entry into the Community. Centrally held records of veterinary checks on all imports of fresh meat and meat products (beef is not separately identified), revealed documentary irregularities in only 0.6 per cent. of all consignments during 1996.

Production of beef in Member States is governed by harmonised rules which places the onus on the Member State of origin to ensure that the beef has been produced in compliance with those rules. On arrival at a GB premises, Community beef is subject to document and health mark check, either by the Official Veterinary Surgeon or by the owner of the premises, to ensure that the goods have been produced in accordance with these rules. There is no centrally held record of this trade which is governed by Single Market principles.

BSE (Compensation Payments)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by how much he plans to reduce BSE compensation payments; and what assessment he has made of the effect of this proposal on farmers who rear late developing store cattle. [7321]

Mr. Rooker: The European Commission, with the support of the Government, has decided with effect from 4 August to reduce Over Thirty Months Scheme (OTMS) compensation payments for cull cows from 0.9 ECU (around 65p) per kilogram to 0.8 ECU (around 58p) per kilogram liveweight. Compensation payments for all other cattle, including clean cattle, remain at 0.9 ECU per kilogram. Compensation for all OTMS cattle will be subject to a limit of 560 kilograms per animal.

Clean cattle (including the late developing store cattle to which the hon. Member refers) will be the principal animals affected by this limit as these tend to be slaughtered at weights above 560 kilograms. However, we believe that farmers should be looking to finish their clean cattle at under 30 months of age and thus to sell them onto the market rather than into the OTMS. The Beef Assurance Scheme nevertheless provides an outlet for clean cattle from low risk, late maturing herds to be finished and sold at up to 42 months of age.

Beef

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what volume of beef imported into the United Kingdom in 1996 was seized as being suspected of being unfit for human consumption; if he will list the countries of origin of such beef indicating the volume from each country; and if he will make a statement. [4652]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 20 June 1997]: All consignments of beef imported from third countries are, on entry to the Community, subject to veterinary checks at border Inspection Posts specifically approved for this purpose. GB's border inspection posts are operated by local authorities. Production of beef in Member States is governed by harmonised rules which place the onus on the Member State of origin to ensure that the beef has been produced in compliance with those rules. On arrival of the consignment, documentation and health marketing, to show the goods have been produced in accordance with these rules, are required to be checked by the Meat Hygiene Service or, if they are not responsible for the plant (such as a meat product plant), by the owner of the premises. Any irregularity should be reported to MAFF. Additionally an officer of the Ministry or local Authority is empowered to inspect a consignment, imported from another Member States, either in transit or at its destination if it is suspected that the consignment presents a threat to public or animal health. I can confirm that beef imports are stopped where they are identified as not meeting import requirements, including being unfit for human consumption. However, no separate figures are held centrally regarding the volume or origin of such trade. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Supportive Flatmate Scheme

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will consider providing the resources to enable the supportive flatmate scheme in the Rock Trust's Bedrock Project to be developed as a model for supported accommodation. [6630]

Mr. Chisholm: Projects such as the Rock Trust's Bedrock Project provide accommodation and support for homeless young people who often have a range of problems. I understand that there are a number of such projects operating in Scotland, however, and it would therefore be inappropriate to single out any particular one for central Government support. Projects of this type necessarily work closely with their local authority, and it is from that source that they should seek funding.

Hospital Building Programme

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the timetable for future capital investment for the hospital building programme for Scotland. [6759]

Mr. Galbraith: The following amounts will be available for spending on capital projects in Scotland over the next three years.

1997–98: £140,930,000

1998–99: £178,707,000

1999–2000: £178,272,000.

These figures are net of capital receipts. Included in this expenditure is spending on large capital schemes at the Western General Hospital NHS Trust in Edinburgh, Dundee Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust, and the Glasgow Royal Infirmary NHS Trust.

In addition, a number of major capital schemes are being taken forward under the Private Finance Initiative.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7131]

Mr. Dewar: A Year 2000 compliance programme is underway within my Department with the objective of identifying and ensuring the correct operation of all critical systems by 31 December 1998. The review is on schedule.

The Director of Telecommunications is in overall charge of the programme and has the full time support of a Project Manager. They provide the central operational contact for all Year 2000 compliance issues. The programme of work in hand covers all Scottish Office IT systems, and although my Department is in a relatively sound position, owing to the recent redevelopment of many of its IT systems, we are nonetheless devoting significant effort to ensuring Year 2000 compliance. A detailed, costed project plan is being developed, which we expect to have in place by October, in line with the guidance issued by CITU and CCTA. At this stage, therefore, it is not possible to say precisely how much the work involved will cost, but it is expected that the costs will be contained within my Department's existing IT budget.

Skye Bridge

Mr. Bernad Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what change there has been in the financial terms, or repayment period, in respect of the Skye Bridge; and if he will make a statement; [7707]

(2) what has been the cost to public funds of the decision to change the tolls on the Skye Bridge; and from which vote additional moneys will be provided. [7708]

Mr. Chisholm: The measures to alleviate the impact of the Skye Bridge tolls on regular users, set out in my right hon. Friend's reply to the hon. Member for Ross, Skye and Inverness, West on 4 July, are intended to have a neutral effect on the financial terms and the repayment period. The cost of the measures to public funds remains a matter of negotiation with the bridge operator, Skye Bridge Limited. It is proposed that any costs in the current financial year will be met from within Class XIII, Vote 2, in common with all other expenditure on Scotland's trunk road network.

A1

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision had been made by the previous administration in its capital budget for dualling the A1 road between Dunbar and Haddington; and if he will make a statement on his plans for the application of those funds. [7689]

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Mr. Chisholm: It is estimated that the A1 Dunbar–Haddington project would have cost £40 million over the 2 financial years beginning 1998–99. It would not be appropriate to anticipate the outcome of the review of the Scottish trunk roads programme, or my right hon. Friend's decisions on expenditure priorities within the Transport programme as a whole.

Lockerbie

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for what reasons a spokesman for the Scottish Law Officers stated on Monday 7 July that the allegations in the Der Spiegel magazine about the Lockerbie bombing having been commissioned by the Ayatollah were the first occasion that the Office had been advised of such an allegation; and if he will make a statement. [7793]

Mr. McLeish: The statement issued by the Crown Office was to the effect that this was the first time that they had been made aware of these allegations, namely the allegations which were being made by a person named as Abolghasem Mesbabi which had been reported in Der Spiegel magazine.

Traveller Sites

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost to his Department of undertaking and publishing a research study on local authority traveller sites in Scotland. [7473]

Mr. Chisholm: The contract for the research study recently published about local authority sites for travellers was awarded by The Scottish Office Development Department to a private research consultancy on the basis of competitive tenders. The contract price was £9,999.25 and the additional cost to the Department of printing 140 copies of the research report and 160 copies of a summary was £443.38.

Court Service

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets have been set for performance by the Scottish Court Service and Sheriff Courts for 1997–98. [8409]

Mr. Dewar: The targets I have set for performance by the Scottish Court Service in the Supreme Courts and Sheriff Courts for 1997–98 are set out below.

Performance against these targets will be published in the Annual Report of the Scottish Court Service.

Targets for performance 1997–98

	Per cent.
Number of time limited cases falling as a result of SCS action/inaction	0
Percentage of Court of Session Diets allocated within waiting periods set by Lord President	90
Percentage of solemn and summary appeals allocated to rolls within waiting periods set by Lord Justice-General	70
Percentage of Sheriff Courts meeting summary criminal waiting periods agreed with Sheriffs Principal	80
Percentage of Sheriff Courts meeting ordinary civil waiting periods agreed with Sheriffs Principal	95
Percentage of Sheriff Courts with 5 per cent. or less lack of time adjournments	80
Percentage achievement of administrative standards set by Lord President/Lord Justice-General	90
Percentage of Sheriff Courts achieving administrative standards agreed with Sheriffs Principal	95
Percentage of courthouses meeting "Coming to Court" standards	85
Staff, accommodation and administrative costs per court sitting day	£1,010
Percentage cost recovery (including judicial costs) for civil business	90

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many (a) summary trails and (b) sheriff and jury trials took place in Kirkwall Sheriff Court in (i) 1987, (ii) 1990 and (iii) each year since 1994; [6046]

(2) how many (a) summary trails and (b) sheriff and jury trials took place in Lerwick Sheriff Court in (i) 1987, (ii) 1990 and (iii) each year since 1994. [6047]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 2 July 1997]: This is a matter for the Scottish Court Service. I have asked the Chief Executive, Michael Ewart, to reply.

Letter from Michael Ewart to Mr. James Wallace, dated 10 July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about trails at Lerwick and Kirkwall Sheriff Courts.

I am sorry that we do not have figures for cases in 1987. However, figures for 1990 and for 1994 and subsequent years are given in the attached tables. For each court and for each year I have shown both the number of cases called in each category and the number of these cases in which evidence was led.

I hope this information is helpful.

CABINET OFFICE

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what are his responsibilities in respect of the Millennium Exhibition at Greenwich. [4433]

Mr. Mandelson [holding 23 June 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

WALES

Teachers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimates he has made of future teacher numbers in (a) primary and (b) infant schools; and if he will make a statement. [6674]

Mr. Hain: Local education authorities and schools are responsible for the employment and deployment of teaching staff to deliver the National Curriculum and we are making additional resources available to assist them in this role. The Government also has a role in ensuring that there is a sufficient number of suitably qualified teachers from whom they can recruit.

Welfare to Work Taskforce

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the welfare to work taskforce to visit locations in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6679]

Mr. Hain: The Director of the Employment Service in Wales is currently organising three consultation events to take place in locations throughout Wales at the end of July. I expect the taskforce members to play a prominent role in these events.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the welfare to work taskforce. [6678]

Mr. Hain: None, but my right hon. Friend hopes to announce the membership of the taskforce later this month.

Unskilled Manual Workers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to assist unskilled manual workers. [6668]

Mr. Hain: The minimum wage, the social chapter, the working hours directive and statutory recognition of trade unions are all of immediate relevance. The fiscal measures we announced in the Budget will help with workers' household finances. The Education and Training Action Group, supporting our objective of lifelong learning, will help people acquire skills which will lead to more highly paid employment.

Skilled Workers (Deeside)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of resources available to increase the number of skilled people in employment on Deeside; and if he will make a statement. [6670]

Mr. Hain: The North Wales Training and Enterprise Council and Deeside College have substantial resources to promote skills training for employment in Deeside. Extra resources to help unemployed people gain training and employment will be available through the welfare to work programme. Employers have the primary responsibility for training their employees.

Job Creation

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to assist job creation for young unemployed people. [6672]

Mr. Hain: The Government's New Deal will offer all 18–24 year olds in Wales, who have been unemployed for six months or more, a quality opportunity to get back to work.

Nursery Education

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his targets in respect of the availability of full-time places in nursery schools for all children claiming a place. [6677]

Mr. Hain: We will be consulting shortly on our commitment to ensure that a free, good quality place is available to all four year olds whose parents want this, together with targets for extending provision for three year olds.

Unemployment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of (a) males and (b) females aged 24 years and under who are out of work. [6673]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Employment status of those aged 16–24, Wales, winter 1996–97

	Males	Females
Total population aged 16–24	165,000	154,000
of which
In employment	97,000	89,000
Not in employment	69,000	65,000
of which
ILO unemployed[1]	30,000	13,000
Students (not ILO unemployed)	30,000	32,000
Looking after family home	[2]—	16,000

Notes:

[1] ILO unemployed: people without a job who were available to start work in the two weeks following their Labour Force Survey interview and who either had looked for work in the four weeks prior to interview or were waiting to start a job they had already obtained.

[2] Sample size too small for reliable estimate to be given.

Source:

Labour Force Survey.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to move long-term unemployed people in (a) Buckley and (b) Deeside into work. [6669]

Mr. Hain: My hon. Friend will be aware that we recently released details of the Government's Welfare to Work programme and how the New Deal will operate in Wales. This will make a significant contribution to getting long-term unemployed people in Buckley and Deeside into work.

School Leavers (Literacy)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to help school leavers with difficulties in (a) reading and (b) writing; and if he will make a statement. [6675]

Mr. Hain: Help is available for these young people to improve their literacy skills either through Further Education or through TEC-supported training.

Target 2000 will encourage a multi-agency approach to developing innovative means of helping young people with learning difficulties. Particular emphasis will be placed on ensuring that all young people are equipped with basic skills, including those of communication.

The Further Education Funding Council for Wales have encouraged FE institutions to provide basic education courses for students with literacy and numeracy problems. The Council are inviting OHMCI to undertake a focused assessment of basic skills provision by the FE sector, to inform future funding decisions. The FEFCW will also take into account the findings of the Kennedy report on Widening Participation in Further Education.

Training (Deeside)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new investment he proposes to make in training facilities for Deeside; and if he will make a statement. [6671]

Mr. Hain: The Further Education Funding Council for Wales and the North Wales Training and Enterprise Council (CELTEC) in collaboration with Further Education Colleges and other training partners have the responsibility for securing training facilities that will meet the needs of the area.

Renovation Grants

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of outstanding renovation grant inquiries received by each county and county borough in Wales in the last 12 months. [6878]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Information on inquiries is available for April–December 1996. During that time local authorities received 12,758 inquiries, 5,900 applications and issued 6,015 approvals. The number of outstanding applications with local authorities at 31 March 1997 was 5,325.

[1] Information on the number of inquiries, applications and approvals are for those grants dealt with under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

[2] Includes those applications at the end of March that were outstanding under both the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 and the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996. For those data marked with an "*", estimates have been provided.

Public Bodies

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those non-departmental public bodies appointed by Royal Charter. [6946]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Arts Council of Wales, the National Library of Wales, the National Museum and Galleries of Wales and the Sports Council for Wales were all established by Royal Charter. The Royal Commission for Ancient and Historical Monuments of Wales was established by Royal Warrant.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7137]

Mr. Ron Davies: An assessment of the effect of the millennium date change has been undertaken. A central unit is co-ordinating this work; around 25 staff are spending some time working on the various systems throughout the Department.

I do not expect there to be any major costs involved in ensuring that my Department's computer systems can cater for the Year 2000.

The project is on schedule.

Residential Care

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has issued to Welsh health authorities in relation to the care of those present residents of institutions for those with learning difficulties assessed as incapable of care in the community; and in what circumstances the leading role in long-term care will be taken by (a) social services and (b) health authorities. [7791]

Mr. Ron Davies: In February 1995 guidance was issued covering NHS responsibilities for meeting continuing health care needs. Health and Local Authorities were asked to agree eligibility criteria and a multi disciplinary assessment determines whether the health or local authority takes the lead in an individual's care. This applies also to those patients with learning disability. Detailed guidance on the care of learning disability patients is contained in the Welsh Mental Handicap Strategy 1983. Guidance was reissued to both health and local authorities in May 1996 following the major reorganisations which took place in both structures.

Cardiff Bay

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Cardiff Bay Development Corporation concerning the implications for powers to use compulsory purchase relating to the contract awarded to the Terraquest company by the corporation and the authority given to the company to negotiate way-leaves with householders over the proposed new horizontal dewatering scheme in six areas of Cardiff. [7797]

Mr. Ron Davies: None. Terraquest have been contracted to determine land ownership and interests in land under the surface of public highways or open space which might be affected by plans for a dewatering scheme in Cardiff. Use of compulsory purchase order powers may not be necessary. This is an operational matter for the Corporation and I have asked the Chief Executive to respond more fully and a copy of his letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Bute Avenue PFI Scheme

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his statement to the Welsh Grand Committee of 30 June, Official Report, column 25, when he anticipates re-advertising the Bute Avenue PFI scheme, as extended to include the Barrage, in the Official Journal of the European Communities. [7814]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Bute Avenue PFI scheme and compliance with the Department's guidance on the European procurement procedure are operational matters for the Cardiff Bay Development Corporation. The Corporation is following the guideline procedures. I have asked the Chief Executive to provide details and I will place a copy of his letter in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Electors Lists

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the constituencies in which the lists of electors voting or not voting in (a) the 1992 general election and (b) the 1993 local elections were purchased, and by whom; and if she will make it her policy to end the availability and sale of such details. [5569]

Mr. Ingram: There are no records held by the Clerk of the Crown's Office, or the 26 Local Councils in Northern Ireland, which show any requests being received for copies of the marked register of electors for constituencies in Northern Ireland for either the 1992 general election or the 1993 local elections.

The purchasing of such information in respect of a general election is provided for in the Representation of the People Act 1983, and for local elections in Northern Ireland this provision is mirrored in the Local Elections (Northern Ireland) Order 1985. If the hon. Gentleman has information as to why this UK wide practice should be altered in the case of Northern Ireland I would be interested to hear it.

Postal Voting Papers

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make it her policy to prohibit postal voting papers issued on grounds of holiday or study absence or for medical reasons being sent to an address other than that on the electoral register of the applicant. [5570]

Mr. Ingram: Under the terms of the Representation of the People Act 1985 and The Representation of the People (Northern Ireland) Regulations 1986 a voter applying for an absent vote must, in addition to the address in respect of which they are or will be registered on the register, provide an address in the UK to which the ballot paper is to be sent.

This applies throughout the United Kingdom and I have no plans at present to alter the position in Northern Ireland.

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Tony Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made towards the establishment of the Electricity Interconnector. [6390]

Mr. Ingram: Progress depends on the outcome of planning applications in Northern Ireland and Scotland. Northern Ireland Electricity plc submitted a second planning application for the Northern Ireland element of the project on 4 April 1997.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland hopes to announce his decision on the application for the Scotland element shortly.

Water Cannon

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Royal Ulster Constabulary last possessed water cannon. [6365]

Mr. Ingram: Water cannons were withdrawn from operational use in or around 1970.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by her Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7199]

Mr. Ingram [holding reply 8 July 1997]: The earliest Northern Ireland Office documents will be due for transfer to the Public Record Offices when they become 30 years old in the year 2002. The Department holds some files concerning Northern Ireland, transferred to it from the Home Office, which are retained under Section 3(4) of the Public Record Act 1958. The earliest retained file held in London is dated 1954 and is entitled "Irish Republican Army Activities—Raid on Gough Barracks Armagh on 12 June 1954". The oldest file held for administrative reasons by the Northern Ireland Office in Belfast is entitled "The Emergency Powers Act (NI) 1926—making of regulations".

There separate administrative arrangements for documents held by the Northern Ireland departments which are subject to the provisions of the Public Records Act (NI) 1923 and the direction of the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Training

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people in the Warrington, North constituency are currently taking part in Government training schemes broken down to show the numbers of (a) women, (b) men and (c) those under 25 years of age. [6660]

Dr. Howells: Information on government-supported training programmes is not available for people living in individual constituencies. North and Mid Cheshire TEC is the nearest geographical breakdown to the Warrington, North parliamentary constituency. The TEC area covers North Warrington, Halton and Vale and mid-Cheshire local authority districts. The available figures are given in the following table.

The DfEE is now making further improvements in training opportunities and developing Youth Credits under Target 2000 with the aim of eventually replacing Youth Training.

Numbers on government-supported training programmes at the end of April 1997

	Total on programme	Female	Male	Under 25
Youth Training	2,000	49	51	100
Modern Apprenticeships	900	43	57	100
Training for Work	400	27	73	29

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many unemployed persons were referred to (i) jobplan workshops, (ii) restart courses, (iii) workwise and worklink, (iv) 1-2-1 and (v) project work in 1996–97; of these, how many (a) attended and (b) completed these courses; and what were the outcomes. [7765]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 10 July 1997:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about Jobplan, Restart Courses, Workwise and Worklink, 1-2-1 and Project Work. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The information you have requested on Jobplan, Restart Courses and Workwise (known as Worklink in Scotland) is given in Table 1.

Information about 1-2-1 and Project Work is given in Tables 2 and 3 respectively. However, we do not hold the information in the format in which you have requested it.

It may help if I explain that during 1-2-1, jobseekers are offered concentrated help with an Employment Service adviser during a series of up to six caseload interviews. Figures for referrals to 1-2-1 are therefore shown as 'Cases Opened'. Information on the number of caseload interviews each jobseeker attends or completes is not collected. Whilst they can attend up to six, this is dependent on whether they achieve a positive outcome before the final interview.

For Project Work, the reason that the information is not available in the form you have requested is that this pilot consists of two parts. The first part, which begins with a Restart interview with an adviser, is a period of intensive help during which participants are offered the full range of programmes available to long term unemployed people as well as a series of caseload interviews with an adviser. If the person is still unemployed at the end of the period of intensive help, they are required to attend a work experience programme with a provider. Separate information for the same cohort on the number of people referred to a Project Work provider is not available. The outcomes reported therefore relate to both parts of the pilot.

I hope this is helpful.

Restart Interviews

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many restart interviews were conducted in 1996–97; and, of these, how many claimants (a) were placed directly into a job, (b) claimed other benefits, (c) entered a Government programme and (d) signed off from claiming benefit. [7766]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 10 July 1997:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about restart interviews and their outcomes. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

The figures that you have requested are shown in the following table:

Outcomes of restart interviews (1996–97)

	Number
Number of restart interviews	3,270,278
Placings	147,021
Claimed other benefits	65,962
Government programmes	507,167
Signed off from claiming	316,574

I hope this is helpful.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many claimants had their jobseeker's allowance reduced during 1996–97 for (a) two weeks and (b) four weeks for not attending or failing to complete (i) jobplan workshops, (ii) restart courses, (iii) workwise and worklink, (iv) 1-2-1, (v) project work and (vi) non-prescribed Government programmes where referral was under a jobseeker's direction. [7733]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Terry Rooney, dated 10 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question about how many claimants had their Jobseeker's Allowance reduced during 1996/97 for: (a) two weeks and (b) fours weeks, for not attending or failing to complete (i) jobplan workshops, (ii) restart courses, (iii) workwise and worklink, (iv) 1-2-1, (v) Project Work and (vi) non-prescribed Government programmes where referral was under a jobseeker's Direction. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Employment Service.

Information on the number of Adjudication Officers' decisions and opinions, and disallowance rates, is contained in a published document entitled "Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions". This provides information on all of the labour market entitlement and sanction questions arising on claims. Copies of this document are held in the Library of the House.

Unfortunately, information is not available in the form you request. However, it may be helpful if I explain that a total of 763 sanctions were imposed in 1996/97 for:

refusal of a place on a training scheme or employment programme, failure to attend a place on a training scheme or employment programme, giving up a place on a training scheme or employment programme, losing a place on a training scheme or employment programme through misconduct, and neglect to avail of a place on a training scheme or employment programme.

Schemes and programmes included in this definition are Jobplan Workshops, Restart Courses, Workwise, Worklink, and Project Work. Employment Service statistics do not identify the number of sanctions relating to each programme, nor do they differentiate between two week and four week sanctions.

The total number of sanctions imposed in 1996/97 for refusal or failure to carry out a Jobseeker's Direction was 215. It is not possible to say whether any of these related to employment programmes.

There is no specific sanction relating to failure to attend 1-2-1 interviews, but entitlement to Jobseeker's Allowance can be lost if a person fails to attend, without good cause, any Employment Service advisory interview. The total number of sanctions on these grounds during 1996/97 was 110.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of people aged 18 to 24 years who will face a benefit sanction of 100 per cent. of their jobseeker's allowance at any time during the first full year of operation of the welfare-to-work proposals. [7771]

Mr. Howarth: We have made no such estimates. We shall offer high quality options of work and training which we expect to be attractive to those eligible to participate in the New Deal.

Student Loans

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reason there is an upper age limit for student loans; and if he will make a statement. [7095]

Dr. Howells: Loans are made with the expectation that they will be repaid. Older students are less likely to repay loans, because of the shorter time they will work after graduation. But they are more likely to have access to other funds, such as savings or commercial loans.

New Deal

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the funding methodology for young people on New Deal who are participating in the employment option. [7690]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Employers will be offered a subsidy equivalent to £60 a week for 26 weeks, if they recruit a young person who is eligible for the New Deal. They will be required to provide training, or to release the young person for training, for one day a week. Funding of £750 per person will be made available. The young people recruited in this way will be full employees, in regular work, and will be remunerated accordingly.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what targets he is setting for the outputs of the New Deal. [7686]

Mr. Smith: In due course, we will be setting and publishing targets through the Employment Service's 1998–99 Annual Performance Agreement.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action will be taken against young people who consistently refuse to participate in New Deal. [7687]

Mr. Smith: All four options under the New Deal will be designed to provide opportunities of genuine quality to help young people improve their employability and get into work. As rights and responsibilities go together, there will be no fifth option on full benefit. Benefit sanctions will be applied to those young people who are assessed by an Adjudication Officer to have unreasonably refused to take up a place on an option notified to them by an employment officer. Persistent refusal could result in a succession of sanctions.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how the New Deal for young people will be linked to modern apprenticeships; and what is his policy towards the development of national traineeships. [7688]

Mr. Smith: Progression to a modern apprenticeship may be an appropriate next step for some of the young people aged 18–24 who achieve NVQ level 2 qualifications as part of their participation in the New Deal.

Our view is that national traineeships, which focus chiefly on 16 and 17-year-olds and build on the design principles of the successful modern apprenticeships, will play an important part in achieving the objectives of Target 2000. It is vital that we improve substantially on current levels of participation and achievement to NVQ level 2 post 16 if we are to ensure that young people are qualified for the jobs of the next century. Target 2000 provides the broad policy framework for that, and the work based route has a vital role to play.

Ministerial Visits (Schools)

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those schools visited by each Minister with responsibility for schools since their appointment, indicating the dates of each visit. [7667]

Dr. Howells: Details requested of ministerial visits to schools up to 9 July are as follows:

	School
Secretary of State:
11 June	Saint Matthew's Church School, London
13 June	Abraham Moss School, Manchester
24 June	St. Vincent's de Paul School, London

Employment Service

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the annual performance targets for the Employment Service in 1997–98; and what were the targets and outcomes achieved in 1996–97. [7734]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Employment Service targets for 1997–98 were published by the previous administration on March 19, 1997. We are in the final stages of reviewing these and the revised Annual Performance Agreement for 1997–98 which will include targets will be published before the end of this month.

The following table gives details of performance in 1996–97. During that year Employment Service performance was adversely affected by the unprecedented effort required to introduce and operate successfully the Labour Market System and the Jobseeker's Allowance.

Employment Service performance against targets in 1996–97

Indicators	Target	Achieved
Placings of Unemployed people[1]	1.97 million at a unit cost of £212 assuming 2.66 million vacancies notified	1.685 million unit cost £234 2.67 million vacancies notified

Positive outcomes from 24 month interventions	35 per cent.	30 per cent.
Referrals to and starts on Training for Work	489,000 referrals 163,000 starts	394,000 referrals 150,300 starts
New claims not pursued	10 per cent.	11 per cent.
Submissions to Adjudication	215,000	202,800
Training for Work allowance payments	97 per cent. by value to be accurate	98 per cent.
Percentage of JSA Claimants offered a Jobseeker's Agreement (October 1996–March 1997)[2]	100 per cent.	98.9 per cent.
Accuracy of UB payment (April–September 1996)[3]	97 per cent.	96.8 per cent.
Speed of UB first payments where UB is the first payment made (April–September 1996)[3]	75 per cent. with 12 days	74.7 per cent. within 12 days
Efficiency savings	£43 million	£44.34 million

[1] The Employment Service has recently taken action to ensure that job placings are recorded strictly in accordance with ES procedures. This may impact on future levels of recorded performance. Past levels of recorded performance may have been overstated.
[2] Target from October 1996 following the introduction of the Jobseeker's Allowance.
[3] This work transferred to the Benefits Agency following the introduction of the Jobseeker's Allowance in October 1996.

Training and Enterprise Councils (Special Needs)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what targets for special needs training are included in the contracts for each of the training and enterprise councils; when the contracts are due for review; and if he will make a statement. [6682]

Dr. Howells: All TECs have targets for the numbers of unemployed adults with disabilities joining Training for Work and young people endorsed as having special training needs in Youth Training. TECs are required to ensure that all trainees on their programmes have a training plan based on an assessment of their individual needs, including any special training needs, TEC contracts are reviewed regularly and renegotiated in March each year.

University Research

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the quality of British university research relative to that of other comparable countries. [6939]

Dr. Howells: None. But the Research Assessment Exercise conducted periodically by the higher education funding bodies assesses the quality of higher education research in the UK against an international standard of excellence. Further, the Higher Education Funding Council for England has commissioned a study on the international standing of research undertaken in English higher education institutions.

In addition, earlier this year, the Office of Science and Technology published a paper on "The Quality of the UK Science Base", which measured the performance of the UK science base in comparison with that of other countries. This showed that with only 1 per cent. of the world's population the UK carried out 5.5 per cent. of the world's research effort and was a major force in research with an 8.0 per cent. share of world scientific publications and a 9.1 per cent. share of world citations.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list in rank order the pupil-teacher ratio for (a) secondary and (b) primary schools of each local education authority and their ranking in respect of the number of GCSE grades A to C obtained. [7326]

Dr. Howells: The following table lists in rank order for each local education authority the percentage of pupils obtaining five or more GCSEs at grades A–C in 1995–96 together with the pupil-teacher ratio in (a) secondary schools and (b) primary schools. In each case the local education authority's rank order is given.

[1] The figures for GCSE achievements and pupil teacher ratio are based on LEA maintained and grant maintained schools in England.
[2] The percentage of 15-year-old pupils achieving 5 or more GCSE grades A*–C is based on those pupils aged 15 on roll in maintained schools in January 1996.

Pupils (Staying-on Rates)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the staying-on rates at school at age 15 years for each local authority for the last five years. [7329]

Mr. Byers: The following table shows by LEA the percentage continuing in school at age 16, the first year after the end of compulsory education. The percentage will be comparatively lower in LEAs where 16 year olds can transfer to a sixth form college or a tertiary college. Others will continue their education and training in further education colleges or in the workplace.

GCSE Scores

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list in rank order (a) the percentage of pupils obtaining five or more GCSEs at grades A to C in 1995–96 in each local education authority and (b) the expenditure per pupil; and if he will make a statement. [7325]

Dr. Howells: The following table lists in rank order for each local education authority the percentage of pupils obtaining five or more GCSEs at grade C or above in 1995–96 together with the expenditure per secondary pupil. In each case, the local education authority's rank order is indicated.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7196]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 8 July 1997]: There is no material, appropriate for transfer to the Public Record Office, retained by the Department at this time.

Lifelong Learning

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps he is taking to widen participation in lifelong learning following the publication of the Kennedy report. [7127]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 9 July 1997]: The Further Education Funding Council is consulting widely about Helena Kennedy's report to it and we will consider carefully the views expressed and advice from others, including the Advisory Group on Continuing Education and Lifelong Learning chaired by Professor Bob Fryer. Our plans for widening participation will be set out in a White Paper on Lifelong Learning in the Autumn.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7145]

Dr. Howells: The Department is on schedule to achieve the milestones identified by the Central IT Unit, Cabinet Office in response to the Year 2000 problem. By October 1997, we expect to produce a "prioritised" and fully costed plan for undertaking the appropriate and cost justified work. System modification and testing should be completed by December 1998. Accurate figures of the likely cost of dealing with the Year 2000 problem will not be available until the completion of the prioritised plan. The cost of remedial and preventative action will be met from within existing departmental provision.

Job Clubs

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to extend the criteria for eligibility for attendance at job clubs to those who have had a series of brief periods of temporary unemployment but are otherwise long-term unemployed. [7109]

Mr. Alan Howarth: There are no plans at present to change the eligibility criteria for this programme.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. David Chaytor, dated July 1997:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about extending the criteria for attendance at Jobclubs. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Normally, a jobseeker must be continually unemployed for a period of at least 26 weeks before they become eligible to join a Jobclub. However, breaks in this period (for example, for short term work or holidays) can be discounted provided that this does nto exceed a total of 28 days.

There are no plans at present to change the eligibility criteria for this programme.

I hope this is helpful.

Engineering

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many female engineering undergraduates entered universities in the United Kingdom in each year since 1986; [7052]

(2) how many women graduated at first degree level in engineering in each year since 1988. [7053]

Dr. Howells: The available information is given in the following table.

Care should be taken in comparing the graduate and entrant numbers to derive "graduation rates" because graduates from a particular entrant cohort will not necessarily graduate together in the same year. Moreover, there are timing/coverage differences between the entrant and graduate figures throughout the time series as footnoted in the table.

Female engineering students at first degree level in the UK (000s)

Year[1]	[2]Entrants	[3]Graduates
1986	1.8	—
1987	1.9	—
1988	1.9	1.3
1989	2.5	1.3
1990	2.9	1.6

1992	3.5	2.2
1993	4.1	2.5
1994	4.8	2.9
1995	4.7	3.2
1996	4.5	3.5

[1] From 1994–95 data were collected by the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA).

[2] Data are for academic years. From 1988 figures include entrants to all higher education institutions including universities, polytechnics and other HE establishments. Prior to 1988, entrants to English establishments other than universities and polytechnics are excluded. Entrants to first degree study in further education establishments are excluded throughout.

[3] Data are for calendar years up to 1993–94 and academic years thereafter. Up to 1994, graduates from all institutions including further education institutions are included. Thereafter graduates from FEIs are excluded.

Further Education Funding (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with the Further Education Funding Council over the level of funding for further education colleges in Worcestershire, with particular reference to Evesham College; and if he will make a statement. [6772]

Dr. Howells: None. It is for the Further Education Funding Council to make decisions concerning the funding allocations to colleges.

Full Employment

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what commitments he has made in respect of achieving full employment. [7319]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government's central economic objective is to achieve high and stable levels of growth and employment. This will be pursued by running a successful low inflation economy, with macro-economic stability as a platform for sustainable growth, and by enhancing skills and improving the operation of the labour market to open up job opportunities to all groups in society.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his Department's definition of full employment. [7318]

Mr. Smith: The Department has no such definition. The Government's objective is to achieve high and stable levels of growth and employment, and a fair society in which everyone can share in higher living standards and greater job opportunities.

Primary Class Sizes

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many five, six and seven-year-olds in classes taught by one teacher are in classes of 31 pupils or more, in (a) Newham, (b) Tower Hamlets, (c) Hackney, (d) Redbridge, (e) Waltham Forest and (f) Barking and Dagenham, expressed in (i) absolute terms and (ii) as a proportion of all five, six and seven-year-olds; and what are the corresponding figures for the United Kingdom. [6856]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The information is not available in the form requested.

Provisional estimates of the numbers and percentages of pupils in key stage 1 classes taught by one teacher in maintained primary schools for each local education authority area as requested and England are shown in the table.

Numbers and percentages of pupils in Key Stage 1 Classes[1] taught by one teacher with 31 or more pupils in maintained primary schools

January 1997 (provisional estimates)

	Number	Percentage
Newham	1,262	14
Tower Hamlets	475	7
Hackney	540	10
Redbridge	2,331	32
Waltham Forest	916	13
Barking and Dagenham	909	14
England	476,934	29

[1] Includes reception classes. Information on class sizes in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland is the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for these countries.

Nursery Education

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of (a) three-year-olds and (b) four-year-olds currently have nursery places in (i) Newham, (ii) Tower Hamlets, (iii) Hackney, (iv) Redbridge, (v) Waltham Forest and (vi) Barking and Dagenham; and what are the corresponding figures for the United Kingdom. [6815]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 7 July 1997]: Provisional figures for 1997 show that the percentages of three and four-year-olds in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools in England were 33 and 24 per cent. respectively. Figures for percentages of three and four-year-olds for local education authority areas in England are not sufficiently reliable for publication.

Provisional estimates of the percentages of pupils under five years of age in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools for each local education authority area as requested and England are shown in the following table.

Percentage[1] of children under five years of age in maintained nursery schools and nursery classes in maintained primary schools January 1997 (provisional estimates)

	Number
Newham	53
Tower Hamlets	61
Hackney	32
Redbridge	25
Waltham Forest	39
Barking and Dagenham	48
England	29

HEALTH

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Slough (Fiona Mactaggart) of 10 June, Official Report, columns 427-28, what is his definition of genuine health need for the purposes of determining priority for hospital projects seeking funding from public capital. [6822]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive National Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group has recently been tasked with evaluating all major capital projects in the NHS on the basis of service need.

The criteria for measuring health service need is expected to be similar to that used to assess service need in the recent Private Finance Initiative prioritisation exercise, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what criteria will be employed to determine the priority for funding from public capital of projects deemed unsuitable as a PFI project; [6795]

(2) if he will list the criteria which will be used to select hospitals for inclusion in his future list of projects to be pursued by the PFI. [6793]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive National Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group will review all major acute schemes on the basis of health service need, regardless whether they are to be funded from public or private capital.

The criteria for measuring health service need is expected to be similar to that used to assess service need in the recent Private Finance Initiative prioritisation exercise, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the development of alternative models of structuring private finance schemes. [6796]

Mr. Milburn: Alternative models for structuring capital investment projects under the Private Finance Initiative (PFI) will be considered as part of the review of the PFI which I announced on 10 June, Official Report, columns 427–28. The results of the review will be announced towards the end of the year.

Work Load Planning

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement listing by specialty his work load planning assumptions for (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99 and (iii) 1999–2000. [6738]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health does not make central work load planning assumptions. Resources are allocated to health authorities who plan activity according to local needs and priorities.

Health authorities are required to report their planned activity levels to the Department. Plans submitted by health authorities show the following general and acute activity levels for 1997–98.

Health Authority General and Acute Activity Plans, 1997–98 (000s)

Elective activity	Number
Inpatients: FCEs	5,028
of which:
ordinary admissions	1,992
day cases	3,036
Outpatient first attendances	10,475
Emergency Services
Non-elective admissions	4,375
A and E first attendances	12,721

Plans for 1998–99 and 1999–2000 will be available in mid 1998 and mid 1999 respectively.

Clinical Support Services

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's definition of a clinical support service; and if he will publish a list of those services currently used in the NHS. [6797]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health does not have an established definition of clinical support services. As part of the review of Private Finance Initiative, officials will be considering what services may be included in PFI projects and are aiming to produce a list of these by the end of the year.

Medical Procedures

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each purchasing authority those medical procedures for which funding is not currently available. [6803]

Mr. Milburn: Purchasers are responsible for funding those services which are clinically effective and meet the needs of local people in light of the resources available.

Primary Act Pilot Initiative

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when members of the Heywood Associations of Small Practices will hear if their application to be part of the primary act pilot initiative has been approved. [6844]

Mr. Milburn: There are two stages to the application process to enter the personal medical services pilot scheme under the National Health Service (Primary Care) Act 1997. Firstly an expression of interest should have been made by 1 May followed by a formal application. Everyone who has submitted an expression of interest to pilot new contractual arrangements will receive individual feedback on their proposal from their local health authority and will be given the opportunity to re-visit their proposal in light of comments made. A formal application to enter into a personal medical services pilot will need to be submitted to health authorities before 1 November. Applicants will be notified as to whether their application has been approved before the end of December.

NHS Services

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's definition of a clinical service; and if he will publish a list of those services currently used in the NHS. [6798]

Mr. Milburn: The Department of Health does not have an established definition of a clinical service. As part of the review of Private Finance Initiative, officials will be considering what services may be included in PFI projects and are aiming to produce a list of these by the end of the year.

Departmental Annual Report

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will update Table 4.2 of his Department's 1997 annual report. [6804]

Mr. Milburn: Table 4.2 of the 1997 annual report ("Top-sliced Funding Over £10 million: 1996–97 and 1997–98") has been updated and is shown in the table:

Budget	1996–97 £ million[1]	1997–98 £ million[2]
Community Health Councils	21	22
Dental Practice Board	20	20
Prescription Pricing Authority	42	41
Special Hospitals	130	131
National Blood Authority	8	11
All other budgets	24	22
Total	245	247

[1] Initial allocation at 1996–97 prices.[2] Initial allocation at 1997–98 prices.

NHS Expenditure Review

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the remit that his fundamental expenditure review of the NHS will be following; and when he is planning to conclude this work and report back to the Chief Secretary. [6791]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Maples) on 7 July 1997, columns 308–309.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of CJD have been confirmed in each of the last 10 years. [7377]

Ms Jowell: The latest figures on the number of cases of Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease, including new variant CJD, in the United Kingdom were published in a Department of Health press release on 7 July 1997, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

The numbers of deaths recorded from sporadic CJD in England and Wales has increased from about 10 per year at the beginning of the 1970s to about 35 per year in the 1990s. No increase in the annual number of cases in Scotland and Northern Ireland is evident since 1985 (when figures became available). Most of the increase has been in the over 70 age group. The increase is thought to be most likely due to improved ascertainment rather than a real increase in the incidence of disease.

NHS Efficiency Task Force

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish the terms of reference of the NHS efficiency task force; [6942]

(2) by what date he has requested that the NHS efficiency task force complete its work and report to him; [6944]

(3) if he will publish the findings of the NHS efficiency task force; and if he will allow a period for public consultation on its findings. [6943]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service efficiency task force is working with me to explore more efficient ways of delivering high quality patient care. The group has no formal terms of reference but is generating ideas, particularly about areas which are likely to produce benefits over the next eighteen months. The task force will not produce a formal report. Ideas will be taken forward by Ministers and officials with appropriate consultation.

Fertility Treatment

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the provision of NHS fertility treatment. [6928]

Ms Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 20 May 1997, columns 57–58.

Dental Services

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 281, if the figures for dentists on health authority lists are dentists who accept NHS patients. [7384]

Mr. Milburn: All dentists on health authority lists are providing some National Health Service dental treatment.

Long-term Care

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish the conclusions of his discussions with the Local Government Association on 12 May concerning the improvement of provision on long-term care for the elderly; and if he will make a statement. [7223]

Mr. Boateng: The meeting covered a range of topics including long term care. The views of the Local Government Association are valued and will be taken into account as we decide what action to take on provision of long-term care for the elderly.

Capital Investment

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ipswich (Mr. Cann) of 6 June, Official Report, column 282, for what reasons the costs were higher in 1992–93 than in 1996–97. [7383]

Mr. Milburn: In 1992–93 the dental fee scale that was in place was delivering a higher target net income than the Doctor and Dentists Review Body (DDRB) had recommended. Since January 1994, the way in which dental remuneration is set has changed; the DDRB has recommended a percentage uplift in the fees. Despite the increase in fees from 1994, changes to the complexity and volume of work done under the General Dental Service have meant that treatment costs in 1996–97 have only returned close to 1992–93 levels.

Prescription Fraud

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to reduce prescription fraud in the NHS in cases where the control over prescribing has been devolved by doctors to pharmacists. [7323]

Mr. Milburn: Doctors may not devolve their responsibilities for prescribing to pharmacists.

Health Authority Membership

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will answer the question from the right hon. Member for South-West Surrey of 3 July on the number of Labour and Liberal Democrat hon. Members of the House of Commons and the House of Lords who served on NHS health authorities or trusts. [8017]

Mr. Milburn: The question was answered on 9 July, column 500.

Postal and Proxy Forms (Charges)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances general practitioners are permitted to charge people for signing postal and proxy forms; and what guidance his Department has provided on this issue. [6658]

Mr. Milburn: General practitioners are not permitted to charge patients for signing a postal or proxy form to enable a person to be registered as an absent voter on grounds of physical incapacity. This is set out in Schedule 9 of the National Health Service (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992.

Health Services (Warrington)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ascertain the views of people in the Warrington, North constituency on local national health service services. [7218]

Mr. Milburn: North Cheshire Health Authority has recently developed a system of relationships and networks in local communities, including Warrington, North, to enable residents to put their views and suggestions to the health authority. Participants include health authority and hospital staff, general practitioners, voluntary organisations, community health councils, education and local authority representatives.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide funding for the continuation of the Health Watch Project run by the Warrington Community Health Council. [7219]

Mr. Milburn: I have no plans to do so.

Community Health Councils

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he intends to take to increase the powers of community health councils. [7220]

Mr. Milburn: Community health councils have an important statutory role in representing the interests of the public in their districts in the National Health Service. We will be keeping this under review as we develop proposals for wider changes to the NHS which we will outline later this year in a White Paper on our plans to replace the internal market.

Biotechnological Inventions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has undertaken into the possible human health implications of the draft European Parliament and Council directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions; and if he will make a statement. [7343]

Ms Jowell: Primary responsibility for taking forward developments and negotiations on this directive rests not with the Department, but with the Department of Trade and Industry. The Department has not carried out research into the human health implications of the directive. The European Parliament is due to give its first Opinion on the draft proposal next week, and the draft is likely to be amended further by the Commission. When the terms of the proposals to be put to Council of Ministers are known, we understand that the DTI will be undertaking further studies.

However, in relation to the human health implications of the draft proposal, we should add that whilst the patent system is designed to encourage research by providing a limited monopoly to allow companies to recoup their investment, a patent only gives its holder rights to prevent others from using an invention. The patent holder must comply with all other legislation and regulations if the invention is to be made.

Community Care (Transitional Grant)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each of the last five years the amount his Department paid to each local authority in respect of special transitional grant for community care and the percentage change from one year to the next. [7435]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested has been placed in the Library. There is no direct link between one year's allocation of special transitional grant and the next for the following reasons:

- the effect of Local Authorities reorganisation (the number of new unitary authorities that have been created and the subsequent effect on boundaries); and
- each year's STG is incorporated into the Personal Social Services Standard Spending Assessments for the following year, so that year's allocation is in addition to, and not a replacement for the previous allocation.

A table showing a better overview of community care funding has also been placed in the Library as has an additional table which shows total resources provided for local authority community care responsibilities, together with the annual percentage change.

Social Services (Charges)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to issue new guidance to local authorities on charging for social services. [7436]

Mr. Boateng: The Government has no immediate plans to issue guidance. This is a complex matter where there are considerable concerns about how satisfactory the current framework is. We are actively reviewing this area.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) planned into the charging policies of local authority social services departments; and if he will publish the research. [7437]

Mr. Boateng: No specific research on social services charging policies has been commissioned by the Department of Health, nor is any planned, although some evaluative research on the community care reforms touches on charging issues. The Department is aware of recent research on social services charging policies such as that published by the Joseph Rowntree Foundation, and has given this due consideration. The Department receives regular feedback on social services charging practices around the country, through local authority statistical returns and the Social Services Inspectorate.

Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the final outcome of the prioritisation exercise to be carried out by the NHS Executive Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group will be subject to Treasury approval; [7790]

(2) if he will publish the membership of the NHS Executive Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group; [7799]

(3) what methodology and criteria will be used by the NHS Executive Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group in determining those projects which in Spring 1998 will be announced as (a) proceeding via the PFI or i(b) being funded from public sector capital; [7796]

(4) if he will make a statement on the criteria that will apply in the national capital prioritisation exercise to be undertaken by the NHS Executive Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group; [7808]

(5) what plans he has to hold meetings of the NHS Executive Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group in public; [7798]

(6) if he will list the criteria to be used by its NHS Executive Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group in coming to its decisions. [7795]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service Executive National Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group will comprise of senior members of both NHS Executive headquarters and regional offices. It will consider the case for all future major capital schemes and make recommendations to Ministers on priorities for both major publicly funded and Private Finance Initiative schemes. Details of its membership and working arrangements are being considered by Ministers and have not yet been finalised.

It is expected that the criteria for measuring health service need will be similar to that used to assess service need in the recent Private Finance Initiative prioritisation exercise, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

PFI Hospital Projects

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those approved PFI hospital projects which currently do not have 1:50 scale architects' drawings available. [7788]

Mr. Milburn: Of the 14 major acute sector schemes selected for prioritisation as part of the first stage of the review of the Private Finance Initiative in the National Health Service, only two schemes, Dartford and Gravesham and Norfolk and Norwich have been approved. The 1:50 drawings have been produced by Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust and signed off by the trust's clinical staff. Norfolk and Norwich NHS Trust plans to develop the 1:50 scale drawings further with its private sector partner as the construction, building and engineering infrastructure of the PFI scheme progresses.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each of his approved PFI hospital scheme the amount of money given to the relevant hospital trust to bridge the affordability gap. [7775]

Mr. Milburn: The trusts with prioritised Private Finance Initiative schemes which have been offered funds from the support scheme are shown in the list. The trusts are still negotiating with their private sector partners to bring these projects to financial close. Therefore, the amount of support being offered to each trust is commercial in confidence. However the total cost of the support scheme is not expected to exceed £9 million a year, less than 1 per cent. of the total National Health Service capital budget.

- Bishop Auckland Hospitals NHS Trust
- Bromley Hospitals NHS Trust
- Calderdale Healthcare NHS Trust
- Carlisle Hospitals NHS Trust
- Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust
- Hereford Hospitals NHS Trust
- North Durham Acute Hospitals NHS Trust
- Swindon and Marlborough NHS Trust
- Wellhouse NHS Trust
- Worcester Royal Infirmary NHS Trust.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of how NHS trusts unsuccessful in achieving priority status for their PFI hospital project will be expected to deal with costs which have so far been incurred but which would have been capitalised had its project been successful. [7813]

Mr. Milburn: Those trusts unsuccessful in achieving priority status have been asked to cease any further action on their Private Finance Initiative projects and stand down their private sector partner if they have selected one. These schemes will be eligible for consideration by the National Health Service Executive's Capital Prioritisation Advisory Group. This Group will consider all major acute schemes on the basis of health service need and recommend schemes to go forward either as part of the next tranche of PFI schemes or for funding from available public sector capital.

All PFI professional services are charged to trusts' revenue in accordance with United Kingdom GAAP (General Accepted Accounting Practice), in particular the fundamental accounting principal of prudence which means that, due to uncertainty about the outcome of projects, expenditure such as professional fees should be charged to revenue.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to make available funds to bridge future affordability gaps which arise in the next round of announcements of PFI approved hospitals. [7774]

Mr. Milburn: There are no plans at present to extend the support scheme to further schemes.

Donepezil

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had with (a) health authorities, (b) clinicians and (c) voluntary organisations about the introduction of the drug donepezil. [7726]

Mr. Milburn: We have consulted health authorities, the Standing Medical Advisory Committee and the Alzheimers Society over the possible issuing of guidance on the introduction of this drug.

Elderly Patients

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost to the NHS of patients aged over 60 years. [7809]

Mr. Boateng: Figures on Hospital and Community Health (HCHS) services are set out in the Department of Health, Government Expenditure plans, copies of which are available in the Library. People aged 65 and over account for some 41 per cent. of total HCHS spending although they make up 16 per cent. of the population. In 1994–95 it was estimated that £9,191 million of the total £22,237 million HCHS spending was devoted to people aged 65 and over.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what percentage of patients aged over 60 years use the NHS each year. [7812]

Mr. Boateng: Figures for the estimated number of finished consultant episodes for people aged 60 and over are shown in the table. This does not include out-patient attendances, which are collected and published annually in "Outpatients and ward attenders for England", as these data are not broken down by age group. Information on the number of patients registered with General Practitioners on 1 April and 1 October of each year for people aged 65 and over is available in "General Medical Services Statistics for England and Wales". The latest version for 1 October 1996 is available in the Library.

Estimated number of Finished Consultant Episodes (FCEs), ordinary admissions and day cases combined, NHS hospitals, England 1994–95

	Number
Total number of FCEs	10,550,213
Number of FCEs aged 60 and over	3,611,898
Percentage of total FCEs	34.2

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the recommendations contained in the Alzheimer's Disease Society's report, "No Accounting for Health", a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement. [7736]

Mr. Boateng: We welcome the Alzheimer's Disease Society report, "No Accounting for Health". The recommendations will help raise the profile of the issues concerning those suffering from dementia. It will complement the guidance recently issued in the Handbook Mental Health and Older People.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Community Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to increase the community care grant budget. [7365]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The size and composition of the discretionary Social Fund budget is determined annually. The budget for 1998–99, including provision for community care grants will be announced in March next year.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in the third and fourth quarters of 1996–97, how many jobseeker's allowance claimants (a) applied for and (b) received hardship payments; and what percentage of all sanctioned claimants received a payment in the categories (i) voluntary unemployment or as a result of misconduct, (ii) availability for work, (iii) actively seeking work, (iv) refusing employment, (v) refusing or failing to attend a compulsory Government programme, (vi) jobseeker's agreement and (vii) jobseeker's direction. [7727]

Mr. Bradley: Our Welfare to Work objectives are to provide work incentives, to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to strike a new balance between rights and responsibilities. We will ensure that Jobseeker's Allowance supports this new balance.

The number of jobseekers who applied for hardship payments in the period October 1996 to November 1996 and December 1996 to February 1997 were 3,000 and 15,000 respectively. The numbers of hardship awards made for the same periods were 2,000 and 11,000. A breakdown of hardship awards made by reason for sanction is not presently available.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, in each quarter since 1995, what proportion of jobseeker's allowance claimants reported income from employment; what were the mean and median levels of earnings declared; and what was the breakdown of weekly earnings in £10 bands for (i) single jobseeker's allowance claimants, (ii) couples receiving income based jobseeker's allowance and (iii) lone parents in receipt of income support. [7731]

Mr. Bradley: Jobseeker's allowance replaced income support and unemployment benefit as the main benefit for the unemployed in October 1996. Information on the numbers of people receiving jobseeker's allowance who have income from employment is not yet available. In addition, data prior to November 1995 are not reliable. Such information as is available is contained in the tables.

Proportion of unemployed claimants who have reported income from employment; mean and median declared earnings: November 1995 to August 1996

Great Britain

Income Support

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in the first two quarters of 1996–97 how many claimants of income support (a) applied for and (b) received hardship payments; and what percentage of all sanctioned claimants received a payment in the categories (i) voluntary unemployment or result of misconduct, (ii) availability for work, (iii) actively seeking work, (iv) refusing employment and (v) refusing or failing to attend project work. [7728]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Unemployed people who were not able to demonstrate that they were available for and actively seeking work were not entitled to income support, but could apply for hardship payments if they would have otherwise suffered hardship. The number of hardship applications and awards for the period in question is in the table.

Reason	Quarter ending May 1996		Quarter ending August 1996
	Applications	Awards	Applications	Awards
Not available for work	2,985	1,432	2,828	1,238
Not actively seeking work	1,702	469	1,415	412

Prior to the introduction of jobseeker's allowance claimants who were refused income support because of voluntary unemployment or misconduct or who refused employment or training did not lose their entitlement to income support but had a voluntary unemployment deduction imposed instead. The information for these individual categories is not available, but the table gives the overall numbers who had a voluntary unemployment deduction imposed.

May 1996: 25,000

August 1996: 26,000.

Back-to-work Bonus

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants have established a back-to-work bonus and how many have qualified for a cash payment under the scheme in each quarter since 1996; and what is the average level of existing bonuses and cash payments awarded. [7732]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We will be evaluating the effectiveness of the back-to-work bonus scheme in the context of our welfare-to-work objectives, which are to provide work incentives, and to reduce poverty, and to tackle welfare dependency.

Back-to-work Bonus statistics[1]

	Number of claimants qualifying for and receiving a bonus payment in each quarter[2]
7 October 1996–November 1996	1,000
December 1996–February 1997	4,000
March 1997–May 1997	10,000

These figures are subject to revision.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if it is her Department's policy under the Benefit Integrity Project to (a) withdraw benefits from disabled people who do not return the postal questionnaire within the specified time and (b) allow extra time for completing the questionnaire following a telephone call to a disability benefit centre. [6784]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to rebuild integrity in, and public support for, the Social Security system and the way in which public money is spent. We need to focus on those who are properly entitled to benefit.

This is why we have set up the Benefit Integrity Project. We regard it as essential that disabled people are treated fairly and with respect, and in an unthreatening way. The administration of this programme is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 9 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the Benefit Integrity Project.

The Benefit Integrity Project was set up in response to the recent Benefit Review of Disability Living Allowance (DLA). Over the next two years, specially trained staff will make enquiries by postal questionnaire or home visit in around 425,000 cases to establish whether DLA is being paid correctly.

Disability Living Allowance will only be withheld from customers who, without good reason, persistently fail or refuse to complete and return the postal questionnaire issued by the Benefit Integrity Project. A reminder and a warning letter, both allowing extra time to comply or respond and offering help and advice, will be issued before benefit is withheld.

All staff, including those involved with the project, receive customer service training. If a customer makes a reasonable request, either by letter or telephone call, for extra time to complete the questionnaire, it will be allowed.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Benefits Fraud Hotline

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) malicious calls and (b) well intended but unfounded calls were made to the Benefits Fraud Hotline in the last year; what is each as a percentage of the total number of calls; and what was the average cost of investigating each such call. [6453]

Mr. Denham: Fraud within a system designed to help those in need is anti-social behaviour. We will be vigilant in tackling benefit fraud but we will ensure that those in need are not victimised and have nothing to fear.

Questions on Benefits Agency operational matters are the responsibility of the Chief Executive, Peter Mathison. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 9 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many malicious calls and well intended but unfounded calls were made to the Benefits Fraud Hotline in the last year; what is each as a percentage of the total number of calls; and what was the average cost of investigating each such call.

Calls to the Hotline are not collated in the format you have requested. It may be helpful if I explain that since its introduction on 5 August 1996, the National Benefit Fraud Hotline received 243,556 calls up to the end of May 1997. Of this number 57,139 calls were from customers without information to report. These include callers requesting an update on a previous call and wrong numbers.

The remaining calls undergo a sift process. Each case is scrutinised to establish whether a fraud investigation is appropriate. 186,417 calls have provided information which has been referred to Benefits Agency fraud staff for further scrutiny. So far, 148,071 referrals have been checked and of these 58,095 cases have been discarded with no further action undertaken. The remaining 89,976 cases have been referred for further investigation. The number of calls which so far have led to the detection of fraud is 11,597, which has generated weekly benefit savings of £35m. There are currently 53,356 calls on which results are outstanding.

Discarded referrals include a proportion relating to malicious and well intended but unfounded calls as well as those reporting information already investigated and referrals not containing enough information to carry out an investigation. The number of discarded cases represent 24 per cent of the total number of calls received by the Hotline. Although we do not record the average cost of investigating these type of cases, it is possible, in broad terms, to estimate the average cost of an investigation based on the major components of fraud activity. It should be emphasized that investigations are diverse in nature, complexity and length. The average cost of an investigation is £43.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to simplify the initial claim form for disability living allowance. [6972]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is to improve the service provided to claimants and other customers. This is why the design and clarity of claim forms are subject to periodic review. The administration of Disability Living Allowance is the responsibility of Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Burstow, dated 9 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what plans she has to simplify the initial claim form for Disability Living Allowance (DLA).

In April 1997, following extensive consultation, a new claim pack designed specifically for claims made in respect of children was introduced. A revised DLA adult claim pack is currently being widely tested with a planned release date of October 1997. The same changes will be reflected in the Attendance Allowance claim pack.

Whilst the claim pack gathers detailed information about the needs arising from disability and is necessarily lengthy, the main objective is to enable all customers to describe fully the effect of their disabilities. They are now also asked to provide details of who they feel is the best professional person for us to approach, should further evidence be required.

The Benefits Agency has a commitment to produce forms which are of a high standard and all forms are subject to regular review.

I hope you find this reply useful.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Power

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will take steps to make mandatory the use of continuous enrichment monitoring, for nuclear materials verification of enrichment facilities. [6398]

Mrs. Roche: Continuous enrichment monitoring is one of a number of techniques which can be used in the safeguarding of centrifuge enrichment facilities. Selection of the particular techniques to be used is made on a case-by-case basis taking into account facility specific considerations. Operation of the continuous enrichment monitor (CEMO) at Urenco's Capenhurst facility has shown the equipment to be cost-effective and reliable for confirming the non-production of highly enriched uranium (HEU). Technical discussions are currently taking place concerning the more widespread application of the technique.

Nuclear Material

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 23 June, Official Report, column 390, on nuclear material, if she will list (i) the quantities of the nuclear fuel imported, (ii) the type of the nuclear fuel imported and (iii) the current locations of the nuclear fuel imported from France. [6987]

Mr. Battle: Nuclear fuel has been imported into the United Kingdom from France only by the UKAEA. One shipment of nuclear fuel was imported from France in 1996. Since details of such imports are operational matters for the UKAEA I have asked the Chairman of the UKAEA to reply directly to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much (a) her Department and (b) the research councils have spent on nuclear fusion research for each year from 1985 to date. [6901]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 7 July 1997]: The Department of Trade and Industry and former Department of Energy have funded fusion research through the Government Fusion Programme managed by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority (UKAEA). Total expenditure under the Fusion Programme, including contributions to the Joint European Torus project, for each year since the UKAEA's establishment as a trading fund in 1986 is shown below.

Year	£ million
1986–87	23.1
1987–88	22.0
1988–89	24.1
1989–90	24.1
1990–91	21.9
1991–92	20.1
1992–93	16.0
1993–94	16.3
1994–95	15.7
1995–96	15.9
1996–97	12.1

Figures on a comparable basis are not readily available on a year by year basis for the UKAEA's pre-trading fund period. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with figures for the research council and place a copy in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer of 23 June, Official Report, columns 390–91, what quantities of (a) surplus and (b) current US fissile materials are present in the United Kingdom. [6781]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 7 July 1997]: There is no United States owned plutonium or highly enriched uranium held in the UK either by the civil nuclear sector or by the Ministry of Defence.

Working Hours

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the consequences for (a) job creation and (b) re-skilling of measures to reduce working hours. [6936]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Measures to implement the Working Time Directive will be introduced in a sensible and flexible way. We are committed to establishing fair and decent minimum standards at work within a flexible labour market. To create secure jobs and upgrade our skills base, we should compete on quality not by forcing people to work excessively long hours or without holiday entitlement.

Engineering (Women)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to support the Women into Science and Engineering Campaign of the Engineering Council in 1998–99; and if she will make a statement. [7057]

Mr. Battle: The Department's main involvement with the Engineering Council's Women into Science and Engineering (WISE) campaign is largely taken forward through the Development Unit on Women in Science, Engineering and Technology. It has also supported the WISE campaign through its Action for Engineering Initiative. The Development Unit has strong links with WISE, including collaboration on a range of initiatives, and it plans to continue to support the campaign in this way during 1998–99.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to encourage women to enter the engineering profession; and if she will make a statement. [7047]

Mr. Battle: This Government is concerned about the under-representation of women in not only engineering, but science and technology, and is committed to encouraging women to qualify and enter employment in these fields. The Government's objectives are being carried forward through the Development Unit on Women in Science, Engineering and Technology within the Office of Science and Technology (OST) in the Department. We are currently considering how the Unit will be able to benefit from close liaison with the new Women's Unit at The Department of Social Security.

Low Pay Commission

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will set out the current external remuneration, employment and business interests of the chairman of the Low Pay Commission. [7670]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The information requested is on matters personal to the Chairman of the Low Pay Commission.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what will be the maximum daily rate of expenses payable to members of the Low Pay Commission. [7675]

Mr. McCartney: The members of the Low Pay Commission will be eligible to receive travel and subsistence expenses incurred in their work for the Commission at standard Civil Service rates.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in which newspapers and on what dates her Department has advertised for members of the Low Pay Commission; and at what total cost. [7671]

Mr. McCartney: Advertisements for members of the Low Pay Commission appeared in the following newspapers:

	Date
The Times	26 June and 3 July
The Sunday Times	29 June
The Guardian	25 and 28 June
The Western Mail	26 June
Wales on Sunday	29 June
The Scotsman	27 June
Scotland on Sunday	29 June
Belfast Telegraph	27 June
Sunday Life	29 June

The total cost of advertising, including production costs and VAT, was £32,260.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many members will be appointed to the Low Pay Commission from (a) employer and (b) employee backgrounds. [7674]

Mr. McCartney: The Commission will be large enough to ensure that the interests of employers, employees and others are represented without becoming overly large and unwieldy.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date the Low Pay Commission will hold its initial meeting. [7672]

Mr. McCartney: The Low Pay Commission will begin its work as soon as possible.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will set out the terms and conditions on which she has appointed the chairman of the Low Pay Commission. [7669]

Mr. McCartney: The Chairman, and other members, of the Low Pay Commission will be unpaid but will be reimbursed their expenses according to standard civil service rates, in line with other appointments of this kind.

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if legislation to establish a national minimum wage will be published before advice on its level is received from the Low Pay Commission. [7673]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Yes.

Post Office

Mr. Forth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will give for the Comprehensive Review of the Options for the Post Office (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8237]

Mr. Ian McCartney: It is too early yet to say when the review of the Post Office will be completed. To date, no external costs have been incurred as the work has been undertaken using existing Departmental resources.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to announce the conclusion of her review of the Post Office; and if she will make a statement. [7434]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) on 8 July, Official Report, columns 413–14.

Consumer Issues (Questionnaire)

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response has been received from the hon. Members' questionnaire on consumer issues; and if she will publish the responses. [7783]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I have received a very encouraging response from hon. Members of all parties and I have held meetings with hon. Members, including the hon. Lady's hon. Friends, a number of whom have recorded their appreciation of this innovative exercise.

The summary of the responses is as follows:

Issue
48	Second hand cars
22	Electrical Goods (Radio/TV)
72	Home maintenance, repairs and improvements
77	Food and drink
19	Major appliances
16	Clothing and clothing fabrics
28	Upholstered furniture
34	Double glazing products and install
50	Car repair and maintenance
7	Furniture (not upholstered) pictures etc.
38	Carbon monoxide deaths
81	Labelling (animal testing)
27	Mock auctions
64	Product safety
71	Holiday protection
75	Advertising standards
66	Fireworks
42	Funerals
48	Direct selling
74	Consumer credit

I note the hon. Member has not listed any issues which concern her constituents and I have therefore sent her another questionnaire.

PPARC

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the level of funding given to the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council in each year since 1992, in real terms. [7581]

Mr. Battle: The actual allocations to the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council in each year since 1994–95 were:

£ million

Year	Actual	1997–98 prices
1994–95	204.629	221.998
1995–96	201.756	213.031
1996–97	208.393	214.124
1997–98	200.650	200.650

1. The figures include the cost of PPARC's International Subscriptions.
2. Real terms comparisons are based ont he latest GDP deflator.
3. Prior to 1994–95, PPARC's areas of expertise formed part of the responsibilities of the Science and Engineering Research Council. Figures for previous years are therefore unavailable.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for what reasons the budget for the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council was determined prior to her Department's spending review. [7585]

Mr. Battle: In January this year, in accordance with standard practice, the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council was given a financial allocation for 1997–98 and indicative planning figures for the following two years. These allocations will be subject to the same scrutiny as any other expenditure plans within the remit of my Department's spending review.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the impact of ending the process of the compulsory competitive tendering of the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council's purchase of telescope delivery and instrumentation. [7584]

Mr. Battle: The Government's decision to release the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council (PPARC) from the obligation of competitive tendering will allow PPARC to reorganise the Royal Observatories in the way which best meets their scientific requirements. PPARC is now beginning the process of securing the scientific and cost advantages in bringing elements of the Royal Observatories' work together in a single Astronomy Technology Centre.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the sum spent on administration by the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council in each year since 1992, in real terms. [7582]

Mr. Battle: The Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council was established on 1 April 1994 and has expended the following sums on administration (in real terms, at 1997–98 prices):

1994–95: £5.750 million

1995–96: £5.279 million

1996–97: £4.521 million.

European Space Agency

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her Department's projected funding towards the European Space Agency for the next financial year. [7493]

Mr. Battle: £91 million (see: Trade and Industry: The Government's Expenditure Plans 1997–98 to 1999–2000). This is subject to the outcome of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review, which the Chief Secretary announced to the House on 11 June, Official Report, columns 1143–57.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the sums given by her Department towards the European Space Agency for each year since 1992, in real terms. [7593]

Mr. Battle: The figures for DTI spend on European Space Agency programmes for each year since 1992 in real terms are:

Year	£ million
1991–92	86
1992–93	83
1993–94	87
1994–95	94
1995–96	96
1996–97	98
1997–98	77

Cash expenditure has been revised in line with Treasury's GDP deflators table, which uses 1996–97 as the base year.

Observatories

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how the closure of the Royal Greenwich Observatory will affect the contracts it has agreed for telescope supply and maintenance. [7490]

Mr. Battle: The Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council (PPARC) will take all necessary steps to fulfil its current obligations, including those which relate to the construction and maintenance of telescopes.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to ensure that the full range of services offered by the Royal Greenwich Observatory to (a) astronomers and (b) industry, will remain available throughout the United Kingdom. [7491]

Mr. Battle: Those services which are required to support the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council's astronomy programme will continue to be provided by the Astronomy Technology Centre in Edinburgh. PPARC will be discussing with a range of interested parties the options for the future of other work currently carried out at the Royal Greenwich Observatory.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the sum spent on administration at (a) the Royal Greenwich Observatory and (b) the Royal Observatory, Edinburgh, in each year since 1992, in real terms. [7488]

Mr. Battle: The average salary costs to the programme of those staff undertaking finance and personnel duties at the Royal Greenwich Observatory (RGO) and Royal Observatory Edinburgh (ROE) are as follows (in real terms, at 1997–98 prices):

£ million

Year	RGO	ROE
1992–93	0.271	0.266
1993–94	0.253	0.225
1994–95	0.219	0.200
1995–96	0.249	0.267
1996–97	0.265	0.256

Astronomy Technology Centre

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how she proposes to ensure that the United Kingdom Astronomy Technology Centre is accessible to all United Kingdom astronomers. [7489]

Mr. Battle: The development of the United Kingdom Astronomy Technology Centre and the programme of work it will undertake are matters for the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council, advised by peer review and overseen by senior members of the astronomy community.

CERN

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the funding given by her Department towards CERN in each year since 1992, in real terms. [7591]

Mr. Battle: The cost to the Science Budget of the CERN subscription in each calendar year from 1992 is as follows (in real terms, at 1997–98 prices):

Year	Sterling cost (£ million) of UK subscription
1992	63.26
1993	60.57
1994	63.44
1995	71.09
1996	76.74
1997	60.67

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the projected funding for CERN in the next financial year. [7594]

Mr. Battle: The UK contribution to CERN for 1998 in Swiss Francs will not be known until December 1997 and the cost in sterling will depend on exchange rates at the time the currency is bought. However, PPARC has made provision of £58.27 million for CERN contributions within its allocation for the 1998–99 financial year.

Nautical Almanac Office

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the future of the Nautical Almanac Office. [7590]

Mr. Battle: The Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council (PPARC) will be discussing with a range of potentially interested parties the way in which the work of the Nautical Almanac Office should be managed in future.

Trade Associations

Mr. Page: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to be in a position to reply to the question from the hon. Member for South-West Hertfordshire of 9 June relating to trade associations; and what factors have led to the delay in responding to date. [7773]

Mrs. Beckett: I answered the hon. Member's question on 9 July 1997, Official Report, column 486.

Nuclear Power Stations (Closure)

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the dates recommended by the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate for closure of each operational nuclear power station. [6782]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 7 July 1997]: No such recommendations have been given by the Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate. A decision to close a nuclear power station rests with the owners.

Living Genetic Material (Patents)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on her plans for the patenting of living genetic material. [7356]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 8 July 1997]: Apart from the exclusion from patentability of plant and animal varieties as such, and plants and animals produced by traditional breeding methods, current United Kingdom legislation (The Patents Act 1977) affords patent protection to inventions concerning genetic material, such as isolated genes, and living material, if they meet the three general conditions (i.e. new, inventive and capable of industrial applicability) which are applied to inventions in all fields of technology.

Biotechnological Inventions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research her Department has undertaken into the possible impact of the introduction of the draft European Parliament and Council Directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions; and if she will make a statement. [7355]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 8 July 1997]: My Department has undertaken a study as to the effects that the Commission's draft proposal may have on business. The study is available in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

This draft proposal is currently before the European Parliament and we are awaiting its first Opinion. If the Parliament seeks amendments to the proposal, it is likely that the Commission will amend its draft. Therefore, it is not possible at the moment to determine the precise contents of the text to be put before the Council of Ministers. When the terms of the proposal are known, the Department will undertake further study as to the effects any revised draft Directive may have.

Radioactive Waste Storage

Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Government will make a statement on (a) the future of Nirex and (b) its proposals for the long-term storage of low and intermediate level radioactive waste. [7156]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 8 July 1997]: Following the decision to dismiss UK Nirex's appeal against Cumbria County Councils's refusal of planning permission for a rock characterisation facility, the implications for radioactive waste management policy are currently under consideration by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Conclusions on this issue could significantly affect the future of the long term storage of low and long intermediate level of radio nuclear waste and he will inform the House of these conclusions in due course.

Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list which areas of competitiveness are (a) her responsibility and (b) the responsibility of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe. [7433]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 July 1997]: I have overall responsibility for all competitiveness issues in the DTI. The Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe has responsibility for European issues affecting competitiveness, in particular completion of the EU single market.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe had access to official papers concerning energy issues before he sold his shares in British Petroleum; and if he continues to have such access; [7424]

(2) if the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe attended departmental or inter-departmental meetings on energy matters before he sold his shares in British Petroleum; and if he continues to attend such meetings. [7431]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 July 1997]: The Minister of State for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe does not routinely see papers or attend meetings concerning energy issues, since they do not form part of his responsibilities. But he is only barred from seeing papers, including papers on energy issues, (or attending meetings) which have a bearing on BP. He has not sold his shares in BP, and there are no requirements on him to do so; the other arrangements in place ensure that there is no conflict of interest.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what meetings she has had with the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe to discuss Government policy on the single currency. [7664]

Mrs. Beckett: I discuss a range of issues regularly with my noble Friend the Minister of State for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe as with all my Ministerial team.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she was first informed that the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe should not be involved in any matter affecting British Petroleum. [7549]

Mrs. Beckett: I have been aware since the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe's appointment that he, like all Ministers, was making arrangements to ensure that he complied with Questions of Procedure for Ministers. Question of Procedure for Ministers requires that a Minister with a private interest should remain entirely detached from consideration of any public business affecting it. Lord Simon has fully complied with this provision.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) pursuant to her oral answer of 3 July, Official Report, column 409, in respect of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe, for what reasons she does not know the details of the issues; [7421]

(2) if she will make a statement on the procedures applying to the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe in respect of the avoidance of conflicts of interest. [7427]

Mrs. Beckett: On 3 July the hon. Gentleman asked me without notice, Official Report, column 409, and on a question about Departmental policies to give details about the handling of the personal finances of my noble Friend the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe including of all of his shareholdings and options.

While I was aware that my noble Friend had taken action to preclude any potential conflict of interest I was unable on the spur of the moment to recall whether any detailed aspects of these steps remained to be completed. That is why I undertook to write to the right hon. Gentleman.

In that letter of 4 July I said:

As you will know, the guidance on these matters is set out in Questions of Procedure for Ministers. The key principle, to which all Ministers are committed from the time of their appointment, is that Ministers must ensure that no conflict arises, or appears to arise, between their public duties and their private interests.

In order to meet this requirement, Lord Simon has of course resigned as Chairman and as a director of BP. (He has also resigned all his other directorships.) Furthermore, he is not involved in any of the DTI's business which covers BP activity, nor does he receive any papers which have a bearing on BP. This removes any possibility of conflict of interest between his former involvement with BP and his current responsibilities at the DTI. I understand that similar arrangements are in place in the Treasury to keep Lord Simon apart from decisions in areas relating to his previous employment and that Lord Simon did not contribute to the pre-Budget decision making process.

Separately, he has placed the generality of his investments in blind trusts. He holds no options. He has not however disposed of his shareholding in BP, but has undertaken not to trade these shares before January 1998, at which time the position will be reviewed. But no conflict can occur given Lord Simon's non-involvement with Government business concerning BP.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade by what date the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe (a) sold all his shares in BP, (b) cancelled his options on shares and (c) severed all his business links. [7422]

Mrs. Beckett: The Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe severed all his business links with BP on 7 May 1997. He had no options on BP shares. He has retained his shares in BP, but the arrangements described in my letter to the right hon. Gentleman of 4 July, which I refer to in my earlier answer, ensure that no conflict of interest can rise.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what directorships are held by the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe; and what arrangements will govern (a) his relinquishment of them and (b) his dealings with matters relating to particular industries in which he was previously involved. [5995]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 30 June 1997]: Lord Simon of Highbury relinquished all his directorships on his unpaid appointment to public service as Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe. He is not involved in any Government business concerning matters relating to his previous employment.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what record she keeps of correspondence about the Department's responsibilities received by her Ministers from recent business acquaintances; [5624]

(2) what arrangements exist to prevent a Minister in her Department handling correspondence about its responsibilities from recent business acquaintances. [5617]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 27 June 1997]: All correspondence received by Ministers is recorded on receipt by their Private Officers. Such records are not categorised according to whether or not Ministers are acquainted with the correspondent. All Ministers are under a duty to ensure that no conflict arises, or appears to arise, between their public duties and their private interests; where necessary, Ministers must delegate their responsibilities for particular decision to another Minister to avoid such conflicts. Guidance is provided in Questions of Procedure for Ministers, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Arms Sales (Saudi Arabia)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what additional measures she intends to put in place to ensure that arms sold to Saudi Arabia are not passed on to third countries with which Her Majesty's Government would not wish to trade. [5688]

Mr. Spellar: Most defence exports to Saudi Arabia are the result of Government to Government arrangements. I am withholding specific details of these arrangements under Exemption 1 (Defence, Security and International Relations) of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. However, it is normal practice to include a clause in memoranda of understanding which prohibits the transfer of material to third parties without the approval of the UK Government.

For exports, to all countries, not covered by Government to Government arrangements, the risk of diversion to third countries is taken into account in considering export licence applications. Where appropriate, the Government asks for end-user undertakings to ensure that goods will not be re-exported. We are committed to strengthening the monitoring of the end-use of defence exports to prevent diversion to third countries and to ensure that exported equipment is use only on the conditions under which the export licence has been granted. Work is in hand to take forward this commitment.

TREASURY

Windfall Tax

6. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the proposed windfall profits tax. [6182]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The windfall tax will fund the New Deal for the young and long-term unemployed, lone parents and schools announced by the Chancellor in his Budget speech. It is a one-off tax which puts right the bad deal which customers and taxpayers got from the privatisation of the utilities.

18. Mr. Stott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he plans to allocate the revenue from the windfall levy. [6196]

Mr. Darling: The Windfall Tax on the excess profits of the privatised utilities will finance measures to equip Britain for our long-term future and to modernise the welfare state. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor announced a New Deal for the young unemployed, the long-term unemployed, and lone parents. We provided extra help with childcare. We were able to finance capital investment in our schools, including investment in IT, and to kick-start our University for Industry. We are also able to fund the measures we will bring forward to help people on Incapacity Benefit into work.

24. Mr. Singh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has for the allocation of the revenue raised from the windfall levy. [6202]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The Windfall Tax on the excess profits of the privatised utilities will finance measures to equip Britain for our long-term future and to modernise the welfare state. I announced a New Deal for the young unemployed, the long-term unemployed, and lone parents. I provided extra help with childcare. I was able to finance capital investment in our schools, including investment in IT, and to start up our University for Industry. I am also able to fund the measures we will bring forward to help people on Incapacity Benefit into work.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the advice given to him by the regulators of the privatised companies affected by the windfall tax, relating to prices, investment, service standards and employment prospects; and if he will make a statement. [7576]

Mr. Robinson: The Government consulted the regulators fully on the design of the windfall tax. In accordance with normal practice, we shall not be publishing their advice because it was confidential and contained some observations that are commercially sensitive.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

17. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends to introduce an annual review of the proposed PSBR by the National Audit Office. [6195]

Mr. Darling: As part of the opening up of economic decision making, the Chancellor intends that there should be a continuing role for the National Audit Office in subsequent Budgets. But future arrangements are not yet settled.

23. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his estimate of the level of the public sector borrowing requirement in the present and next financial year. [6201]

Mr. Darling: Excluding the temporary effects of the windfall tax and spending on Welfare to Work, the Public Sector Borrowing Requirement is forecast to be £13¼ billion in 1997–98 and £5½ billion in 1998–99.

Interest Rates

19. Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from exporters about the level of interest rates. [6197]

Mr. Darling: Interest rates are set to deliver the Government's inflation target. Low inflation and economic stability are in the interests of any successful business. I want a stable and competitive pound and the action my right hon. Friend the Chancellor and I have taken to tighten fiscal policy should help rebalance the economy.

28. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what advice he has received from the Governor of the Bank of England about the reasons for the recent increase in interest rates; and if he will make a statement. [6206]

Mrs. Liddell: The Bank of England is responsible for setting interest rates to meet the Government's inflation target.

In its press release of 6 June, the Bank of England stated that its decision to raise interest rates " . . . offers the best chance of achieving continued growth in output and employment at a sustainable pace."

Full minutes of the Monetary Policy Committee meeting, including a record of the voting, will be published on 16 July.

Investment

20. Mr. John Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from small business relating to levels of investment. [6198]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor received many representations about investment from small businesses and took action in this Budget to encourage more investment in small and medium sized enterprises.

Inland Revenue Offices

21. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his plans to close Inland Revenue offices. [6199]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue has now completed four years of its 10 year programme to restructure its network of local offices. As part of the planning process, the Department is reviewing those outline proposals which could result in the closure of the only office in a town.

Welfare-to-work Strategy

22. Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about his welfare-to-work strategy. [6200]

27. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about his welfare-to-work strategy. [6205]

Mr. Brown: My Budget set out detailed proposals to help the young and long-term unemployed, and the first serious national effort to help lone parents find jobs. I intend to extend this approach to other groups excluded from the labour market, including those on incapacity benefit. We will also streamline and modernise the tax and benefits so they promote work, reduce poverty and dependency, and strengthen community and family life.

Pension Misselling

25. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress towards compensation for victims of pension misselling. [6203]

33. Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further meetings he intends to have with representatives of the pensions industry to discuss the selling of pensions. [6211]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer my hon. Friend to the Written Answer I gave to the hon. Member for East Ham (Mr. Timms) on 9 July, column 477.

Single Currency

26. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research his Department has evaluated into the impact of different levels of unemployment in Europe on the impact of the introduction of a single currency. [6204]

Mrs. Liddell: If EMU goes ahead, it must on the basis of sustainable convergence as well as active measures to increase employability and social inclusion. It is essential that Europe tackles its unemployment problems with or without EMU.

That is why the Chancellor launched the "Getting Europe to work" initiative which sets out ways to improve labour market flexibility and employability. These British ideas were reflected in the European Council Resolution on employment agreed at Amsterdam.

Privatised Utilities (Investment)

29. Mr. Brady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the likely impact of his Budget on future levels of investment in the privatised utilities. [6207]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: After consulting the regulators, it is my judgment that the tax can be paid without any impact on investment.

Jobs Summit, Luxembourg

30. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has for the forthcoming jobs summit to be held in Luxembourg in the autumn. [6208]

Mr. Gordon Brown: As I made clear in my "Getting Europe Back to Work" initiative before the Amsterdam European Council it is vital, if we are to create real and lasting jobs throughout Europe, that we combine measures to promote job creation and social cohesion in Europe. At the Luxembourg summit we will need to learn from each other on the most successful ways of tackling unemployment. My Budget last week, and in particular my announcements on Welfare to Work, are a key part of the UK's efforts.

Small Businesses

31. Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new measures he is proposing to help small businesses. [6209]

38. Liz Blackman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to help small businesses. [6216]

Mrs. Liddell: The measures my right hon. Friend introduced in his Budget, including reduced small companies' rate of corporation tax, doubling of capital allowances and action on Venture Capital Trusts and the Enterprise Investment Scheme, will contribute towards a healthy environment in which small businesses can thrive.

Mission Statement

32. Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to issue a mission statement for Her Majesty's Treasury. [6210]

Mrs. Liddell: We are revising the Treasury's aim and objectives as the first stage of the Department's review of its structure and resources.

Public Finances

34. Mr. Pond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the assumptions he has made in his forecast for the public finances. [6212]

Mr. Darling: The Chancellor has proposed making changes to five key assumptions to put the fiscal arithmetic on a more cautious and prudent footing. The NAO has audited these new assumptions and its report was issued as a Command Paper on 19 June.

36. Mr. Kemp: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the assumptions underlying his forecasts for public finances. [6214]

Mr. Darling: The Chancellor has proposed changes to five key assumptions to put the fiscal arithmetic on a more cautious and prudent footing. The NAO has audited these new assumptions and its report was issued as a Command Paper on 19 June.

Private Finance Initiative

35. Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the new PFI Taskforce will start its work. [6213]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: The Government is creating a new Treasury Private Finance Taskforce, combining project and policy expertise. The Private Finance Panel has been stood down and its Executive is to be disbanded by September. We are currently in the process of appointing a Chief Executive, along with six to eight supporting executives, on the project side of the Taskforce. The policy side has begun its work already.

Bank Regulation

37. Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his objective in transferring the regulation of banks to the new regulator to avoid regulatory issues compromising the bank's judgment in setting interest rates. [6215]

Mrs. Liddell: Responsibility for Banking supervision will be transferred from the Bank of England to the Securities and Investments Board to bring the regulatory structure more closely into line with today's increasingly integrated financial markets, and deliver more effective and efficient supervision.

Student Loan Debt Sale

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement of the Government's policy on the student loan debt sale. [8407]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The overriding policy considerations that have determined the Government's approach to the student loan debt sale are as follows.

The Government is committed to the development of a wide range of public-private partnerships which involve a transfer of risk to the private sector. This sale will shift much of the default risk to the private sector who have much more experience in dealing with credit risks. The sales will enable the markets to establish a clearer understanding of student loans and could in future encourage financial institutions to play a more direct role in the provision of student support.

In addition, the Government was elected on the basis of a manifesto pledge to work within the spending plans already announced for the next two years. This, and our other economic pledges on inflation and taxes, were designed to create the conditions for economic stability and a platform for sustained growth.

Going ahead with the student loan debt sale has a critical role in enabling us to keep this pledge. The public spending plans we have inherited include substantial sales of student loan debt in 1997–98 and 1998–99. Given the tightness of our plans generally and in particular the priority we want to give to education programmes, the Government has decided to proceed with the sale.

These overriding objectives were paramount in the decision to proceed with the debt sale. The Government accepts that this will result in the payment of subsidies to purchasers of the debt but intends to accept the most competitive bid following a competitive tendering process. The size of the continuing subsidies cannot be predicted in advance. We will ensure that we achieve the most competitive outcome consistent with these objectives.

VAT (Domestic Fuel)

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on his plans to reduce VAT on domestic fuel from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent. [6189]

Dawn Primarolo: I received a number of representations calling for a reduction in the rate of VAT on fuel, prior to my right hon. Friend the Chancellor's Budget announcement last week.

HIPC Initiative

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost will be to the United Kingdom of implementing the proposal that the repayable debts of the world's poorest countries should be cancelled by 2000. [7811]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government does not share the view that debts of the world's poorest countries should be cancelled by 2000. We believe that debt relief is important, but must be accompanied by a clear commitment by debtors to balanced economic reform programmes to create the conditions for economic development and lasting poverty reduction. Decisions on which countries qualify for debt relief, and on the amount of relief necessary to reduce their debts to sustainable levels, should be taken on a case-by-case basis.

Mrs. May: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost will be to the United Kingdom of the implementation of the HIPC initiative. [7810]

Mrs. Liddell: It is impossible to say in advance how much UK debt will be written down under the HIPC initiative. Decisions on which countries qualify for debt relief, and on the amount of relief necessary to reduce their debts to sustainable levels, are taken on a case-by-case basis.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7146]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury established a year 2000 project in July 1996 with the objective of ensuring that its IT systems are, or will be, year 2000 compliant. The project is managed by the Head of IT services supported by a project team of six. Work undertaken by staff on year 2000 is in addition to their other duties.

The programme of work follows the recommended approach identified by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA). In line with CCTA's milestone dates, the Treasury has carried out an audit of its systems and will be providing, by October 1997, fully costed plans for undertaking the work needed.

Any costs associated with this work will be met from within existing plans.

Contractors' Commissions

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to enable the National Audit Office to investigate the use made of public funds after they have been paid to contractors where there is suspicion that commissions have been improperly paid; if he will authorise research into the powers available for this purpose in the United States; and if he will make a statement. [6683]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government has no plans to introduce legislation in this area, and my right hon. Friend the Chancellor has no plans to make a statement. Any question of illegality would be a matter for the responsible authorities. Officials in my Department will look at the situation in the United States in this respect as the hon. Member suggests.

Personal Equity Plans

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will change the rules governing PEPs so that AIM stocks are eligible for inclusion. [7322]

Dawn Primarolo: We have no plans to do. Shares dealt in on the Alternative Investment Market (AIM) may qualify for the tax reliefs available for investment in unlisted companies. These include inheritance tax relief, capital gains tax reinvestment relief and reliefs under the Enterprise Investment Scheme and Venture Capital Trust Schemes. It follows that AIM shares cannot be held directly in PEPs, which are intended for listed shares and securities: they can, however, be held indirectly in PEPs by collective investment through qualifying unit and investment trusts.

Inflation

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 June, Official Report, column 233, on the correlation between central bank independence and inflation, if he will list the studies which his Department has evaluated. [6872]

Mrs. Liddell: The Treasury has evaluated a number of studies on the relationship between central bank independence and inflation. A recent study by Eiffinger and De Haan (1996), "The Political Economy of Central Bank Independence", Special Papers in International Economics, Princeton University, identified twenty separate studies, all but two of which concluded that central bank independence is associated with lower inflation.

Savings

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for how long a person on average earnings would have to work to accumulate £240,000 after deductions for tax and national insurance. [3775]

Dawn Primarolo: It is extremely difficult to predict, but using the assumptions chosen by the hon. Member, approximately 15 years.

Commemorative Coins

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to issue new commemorative coins. [8406]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Her Majesty The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve a recommendation that Britannia bullion coins in gold and silver should be issued later this year to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the introduction of the Britannia gold bullion coins in 1987 and the 300th anniversary of the adoption of the Britannia silver hallmarking standard in 1697.

She has also been graciously pleased to approve a recommendation that a crown piece with a face value of five pounds should be issued in 1998 to celebrate the fiftieth birthday of His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales; and she has further approved the issue in 1998 of a fifty pence piece featuring a special design to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of Britain's entry into the European Economic Community on 1 January 1973 and Britain's Presidency of the European Union during the first six months of 1998.

It is intended that the fifty pence piece will be available in 1998 for general circulation and that there will also be collector versions in base and precious metal. The other commemorative coins will be struck primarily for collectors, though the crown pieces celebrating the fiftieth birthday of His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales will also be made available from banks and post offices at face value during the course of 1998.

Valuation Office, Warrington

Helen Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the projected increase in travelling expenses which would result from the transfer of caseworkers from the Warrington Valuation Office to Liverpool and Manchester; [6268]

(2) what estimates he has made of the extra cost per annum of accommodation and parking in Liverpool and Manchester, arising from the transfer of the work of the Warrington Valuation Office to these locations; [6269]

(3) what estimate he has made of the capital value of the building currently housing the Warrington Valuation Office; [6270]

(4) what estimate he has made of the costs of necessary refurbishment works on the Warrington Valuation Office; [6271]

(5) what is the annual income generated by the Warrington Valuation Office. [6272]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 3 July 1997]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Acting Chief Executive of the Valuation Office Agency. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Peter Upton to Helen Jones, dated 10 July 1997:

In your questions to the Chancellor (ref 6268–6272) you ask for information concerning the proposed closure of the Warrington Valuation Office and I have been asked to reply direct to you.

Following the Review of the Valuation Office as a Next Steps Agency in 1995, we are committed to further enhance efficiency and effectiveness through, among other things, the streamlining of our network of local offices. These efficiencies which amount to some 30% over 5 years have already been reflected in our forward plans and expenditure projections.

The new Valuation Office structure is designed to enable us to:

improve quality and levels of service become more flexible and responsive to clients' needs and changing workloads concentrate our work processing functions within fewer locations via a new computer system reduce management layers and develop teams dedicated to specific clients or type of work.

The information you requested is as follows:

Question	Answer
What is the projected increase in travelling expenses which would result from the transfer of caseworkers from the Warrington Valuation Office to Liverpool and Manchester?	From the estimates that have been made covering the overall office closure programme, the average increase in travel costs per location has been calculated at circa £20,000 per annum. This may well be reduced in practice as many caseworkers undertake journeys to clients and customers direct from home.
What estimates have been made of the extra cost per annum of accommodation and parking in Liverpool and Manchester when transferring the work of the Warrington Valuation Office to these locations?	There will be no additional costs of accommodation at Liverpool and Manchester as the Agency has sufficient space at these locations to absorb the staff and files/records from Warrington. Car parking will be provided in Liverpool and Manchester for essential car users at a cost of around £825 per space per annum and £1100 respectively but the closure of the Warrington office reduces the Agency's overall running cost.
What estimate has been made of the capital value of the building currently housing the Warrington Valuation Office?	It is considered that the freehold building and site can be sold for a significant capital sum which will benefit the public purse. The final price will be determined just prior to any sale and may be subject to commercial confidentiality particularly if it is disposed of by auction or tender.
What estimate has been made of the costs of necessary refurbishment works on the Warrington Valuation Office?	To bring the Warrington accommodation up to modern standards it is estimated that the cost will be around £400,000 based on similar refurbishments recently undertaken by the Agency.
What is the annual income generated by the Warrington Valuation Office?	For 1996–97 the income from the Warrington Valuation Office was £1.92 million and it is anticipated that this income will be maintained or exceeded following the proposed restructuring proposals.

I trust you will find the above information useful.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish his Department's submissions relating to freedom of information legislation. [6029]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 2 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Prime Minister on 4 July 1997, columns 293–94.

Securities and Investments Board

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to ensure that small investors are directly represented on the re-formed Securities and Investments Board. [7363]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 9 July 1997]: The Government has made clear its intention that the new financial regulator should be credible to investors and accountable to the public. Details of the composition of its board have yet to be determined.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure that small investors are consulted over proposals to extend the regulatory duties of the Securities and Investments Board. [7364]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 9 July 1997]: The Government's plans to reform financial regulation will include consultation with all who are interested.

Advanced Corporation Tax

Mr. Norman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the (a) loss of annual dividend income, (b) extra contributions required in the future to meet obligations to current or former employees and (c) extra contributions required in the future to meet the service costs of the funds in aggregate to the Local Government Pension Schemes of the abolition of Advance Corporation Tax Credit; and what percentage of payable costs will the extra service costs represent. [7375]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The extent to which the abolition of payable tax credits will affect contributions to the Local Government Pension Schemes will depend on the overall judgments made by the schemes' actuaries when the normal actuarial valuations are undertaken beginning next year.

Construction Industry

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new jobs he estimates will be created in the construction industry as a result of the additional allocations in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 under the Government's Capital Receipts Initiative. [7267]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The resources released under the Capital Receipts Initiative will help the construction sector to continue its recent growth and bring with it many new jobs.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate of the capacity of the construction industry in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99 underlay his decision to allocate extra sums under the Government's Capital Receipts Initiative. [7269]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The decision to release the amount of resources announced in the Budget under the Capital Receipts Initiative was taken after taking account of capacity utilisation and output growth in the construction industry.

Old Documents

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the date and title of the oldest document or archival unit retained by his Department which has not been passed on to the Public Record Office for release for public inspection. [7200]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The oldest retained file in the Treasury is entitled "Air Ministry re-employment of Retired Officers". It ends in 1938 and is retained under the Security and intelligence "blanket".

Retained files in the Treasury are in the process of being re-reviewed under the Open Government Initiative. It is expected that all those in the Treasury will have undergone this process by April 1998.

Capital Receipts Initiative

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date he intends to announce the respective shares which England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland will receive from the additional allocations under the Capital Receipts Initiative in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [7268]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The shares which have been allocated to England, Scotland and Wales were announced separately on 3 July by the Minister of State for Local Government and Housing, and the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales. The allocations for these countries, and Northern Ireland, are:

£ million

	1997–98	1998–99
England	174.27	609.94
Scotland	12.47	43.66
Wales	9.54	33.38
Northern Ireland	3.72	13.02

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Sierra Leone

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list (a) the items of emergency and development aid being provided by the British Government to Sierra Leone and (b) their value. [7801]

Clare Short: My Department is not currently providing aid to Sierra Leone. However, we are supporting relief for Sierra Leonean refugees in Guinea (£217,000) and the Gambia (£35,000).

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is the value of the aid that the British Government have committed themselves to provide to Sierra Leone under the Quick Action Programme. [7802]

Clare Short: My Department has pledged £6 million for the Quick Action Programme. Implementation is however suspended following the military coup on 25 May.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Key Stage 3 Results

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment by what dates (a) results of key stage 3 English SAT scores were intended to be returned to schools, (b) the last results were returned to schools and (c) schools are expected to return the results to the national data collection centre; and if he will make a statement. [7931]

Ms Estelle Morris: Results of the key stage 3 English tests were due to have been returned to schools by 27 June. The majority were returned by that date; the remainder were returned during the first two weeks of July as the scripts were cleared through the final checks put in place by the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority. The test results are returned to the national data collection agency by the markers and not by schools.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment by what date he intends to publish an analysis of the results of key stage 3 English SATs. [7932]

Ms Morris: We aim to publish the national results of this year's National Curriculum assessments by the end of September.

Binary Divide

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the abolition of the binary divide in higher education and its performance. [7459]

Dr. Howells: Our policy is to foster diversity of missions among institutions within a unified higher education sector so that they can offer a range of choice, meet a variety of needs among students as participation widens, and be genuinely responsive to students, staff and wider community interests. We shall of course wish to consider carefully any relevant recommendations of the National Committee of Inquiry into Higher Education under Sir Ron Dearing.

Modern Apprenticeships

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement about the future of the modern apprenticeship scheme. [7214]

Dr. Howells: We have no doubt that the training of young people in the workplace to meet the needs of employment has a vital and increasing role to play in sustaining competitiveness to 2000 and beyond. Modern apprenticeships are a key component of this and are making a vital contribution to raising skills. Evaluation studies have consistently shown that Modern apprenticeships are highly popular, of high quality, and meeting the expectations of both employers and young people.

We want to sustain and build on this success and intend to develop modern apprenticeships in every sector where there is a demand. There are currently 70 sector frameworks approved with more expected in the next 12 months. Since modern apprenticeships began, over 100,000 young people have started training. There is every sign that employers' demand for Modern Apprentices will continue to grow and we and Training and Enterprise Councils will work together on how best to respond to that demand.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Public Interest Immunity

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement concerning Government policy on public interest immunity. [8777]

The Attorney-General: In accordance with the approach adopted by the last Government and set out in the paper placed in the Libraries of the House on 18 December 1996, public interest immunity will not be asserted by the Government unless the relevant Minister believes that disclosure of a document or piece of information will cause real damage to the public interest. The test will be applied rigorously.

Where public interest immunity applies, Ministers will nevertheless make voluntary disclosure if they consider that the interests of justice outweigh the public interest in withholding the document or information in question. In all cases, a Minister's claim for public interest immunity is subject to the Court's power to order disclosure.

The approach will be followed in both criminal and civil cases.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

Mr. Geraint Davies: To ask the Attorney-General if he will announce the key performance targets for the Treasury Solicitor's Department for 1997–98. [8776]

The Attorney-General: The Treasury Solicitor's Department was established as an executive agency on 1 April 1996.

The following key performance targets have been set for the year 1997–98:

- to achieve annual efficiency savings of 2½ per cent.
- to recover the full operating cost for chargeable services of the agency
- to achieve 90 per cent. customer satisfaction in advisory services
- to achieve a 2½ per cent. reduction in the average unit cost per chargeable hour (litigation)
- to achieve a minimum average number of chargeable hours per full-time caseholder per year (litigation) of 1,100.
- to achieve instructions in at least 8,000 new litigation cases
- to achieve a 2½ per cent. reduction in the average unit cost per case (bono vacantia cases)

A copy of the Agency's Annual Report and Accounts will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

I wish the Treasury Solicitor and his staff a successful year.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Severe Hardship Allowance

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many 16 and 17-year-olds have received severe hardship allowance in each year since their entitlement to benefit in respect of unemployment was withdrawn. [7891]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Our objective is to reduce poverty and welfare dependency and to promote work incentives. We will develop a system that supports work, savings and honesty. One of our first steps is to focus on helping people off welfare and into work.

Unemployed 16 and 17-year-olds who register for work and training can exceptionally apply for benefit if they would otherwise face severe hardship. The number of such young people receiving benefit fluctuates throughout the year but the latest estimate is that some 12,000 receive it at any one point in time.

Benefits (Warrington, North)

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in the Warrington, North constituency have transferred from unemployment related benefits to invalidity or incapacity benefit in the last (a) five years and (b) 12 months. [6661]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Modernising the Social Security system is a key priority of this Government. We are committed to a review with the objective of reducing poverty and welfare dependency and promoting work incentives. Support for sick and disabled people will form part of that review.

The information requested for the last five years is not available, and the information requested for the last 12 months could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Benefits Agency Freephone Hotline

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she plans to restore the Benefits Agency Freephone Hotline; and if she will make a statement. [6980]

Mr. Field: Modernising the Social Security system is a key priority of this Government. We will streamline services to provide better, simpler more efficient services to claimants and other customers. There are no plans to restore the Benefits Agency Freeline service. I have asked Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency to write directly and for his reply to be published with this answer.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 10 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning the Benefits Agency Freeline service.

There are no plans to restore the Benefits Agency Freeline. Advice and information about benefit entitlement is available through the Agency's network of local benefit offices. Benefit literature is readily available in local offices, post offices and numerous other outlets.

Advice and information on benefits for the disabled, their representatives and carers is available from the Benefit Enquiry Line. The freephone number is 0800 882200.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Child Support Maintenance

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much child support maintenance has been assessed to date but not paid; and what proportion of this is currently assessed to be collectable. [5437]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide an efficient and effective service to all its clients throughout the child support assessment process. We are looking for substantial and sustained operational improvements from the Agency, in particular on getting more maintenance paid, reducing the backlog and improving customer service.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Chris Pond, dated 10 July 1997:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about unpaid child support maintenance.

The amount of child support maintenance where a full maintenance assessment is in place, that had not been paid at the 23 June 1997, was £557,493,252.

The proportion of child support maintenance that is currently regarded as collectable is 48%, taken from the last published Debt Analysis Exercise which was carried out in September 1996. Using this proportion the amount deemed to be collectable is £267,596,761. A further Debt Analysis Exercise has been undertaken this year, and the findings, (once signed off by the National Audit Office), will be published in the Agency's Annual Report and Accounts.

The Agency uses every power available to it to chase up absent parents who try to avoid paying legally due maintenance and our efforts will continue in this area. In 1996–97 the Agency collected or arranged payment for almost £400 million maintenance; this will increase this year to £500 million.

I hope this is helpful.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

All-party Groups and Committees

Mr. Forth: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, what steps he takes to ensure that the rules regarding all-party groups and committees are properly observed. [7819]

Mr. Kirkwood: This is a matter for the Administration Committee.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Mink

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what response he intends to make to proposals in the Council of Europe to set international standards for the farming of mink. [6572]

Mr. Morley: The Standing Committee of The European Convention on the Protection of Animals Kept for Farming Purposes is currently reviewing its 1991 recommendation on the welfare of animals farmed for fur. We shall be pressing for adoption of the highest possible standards, paying proper regard to the welfare of the animals concerned. We will not support any convention that weakens present welfare standards. This does not affect the Government's commitment to bringing an end to fur farming in this country: we are urgently considering how this is to be achieved.

Design Flood Levels

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Ministers of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if information on design flood levels is required to be made freely available to design professionals by the responsible authority. [7248]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency collects information on the risk of flooding from rivers or the sea. I am advised that readily available information on design flood levels can be obtained from the relevant Region of the Agency. Internal Drainage Boards may hold similar information about their districts and I would expect this to be made available on request.

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which authority is responsible for confirming design flood levels, particularly flood levels in East Anglia. [7247]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency (and in areas where they exist, Internal Drainage Boards) provide advice to local planning authorities on risks of flooding from rivers or the sea when they are consulted in connection with development plans or planning applications. They also determine the design flood levels for new and improvement flood defence works that they are themselves empowered to construct on rivers or on the coast.

"Bringing Home the Bacon"

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the results of his Department's investigation into the Channel 4 programme "Bringing Home the Bacon". [7706]

Mr. Morley: This investigation has resulted in prosecution proceedings being taken in Thetford Magistrates Court on Friday 1 August and it would be inappropriate to comment any further whilst criminal proceedings are pending.

Cormorants

Mr. Salter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will relax the conditions under which licences are issued for the culling of cormorants on inland waterways in circumstances where fish are subject to intense predation. [7933]

Mr. Morley: Cormorants are protected by the 1979 EC Birds Directive, implemented in the UK by the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. This Act provides for them to be shot under licence in strictly limited numbers in cases where they are causing serious damage to a fishery and where there is no other satisfactory solution. There are no powers to undertake a general cull.

As a licensing authority under the 1981 Act, the Ministry must issue licences in accordance with the requirements of the Act and I cannot, therefore, relax the conditions under which they are issued.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Victims (Intimidation)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of victims of crime who are intimidated by prisoners by (a) letter or (b) telephone; and if he will make a statement. [6606]

Ms Joyce Quin: Statistics are not currently held centrally on the number of victims of crime who are contacted by prisoners following the unauthorised use of cardphones and correspondence which may result in disciplinary or criminal proceedings being taken against the prisoner concerned. Such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost by a detailed inspection of prisoners' records.

Latest figures obtained from the Prison Service Victim Helpline referred to in the Victim's Charter, a copy of which is in the Library, indicate that in 1996 the Helpline received 11 complaints from victims about written communications from prisoners and 5 complaints about contact using a cardphone for prisoners' use.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the ACPO guidelines for the use of plastic bullets are a classified document; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [8277]

Mr. Michael: The guidelines are Home Office guidelines which have in the past been classified. The Code of Practice on Access to Government Information exempts from disclosure information that would harm national security or defence but I do not believe the guidelines come within this category. I am therefore placing a copy of the relevant part in the Library.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 19 June, Official Report, columns 275–76, when he expects the review of guidelines on the use of plastic baton rounds to be completed. [8269]

Mr. Michael: The Association of Chief Police Officers, together with the Royal Ulster Constabulary, are currently considering the guidelines. When this review is complete, we will consider any proposals that they wish to make. It will be for Ministers to decide whether any changes in the guidelines should be made. I understand that the review is likely to be completed towards the end of the year.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of Crown court cases in 1996 resulted in a disposal which could have been imposed by a magistrates court. [7467]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Information for 1995 is given in the table below. Data for 1996 will not be available until the autumn.

Proportion of Crown court cases which resulted in a disposal which could have been imposed at a magistrates' court by offence group

England and Wales 1995

Offence Group	percentage
Indictable only	30
Triable either way	62
All offences[1]	59

Fire Services (Gwent)

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many call-outs were made during the last five years to (a) the Bargoed fire station and (b) the Cefn Forest fire station, Gwent. [6417]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is not available centrally.

Fine Defaulters

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been imprisoned by magistrates courts for non-payment of (a) fines, (b) council tax and (c) community charge in England and Wales in each of the last three years. [6445]

Ms Joyce Quin: The available information on receptions into prisons in England and Wales of fine defaulters, and those committed for non-payment of council tax/community charge by magistrates or other courts, are given in the attached table. This information is also published in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales" (tables 1.12 and 6.3 of the 1995 edition, Cm 3355), a copy of which is in the Library. No information is available by type of court for persons committed to custody for non-payment of council tax or community charge, as in nearly all cases no court code had been recorded centrally.

Prisoners (Drugs Tests)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mandatory drugs tests have been made on prisoners since the inception of the scheme; how many tests have proved positive; in how many cases where a positive test has arisen the prisoner has challenged the findings with legal aid; in how many cases the prisoner has been discharged from prison before his challenge to the positive test has been processed; and if he will make a statement. [7320]

Ms Joyce Quin: Between April 1996 and March 1997, the first year in which all establishments undertook mandatory drug tests, almost 57,700 samples were taken under the random testing programme. Of these, some 24 per cent. tested positive for drugs. Information on the number of cases in which legal aid has been granted pursuant to challenging a mandatory drug test result, and on the number of prisoners discharged before a challenge is completed, is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Security Staff (Regulation)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to regulate the recruitment of security guards and night club bouncers; and if he will make a statement. [8004]

Mr. Michael: We intend to introduce statutory regulation of the private security industry. We will not be able to bring forward legislation in our first year of office, but will use the time to consult with the industry and others on the best way to provide a comprehensive, effective and streamlined system. We want to look beyond the narrow proposals put forward by the previous Government, which focused only on licensing for the contract guarding sector of the industry. In Opposition, we welcomed the recommendations of the Home Affairs Select Committee on regulation. However, the Committee did not offer a detailed blueprint and we will therefore consider the industry as a whole to decide what action is needed. Recruitment of guards and bouncers will certainly be considered as part of this process.

Probation Circulars

Mr, Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is his Department's policy to release all probation circulars to the press. [6898]

Ms Joyce Quin [holding answer 7 July 1997]: Probation circulars are always made available to the media on request. Where they involve matters judged to be of particular public interest, steps are taken to give them to the media, sometimes with a Home Office press notice.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7143]

Mr. Hoon: I take a close personal interest in the progress of the Year 2000 Compliance Projects within the Department and the Agencies and Associated Departments which report to the Lord Chancellor. Senior officials within each organisation have day to day responsibility for the successful resolution of the Year 2000 problem and mechanisms are in place to ensure regular progress reports are submitted to me.

Each organisation's Year 2000 Project follows the comprehensive guidance issued by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency. All are on target to reach the two remaining key milestones set by CCTA and the Central IT Unit: the delivery of prioritised and fully costed plans to CCTA by October 1997 and the completion of modification and testing of all systems by 31 December 1998. Figures for the cost of resolving the Year 2000 problem will, therefore, be available in October. The plans will also detail the managerial, technical and business resources required to achieve compliance. My officials are well aware of the need to develop cost effective solutions met from existing provision.

The Chief Land Registrar will be replying directly to the Question on behalf of the Land Registry.

Letter from Ted Beardsall to Mr. David Atkinson, dated 10 July 1997:

In the absence of the Chief Executive I am replying to your recent question concerning the Year 2000 Computer Problem.

The Land Registry set up a project team, led by a senior IT specialist reporting to the Agency Management Board, early in 1996 to identify potential problems and manage any necessary changes. This team has completed an investigation in respect of mainframe software which has indicated that 3% may require attention. Further investigations are also being carried out on the smaller PC based systems and software.

The staff resource allocated to the project represents 45 man years and will involve a number of IT specialist staff at different times in their own areas of expertise. The project costs have been estimated to be in the region of £1.3 million. The cost of preventative and remedial action will be met from the Agency Trading Fund.

A project plan has been drawn up and the Land Registry is on target to achieve the milestone set by CITU that all systems will be millennium compliant by 31st December 1998.

Magistrates

Mr. Beith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to change the age limits for magistrates. [6922]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor announced on 4 July that with immediate effect, he intends to increase the upper age limit for the appointment of lay magistrates to 65. He has no plans to change the lower age limit of 27.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Indonesia

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of state for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what investigations his Department has undertaken into the use of Hawk aircraft by the Government of Indonesia against its own citizens; [7940]

(2) if Hawk aircraft have been used by the Government of Indonesia against its own citizens. [7939]

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of state for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether Hawk jets have been used in East Timor. [7938]

Mr. Fatchett: We are looking into allegations of past misuse of certain UK-supplied defence equipment in Indonesia. We have not yet drawn firm conclusions.

Departmental Advisers

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 30 June, Official Report, column 37, relating to departmental advisers, if Mr. Mathieson has unescorted access to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office; what security vetting he has received; and who will pay for the vetting. [7755]

Mr. Robin Cook: Mr. Mathieson has received a security briefing so that he can enjoy unescorted access to Foreign and Commonwealth office buildings. He has not been vetted and does not have access to protectively marked papers.

Sierra Leone

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken by the British Government since 1992 to support democracy and free and fair elections in Sierra Leone. [7800]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We contributed £3 million towards the 1996 electoral process and sent five observers to join the UN election monitoring group.

Baroness Chalker visited Sierra Leone in January 1996 and met with the Sierra Leone government, opposition parties and NGOs. We have actively supported NGOs in the promotion of good governance.

We have strongly condemned the 25 May coup and are pressing for a peaceful solution to the crisis. We are active within the international organisations that have a role to play, including the United Nations, the Commonwealth and the EU. We support the efforts of regional states to restore the democratically elected government.

Kurdistan (Human Rights)

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of allegations of human rights abuses in the Diyarbakir region of Kurdistan by agencies of the Turkish Government; and if he will make a statement. [7462]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Our embassy in Ankara monitors all such allegations of abuses in Turkey, including the province of Diyarbakir. We have consistently reminded the Turkish authorities of their obligation to deal with the problems in the south-east with respect to human rights.

Kenya (Rwandan Refugees)

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the safety of Rwandan refugees in Kenya; and if he will make a statement. [7545]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are not aware of any grounds for believing that Rwandan refugees in Kenya may be in danger.

Romania

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Romanian President's comments on NATO's decision to exclude Romania from early admission to NATO. [7260]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are well aware of the seriousness with which the President and people of Romania have pursued Romania's application to join NATO. Romania's application is a matter for members of the Alliance collectively. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister told the House on 9 July, column 937, we see Romania as a strong candidate for any future enlargement.

St. Paul's Chaldean Church, Baghdad

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received regarding the search by an inspection team of the UN Special Commission of the St. Paul's Chaldean Church in Baghdad on 18 June. [7161]

Mr. Fatchett: On 18 June an official of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) briefly visited two convents and a church which were in an area designated for inspection by a joint team of the UN Special Commission and the IAEA. Under Security Council Resolutions, the Special Commission has the right to designate for inspection any site in Iraq. I am arranging to place in the libraries of the House, copies of a letter from the IAEA to the President of the UN Security Council describing this incident in detail.

Lockerbie

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the recent article in the Der Spiegel magazine on the Lockerbie bombing; and if he will make a statement. [7792]

Mr. Tony Lloyd [holding answer 10 July 1997]: The Lord Advocate reconfirmed on 25 June— Official Report, House of Lords, columns 1571–73 that he is satisfied on the information available to him that there is no reason not to proceed with the petitions against the Libyans accused of the Lockerbie bombing.

The charges against the accused are based on evidence collected by Dumfries and Galloway Police and anyone with any new evidence should make it available to them. The investigation remains open. We have contacted the German authorities for further information on these allegations. They are pursuing their enquiries.

Strategic Defence Review

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will undertake an independent threat assessment study in the context of the Strategic Defence Review. [7261]

Dr. Reid: I have been asked to reply.

The Strategic Defence Review draws on assessments of risks and challenges from a variety of sources, both inside and outside Government. We are therefore measuring our classified assessments against a range of independent outside views.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

New Government

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to publish his Department's White Paper on New Government. [7573]

Dr. David Clark: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for the City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg), Official Report, 3 June 1997, columns 19–20.

Better Regulation

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 3 July, Official Report, column 221, what meetings he has attended with his European counterparts to ensure that the European Social and Employment Chapters ensure better quality regulation at the European level; and if he will make a statement. [7661]

Dr. David Clark: It is important for us to ensure that European regulations are clear, focused and accessible without imposing unnecessary burdens on business and citizens.

On 9 July in Vienna, I met Dr. Hannes Farnleitner, Austrian Minister for Economic Affairs, and Dr. Klaus Bünger, State Secretary in the German Economics Ministry, to discuss ways of working together to improve the quality of European regulation during our consecutive EU Presidencies.

I plan to visit other Member States and the European Commission in the Autumn.

City House, Cambridge

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate have assessed the potential of City House, Cambridge, as accommodation for Government purposes. [7483]

Dr. David Clark [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Property Advisers to the Civil Estate. I have asked its acting Chief Executive, Mr. Malcolm Bowles, to write to the hon. member.

Letter from Malcolm Bowles to Mr. Andrew Lansley, dated 8 July 1997:

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has asked me to reply to your Question about City House, Cambridge.

Since 1 April 1996 it has been the responsibility of individual Government Departments to assess the suitability of prospective accommodation.

PACE has not been asked by any department to undertake an assessment as to the potential of City House, Cambridge as accommodation for their own purposes.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Appointments

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on which occasions the British side of the Anglo-Irish Secretariat has provided information to the Irish side on the Irish Government's nominees for public appointments. [5572]

Marjorie Mowlam: Under Article 6 of the Anglo-Irish Agreement, the Irish Government may put forward proposals for membership of public bodies in Northern Ireland. The role of the British side of the Secretariat is confined to receiving any such names put forward by the Irish side and, once a decision has been made in relation to a particular appointment, informing the Irish side of the success or otherwise of any candidate they had put forward.

Education Spending

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to increase the funding available to the education sector in Northern Ireland in the next financial year. [5979]

Mr. Worthington: Schools will benefit by £35.4 million in 1998–99 as a result of the recent budget statement by my right hon. Friend, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Overall allocations for education in 1998–99 and beyond will be informed by decisions on the Comprehensive Spending Review.

The recently announced £140 million Welfare to Work programme in Northern Ireland will also benefit the education sector as each of the four new options on offer to unemployed people taking up the programme will include an education or training element. More details about this programme will be announced later this year.

Computers (Century Date Change)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on her Department's timetable for dealing with the Year 2000 Computer Problem; who is in charge of the project; how many staff are working on it; what is the projected cost of resolving the problem; and whether the project is on schedule. [7136]

Mr. Paul Murphy: The individual Departments within the Northern Ireland Civil Service, together with the Northern Ireland Office, have their own programmes of action to overcome the Year 2000 problem and these are being progressed. Northern Ireland Departments are following the guidance issued recently by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency within OPS. They are working towards a deadline of 1 December 1997 to have fully costed and prioritised plans in place. Accurate figures for the work therefore will be available towards the end of the year.

Crown Premises (Fire Certificates)

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Crown premises have fire certificates. [8635]

Majorie Mowlam: Following acceptance of Sir Reginald Doyle's Report into the fire at Parliament Buildings, a 2 year target was set for complete certification coverage of the Northern Ireland Government Estate.

As at 11 June 1997 there are 239 certifiable premises.

Certificates have been issued in respect of 200. In a further 6 buildings, only parts of which are occupied by the Crown, all necessary work in the Crown portion has been completed to the satisfaction of the certifying authority. Certificates will be issued once landlords have completed the necessary work in their portions.

Fire safety measures are ongoing at 12 buildings, including some where the work forms part of a major repair and refurbishment scheme.

In a further 15 cases the implementation of the work has been deferred because of significant operational requirements or imminent vacation of the premises.

There are six certifiable buildings recently added to the database. Measures are in hand to have these premises inspected and any work for fire certification purposes implemented as soon as possible.

WALES

British Aerospace (Broughton)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of jobs provided by the construction of wings and fuselage for the Raytheon Hawker Executive Jet Aircraft at the British Aerospace (AIRBUS) site, Broughton, Flintshire. [8290]

Mr. Hain: I understand that 440 people are currently employed on this work.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of jobs at the British Aerospace (AIRBUS) factory in Flintshire. [8289]

Mr. Hain: I understand that 2,876 people are currently employed at British Aerospace (including 440 employed on the construction of wings and fuselage for the Raytheon Hawker Jet Aircraft).

CELTEC

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the allegations relating to the North Wales Tec (CELTEC); and what action he proposes to take. [7894]

Mr. Hain: Various anonymous allegations have been received by the Welsh Office which I have asked officials to pursue. I will write to the hon. Member when their enquiries have been completed.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 4 July, Official Report column 294, who provided the legal opinion; who conducted the economic analysis on the barrage; and if he will place copies of the reports in the Library. [7784]

Mr. Ron Davies [holding answer 10 July 1997]: My officials have on my behalf undertaken a review of the barrage project. I have also considered fresh legal advice, particularly on the status of the project in relation to European Directives.

Their advice to me included an assessment of potential financial costs. Committed expenditure on the scheme is around £140 million. Failure to proceed, involving clearance of the Bay and contractual penalties, could add over £30 million to this. None of these amounts would be recoverable and would represent fruitless expenditure if the project were abandoned.

I also gave weight to the legitimate expectations of those who have invested in the Bay—and are still doing so—in the belief that the barrage was a key priority in the regeneration of South Cardiff and would be completed, creating the waterfront that has been central to the Bay's investment promotion strategy. Setting aside estimates of future growth, ventures recently announced or at an advanced stage of discussion alone involve investment of some £200 million, bringing major development and employment benefits to the area.

The Commission have accepted that the compensation measures proposed would be adequate to meet the requirements of Article 6(4) of the Habitats Directive.

For these reasons, I have felt bound to conclude that the only proper course open to me was not to intervene and to allow the project to proceed.

TREASURY

Energy Taxation

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals for harmonised energy taxation are currently under discussion at European Union level. [6091]

Dawn Primarolo: The Energy Products Directive is currently under discussion. An explanatory memorandum on the proposal, COM(97)30—full name "Proposal for a Council Directive Restructuring the Community Framework for the Taxation of Energy Products"—was deposited in the House of Commons Library on 21 May.

European Community Budget

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will publish the statement on the 1997 European Community Budget. [8726]

Mrs. Liddell: I have today laid before Parliament the Statement on the 1997 Community Budget, entitled "European Community Finances". This White Paper is the seventeenth in the series. As in the past, it covers annual budgetary matters and includes details of recent developments in European Community financial management and in countering fraud against the Community Budget. It also describes the budget for 1997 as adopted by the European Parliament and the United Kingdom's gross and net contributions to the Community Budget over the years 1994 to 1997.

Hydrocarbon Oil Duty

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the additional revenue which will be raised by the increase in hydrocarbon oil duty from an imposition up to the end of November. [7386]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 July 1997]: The revenue yield from starting the announced Budget measures on road fuels, gas oil and fuel oil duties on 2 July instead of end November 1997 is approximately £695 million.

11 Downing Street (Energy Efficiency)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures have been taken during the past five years to improve the energy efficiency of 11 Downing Street; at what point on the National Home Energy Rating Scheme 11 Downing Street lies; and what future measures are planned to increase its energy efficiency. [7103]

Mr. David Clark: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 10 July 1997 (Official Report columns 526-27).

DEFENCE

Open Government Review

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish his Department's submission to the Review on Open Government. [7250]

Dr. Reid: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Hereford (Mr. Keetch) on 4 July, Official Report, column 294.

Stragic Defence Review

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the role of the Defence Committee in the Strategic Defence Review. [6665]

Dr. Reid: The role of the Defence Select Committee is to examine the expenditure, administration and policy of the Ministry of Defence. In this context, I expect the Defence Select Committee, once established, to take a constructive and close interest as the Review progresses.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of his Department's (a) military and (b) civilian employees in Northern Ireland, indicating those whose function will be covered by the Strategic Defence Review. [6753]

Dr. Reid: As at 1 April 1997 there were:

(a) 11,822 members of the Regular Forces plus 2,818 Home Service full-time and 2,006 Home Service part-time members of the Royal Irish Regiment.

(b) 3,184 MOD civilian employees in Northern Ireland. The Strategic Defence review will cover all aspects of how our Armed Forces should be structured, equipped and deployed. It is too soon to comment on particular issues.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements are being made to invite submissions in connection with the Defence Review from informed commentators outside his Department. [7061]

Dr. Reid: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence invited all those with an interest in defence to submit contributions to the Strategic Defence Review when he launched the Review on 28 May. Many have been received, including from informed commentators, and they are being taken into account in work on the Review. Outside contributions are also being made through the joint Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Ministry of Defence seminars on the Review policy baseline, in which a wide cross-section of expertise has been involved.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in respect of his Strategic Defence Review (a) those subjects which are excluded and (b) those on which he has invited observations, submissions and evidence. [7376]

Dr. Reid: No subjects are excluded from the Strategic Defence Review. It is, however, based on the policy principles on which the Government was elected. In addition, some issues such as Service personnel policy will be considered as a matter of routine and not form a specific part of the Review process, although the impact on them of decisions taken in the Review may need to be considered.

We have invited inputs from all those with good ideas on policy and the best use of defence resources.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress he has made in arranging for input to the Strategic Defence Review to be developed on an all party basis. [7350]

Dr. Reid: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence wrote to Opposition Defence Spokesmen on 28 May informing them of the proposed conduct of the Strategic Defence Review and inviting their contributions to the debate. He has also written to every right hon. and hon. Member and spokespersons of all UK parties in the European Parliament inviting their inputs into the Review process. My noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement has written similarly to interested Peers. Contributions are also being made by invited representatives from the Opposition Parties at the joint Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Ministry of Defence seminars on the Review policy baseline.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which departmental meetings concerned with the Strategic Defence Review have been filmed for a television documentary. [7892]

Dr. Reid: No departmental meetings concerned with the strategic Defence Review have yet been filmed for a television documentary. A BBC TV documentary team has, however, filmed the first open seminar on the Strategic Defence Review, held at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 3 July.

St. Paul's Chaldean Church, Baghdad

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received regarding the search by an inspection team of the UN Special Commission of the St. Paul's Chaldean Church in Baghdad on 18 June. [7162]

Mr. Reid: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him today by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett).

Eurofighter

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum number of Eurofighter aircraft needed to meet the RAF's operational requirement. [7893]

Dr. Reid: The minimum number of Eurofighter aircraft required to replace our Tornado F3 and Jaguar aircraft is 232.

HEALTH

Smoking

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the responsibilities of the British tobacco industry in respect of public health, following the agreement in the United States concerning tobacco industry funding of health care for sufferers of smoking-related diseases. [5955]

Ms Jowell: The full details of the United States settlement will be studied as they become available. All aspects of tobacco control strategy, including this development, will be examined at our Summit meeting of national and international experts on 14 July.

Internet

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implications for the NHS of the increasing use of the Internet in informing patient choices of the nature and range of treatment available to those suffering from specific complaints. [5949]

Mr. Milburn: Sharing information about health and healthcare is central to the National Health Service Executive's Information Management and Technology Strategy for the NHS. The establishment of a networking infrastructure makes it possible to examine the potential for telemedicine and online booking of appointments, together with the electronic transfer of test requests and results. The network can also be used to deliver multimedia training material to clinicians, together with health educational and informative material that can be targeted at specific groups of patients and the public—for example, on smoking—that could be made available through general practitioner surgeries and clinics.

Scope for direct public access to health information is clearly more limited—it is paramount that there should be no compromise to the security and confidentiality of clinical information systems. Nevertheless there is considerable opportunity for the Department, the NHS Executive, and the NHS to make available generic health information and information about the NHS; an increasing number of trusts and health authorities are already creating publicly accessible websites on the Internet. There is interest within the Department and the NHS on extending these as communications possibilities open up through public library networks and the proposed public access kiosk.

Department of Health officials maintain liaison with industry to ensure their support and co-operation in exploiting the potential of electronic communications in the delivery of responsive and efficient healthcare, and take part in the Department of Trade and Industry's "IT for All" initiative.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the value of PFI projects above which NHS trusts must seek approval to proceed from his Department. [6823]

Mr. Milburn: The table shows the value of Private Finance Initiative projects above which National Health Service trusts must seek approval from the NHS Executive. This value is dependent on turnover.

Total Capital Cost/Whole Life Cost[1]	Outline and full business case approval must be sought from the NHS Executive if NHS trust turnover is:
Over £250,000	Under £30 million
Over £600,000	£30 million to £80 million
Over £1 million	Over £80 million

[1] Whole Life Cost relates to Information Management & Technology projects.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which of his approved PFI hospital projects have (a) outline planning permission and (b) full planning permission. [8148]

Mr. Milburn: "Approved" means that all the parties involved in the project (officials, Ministers, consortia and financiers) have reached agreement to the point where a commercial contract has been signed, thereby ensuring that the project can proceed successfully to financial close.

Two schemes, at Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust and Norfolk and Norwich Healthcare NHS Trust, have reached this stage and both have full planning permission.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is for each of the approved PFI hospital projects the amount expended to date on legal and financial advice and other consultancy fees by the relevant NHS trust. [8153]

Mr. Milburn: Information is now collected centrally on total expenditure on fees for external consultants involved in major Private Finance Initiative schemes. Two schemes, at Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust and Norfolk and Norwich Healthcare NHS Trust have reached agreement to proceed to financial close. The figures for the amounts expended to date by these two trusts on legal and financial fees is as follows:

Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust—£1,990,000

Norfolk and Norwich Healthcare NHS Trust—£2,200,000

Dental Services

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount was spent on Community Dental Services (a) nationally and (b) broken down by health authority in 1995–96 and 1996–97. [7382]

Mr. Milburn: The level of expenditure on the Community Dental Service is decided by individual health authorities. For 1995–96, we have only information provided by National Health Service trusts on their expenditure on Paediatric Dental Community Services. This expenditure in England was £88.295 million. Information for 1996–97 will not be available until the end of the year.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities have, during the last five years, asked the Secretary of State to use his powers under section 56 of the National Health Service Act 1977 over the provision of the general dental service and of the Community Dental Service in their areas. [7381]

Mr. Milburn: Where there is evidence of inadequate provision of general dental services in any area or part of an area, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health may use his powers under Section 56 of the National Health Service Act 1997 to help health authorities secure the adequate provision of services. This section does not apply to the Community Dental Service. The health authorities who have applied to the Secretary of State for Health since 1992 under Section 56 are shown in the table. The table is based on the new health authority boundaries which came into effect on 1 April 1996.

The majority of applications made by the former Family Health Service Authorities (FHSA), which were abolished in April 1996, have been assigned to the new health authorities which replaced them.

Where this was not possible the FHSA is indicated by an asterisk.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, under the guidelines set out in section D2 of the health service guidelines on primary care dental services (HSG (97) 4) of 14 March, anyone refused NHS dental treatment on the NHS because of a shortage of NHS dentists in their area will be entitled to use the Community Dental Service. [7385]

Mr. Milburn: Health authorities are expected to look first to the Community Dental Service to act as a safety net for patients unable to secure National Health Service treatment, before any alternative measures are considered.

Meals on Wheels

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements his Department has made for monitoring the quality of the meals supplied by meals-on-wheels services. [7191]

Mr. Boateng: "Caring for Quality in Day Services" is a standard which applies as part of an inspection process, copies of which are available in the Library. It encourages agencies to review their day service provision and offers guidance on how best to provide positive packages which include appropriate provision of meals services.

We would expect local authorities and health authorities to ensure that when providing meals services the preparation and delivery arrangements comply with proper hygiene and health standards. Nursing and care staff in hospital, residential and nursing home settings are expected to ensure that people in need of assistance with eating receive it.

Treatment (Ingredient Costs)

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average net ingredient cost per course of treatment was in each of the last 10 years for the British National Formulary Chapters in respect of infections, immunological products and vaccines, skin, the gastro-intestinal system and the respiratory system. [7232]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is shown in the table.

The average net ingredient cost per prescription dispensed in selected British National Formulary chapters, 1986–1996

Notes:

1. Therapeutic classes are based on the British National Formulary (September 1995).
2. Please note that the data up to 1990 are not consistent with data from 1991 onwards. Figures up to 1990 are based on fees and on a sample of 1 in 200 prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors only. Figures from 1991 are based on items and cover all prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists, appliance contractors dispensing doctors and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered.
3. The net ingredient cost refers to the cost of the drug before discounts and does not include any dispensing costs or fees.
4. Figures at 1996 prices are calculated using the GDP Deflator.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he is introducing to ensure that the additional resources for the NHS in the year 1998–99 released in his Budget are equitably distributed across health authorities throughout the United Kingdom. [7724]

Mr. Milburn: An announcement will be made about 1998–99 allocations in the autumn. We are committed to allocating resources as fairly as possible fully to reflect local population needs.

Questions relating to Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, respectively.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the amounts of additional funds that NHS hospital trusts would receive in 1998–99 using allocations for 1997–98 as the pro rata basis for this calculation. [7448]

Mr. Milburn: National Health Service trusts receive most of their income through contracts with health authorities and general practitioner fundholders. They are not directly funded by the Department of Health.

An announcement will be made about 1998–99 allocations to health authorities in the Autumn.

NHS Pay

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a list of staff grades employed in the NHS on hourly rates indicating hourly rates for those jobs for 1997–98. [7455]

Mr. Milburn: The pay of National Health Service staff on national terms and conditions of service is generally expressed on an annual or weekly basis. The current national pay rates for staff employed in the NHS are published in the various Advance Letters for each staff group, copies of which are available in the Library.

PFI (North Staffordshire)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what legal fees have so far been paid to consultants in respect of PFI proposals in North Staffordshire. [7450]

Mr. Milburn: North Staffordshire Combined Healthcare National Health Service Trust have incurred costs of £26,000 to date relating to fees paid to external legal consultants engaged as part of the Private Finance Initiative scheme.

Health Care Review (London)

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for the review of health care in London (a) the expected completion date and (b) the cost of conducting the review. [8262]

Mr. Milburn: The Independent Advisory Panel undertaking the London review have been asked to report by the end of October this year. The cost of the review will be low.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the advisory panel on health services in London is empowered to review and make recommendations on any future service changes in London currently planned to take place after the period of the review. [7879]

Mr. Milburn: Decisions on all service changes in London after the completion of the review will take into account the recommendations of the panel.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the advisory panel on health services in London is required to work in partnership with the NHS Executive to establish the financial implications of all the currently proposed service changes at (a) Guy's hospital, (b) St. Thomas's hospital, (c) King's College hospital and (d) Lewisham hospital, including in each case their impact on other services; [7880]

(2) if the advisory panel on health services in London is required to consider the coherence of all current plans, including for capital investment of (a) Lambeth,

Southwark and Lewisham health authority, (b) Guy's and St. Thomas' hospital NHS trust, (c) Optimum health services NHS trust, (d) King's Healthcare NHS trust, (e) Lewisham hospital NHS trust and (f) Lewisham and Guy's Mental Health NHS trust; [7881]

(3) if the advisory panel on health services in London is (a) empowered and (b) required to review the provision of and planning for all health services within the area of the Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham health authority; [7883]

(4) if the advisory panel on health services in London is (a) empowered and (b) required to review the provision of and planning or all health services provided at and planned for the site of Guy's hospital; [7884]

(5) if the advisory panel on health services in London is (a) empowered and (b) required to review the provision of and planning for all health services provided by and planned for the Guy's and St. Thomas' hospital trust. [7885]

Mr. Milburn: The panel has been asked to ensure coherence in health authority and National Health Service trust plans, including proposals for capital investment, and to review health authority plans for 1998–99. The panel will consider plans for services by these health authorities and trusts within this context.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the criteria by which the future of St. Bartholomew's hospital, Queen Mary's Roehampton and Harold Wood and Oldchurch hospitals were singled our for specific reference in the terms of reference of the advisory panel on health services in London. [7882]

Mr. Milburn: It is not too late to review these proposals and we want to be sure that the right decisions are taken in terms of meeting the needs of local people. Changes currently proposed in these three areas are of genuine concern to the public and to health professionals.

Clinical Services

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he classifies haemodialysis as a clinical service; [8152]

(2) if he will publish a full list of clinical services available through the national health service; [8150]

(3) what is his definition of a clinical service. [8149]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 10 July 1997, column 579.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list each of the clinical services which will be available at each of the PFI hospitals on his approved list of PFI projects. [8151]

Mr. Milburn: As part of the review of the Private Finance Initiative, officials will be considering what services may be included in PFI projects and are aiming to produce a list of these by the end of the year.

Aircraft Disinfectant Tanks

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his Department's letter of 20 June, POH (3) 5437/5 if he will assess the advantages of requiring airlines to add (a) glutaralydehyde and (b) other water-soluble oils active against viruses, to aircraft disinfectant tanks. [7934]

Ms Jowell: There would be no advantage in adding glutaraldehyde, or similar disinfectants, to aircraft sewage tanks because the normal processes for treating such sewage are considered adequate for the protection of public health.

Solihull Hospital

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for mergers of NHS trusts in the Birmingham area; and if he will make a statement on their effect on the future of Solihull hospital. [8157]

Mr. Milburn: There are currently no proposals for trust mergers in the Birmingham area. In April 1996, Solihull hospital merged with Birmingham Heartlands NHS Trust to form Birmingham Heartlands and Solihull NHS trust (Teaching). The merger secured the future of Solihull Hospital and local services for the people of Solihull. There are no plans to change this arrangement.

District General Hospitals

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the non-construction costs were of the last district general hospital to be built; and which it was. [8146]

Mr. Milburn: There is no recognised definition of non-construction costs.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the average cost of the professional work involved in preparing the plans and relevant project details for a district general hospital valued at (a) £50 million, (b) £100 million, (c) £150 million and (d) £200 million. [8154]

Mr. Milburn: Costs vary depending on whether the scheme is new build or refurbishment, the method of fee acceptance and other factors.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average time taken by his Department from project inception to formal approval for the last five district general hospitals to be built. [8147]

Mr. Milburn: Project inception is not a standard term, so the information requested is not available.

Norfolk and Norwich Hospitals

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions the construction consortium negotiating the PFI contract for the Norfolk and Norwich hospitals prevented commercial close being achieved by a request for further contractual negotiations. [8156]

Mr. Milburn: The procurement has been conducted using the negotiated procedure of the European Union procurement regulations. Commercial close cannot be achieved until all negotiations have been concluded to the satisfaction of both parties.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Road Schemes

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list for each road scheme under construction the projected costs and the actual costs in the same format as in the answer of 16 October 1995, Official Report, columns 75–80. [6871]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency to write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Joan Walley, dated 11 July 1997:

As you know, the Minister of Transport in London, Miss Glenda Jackson, has asked the Agency to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question concerning road schemes under construction. Lawrie Haynes, Chief Executive, has asked me to reply as he is away from the office at present.

You asked for details of projected costs for each of these schemes together with actual costs. As these schemes are currently under construction and consequently final accounts have not been agreed with the contractors concerned, it is not possible to supply the actual costs. To publish estimates of the final outturns would pre-empt discussions still in progress with the contractors concerned. I therefore enclose a list of all schemes currently under construction with details of their tender costs.

The Procurement strategy which the Agency announced on 24 June 1997 is aimed at improving cost control of our projects.

Route	Scheme	Tender cost £m
M1/M621	Link Road, Leeds MB	15.44
M5	J18–19 Widening, City of Bristol, North West Somerset	50.00
M25	J8–10 Widening, Surrey	93.39
M65	Blackburn Southern Bypass Contract 1, Lancashire	65.86
M65	Blackburn Southern Bypass Contract 2, Lancashire	79.95
M66	Denton–Middleton Contract 1, Tameside MB, Oldham MB	101.88
M66	Denton–Middleton Contract 2, Oldham MB, Manchester MB	48.93
A12	Hackney Wick–M11 Link Contract 1, LB Hackney, Waltham Forest, Newham	25.26

Vehicle Exhausts

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department (a) is undertaking, (b) has evaluated and (c) has conducted into the effects on pedestrians of the positioning of exhaust outlets of heavy goods vehicles and public service vehicles at ground level; if he will introduce legislation to require repositioning of exhaust outlets at the top of vehicles, along the lines of that introduced in the United States; and if he will make a statement. [7460]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government is not aware of any research into the effects on pedestrians of the positioning of exhaust outlets of heavy goods and public service vehicles and has not considered making it mandatory to reposition exhaust outlets at the top of vehicles. It is however a requirement that buses have their exhaust pipes at the rear or on the off side of the vehicle.

Exhaust emissions from heavy vehicles are being addressed through a series of improvements in vehicle design and exhaust after-treatment systems, together with in-service enforcement measures, which are aimed at achieving a general standard of air quality. Although, against this background, it would not appear that the position of the exhaust pipe will have any significant impact on health, it is nevertheless a factor which we shall take into account as we explore with industry how even cleaner and more efficient vehicles may be produced.

Coach Operators (Disabled Travellers)

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to meet representatives of coach and tour operators to discuss (a) the priority reservation of front seats in coaches for disabled people and (b) other improvements to accommodate the needs of the disabled traveller. [7737]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The allocation of seats in an operational issue for coach operators.

We are, however, actively pursuing other improvements to ensure coaches are easier to use by disabled people. Discussions have been taking place with the bus and coach industry, both operating and manufacturing, to consider the detail of the accessibility regulations which will be introduced under the Disability Discrimination Act.

Bridges

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the locations of all the lift-up bridges and swing bridges on trunk roads in Britain. [7856]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency to reply to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Bob Blizzard, dated 11 July 1997:

The Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions has asked Lawrie Haynes, Chief Executive, to reply to your recent question about the number of lift-up and swing bridges on trunk roads in Britain. Lawrie Haynes has asked me to reply as he is away from the office at present.

We do not have records of bridges in Wales, Scotland or Northern Ireland. These would be kept by the respective Government Departments. There are three lift-up bridges and five swing bridges on trunk roads in England, they are:

Lift-up Bridges:

Lowestoft Bascule Bridge—A12 over Lowestoft inner harbour, Suffolk

Breydon Bridge—A12 at Great Yarmouth, Norfolk

Kingsferry Bridge—A249 over River Swale, Isle of Sheppey, Kent*

Swing Bridges:

Cross Keys Bridge—A17 over River Nene, Sutton Bridge Lincs

Fosdyke Bridge—A17 over River Welland, South of Fosdyke, Lincs

Selby Bridge—A19 over River Ouse, Selby, North Yorks.#

Acton Bridge—A49 over River Weaver, North of Weaverham, Cheshire.†

Myton Bridge—A63 over River Hull, Kingston-upon-Hull, Humberside.

* Jointly owned with Railtrack

# In Local Authority ownership

† Owned by British Waterways Board

I hope this information is helpful.

Traffic Noise

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy for reducing the noise of traffic on motorways and trunk roads which pass through residential areas; and if he will make funds available for noise-reducing programmes. [8122]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The policy towards the mitigation of the noise of traffic on motorways and trunk roads near to residential properties derives from the Land Compensation Act 1973 and the associated Noise Insulation Regulations. On roads or motorways constructed or improved since 17 October 1969, appropriate measures to mitigate the impact of traffic noise have been provided and owners of affected properties have been able to claim additional compensation for the consequential lowering of the value of their property. It is not our policy to provide further measures to reduce the noise of traffic on trunk roads and motorways after the works have been completed and there are no plans to allocate funds for this purpose. In exceptional cases, where a trunk road was built before 17 October 1969 and not subsequently improved, noise barriers have been provided where it could be shown that these would be a feasible and cost—effective alternative to noise insulation of a significant number of affected properties, had that option been available.

Kingskerswell Bypass

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his Department's policy towards the building of the Kingskerswell Bypass. [7877]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by me to the hon. Member for Torbay (Mr. Sanders) on 16 May, columns 4-5.

Pupils (Bus Safety)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if drivers of private buses are entitled to refuse to carry a pupil they believe will cause dangers to safety on the bus. [7821]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Public Service Vehicle (Conduct of Drivers, Inspectors, Conductors and Passengers) Regulations 1990 entitle a bus driver both to remove any passenger who puts at risk or unreasonably impedes or causes discomfort to any other passenger or to operating staff, and to request a police constable to remove such a person. The driver also has responsibility under general legislation to exercise proper control of the vehicle, and to ensure that the vehicle does not exceed its legal carrying capacity.

If the vehicle is operating under contract, any additional grounds on which drivers may refuse the right of carriage are a matter for the operator and the body hiring it under the terms of the contract. A relevant factor in the case of a vehicle hired by a school may be whether the pupils are accompanied by a supervisor or not.

Road Traffic Reduction Act

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what progress has been made on the publication of guidelines to local authorities regarding their responsibilities under the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997; and if he will make a statement. [8492]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Work is under way on the drawing up of guidance to local authorities on meeting their responsibilities under the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997. The Government intends issuing this in draft later this year to allow interested parties to comment on its contents.

Vehicle Emission

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on his proposals to involve local authorities in checking vehicle emissions at the roadside. [8489]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government hopes to make an announcement shortly about proposals to involve local authorities in checking vehicle emissions at the roadside. The proposals will be subject to public consultation and parliamentary approval.

Railtrack

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he is taking to ensure that the imposition of the windfall tax on Railtrack plc does not affect (a) investment, (b) charges and (c) employment; and if he will make a statement. [7571]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that the Rail Regulator's initial analysis suggests that the windfall tax will not affect Railtrack's ability to deliver its existing investment commitments at current levels of access charges.

Employment issues are a matter for Railtrack.

Road Accidents (Alcohol)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the effectiveness of Government advertising to prevent road accidents involving alcohol; and if he will make a statement. [7570]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government campaigns to prevent road accidents involving alcohol have been instrumental in changing driver behaviour and making drinking and driving unacceptable to the public.

All campaigns are evaluated for effectiveness through market research and public attitudes to drinking and driving are regularly monitored. Research carried out over the last twenty years, among men who drive and also drink outside the home, shows that:

- those who had driven after drinking on at least one occasion in the last week had fallen from 51 per cent. to 25 per cent.
- the proportion drinking 6+ units (1 unit equals about ½ pint of ordinary strength beer, 25ml of spirits or 100ml wine) and then driving on at least one occasion in the last week fell from 15 per cent. to 4 per cent.
- The proportion claiming to leave the car at home increased from 54 per cent. to 75 per cent. and the proportion claiming to arrange for someone else to drive increased from 48 per cent. to 61 per cent.
- There has also been a marked reduction in belief that it is difficult to avoid drinking and driving in the social context (61 per cent. to 25 per cent.) and that knowing you will have to drive spoils the evening.

These campaigns, together with enforcement action by police forces, have helped reduce drink/drive fatalities from 1,550 in 1982 to 540 in 1995.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Motor Insurance

Mr. Dismore: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the draft Fourth EU Motor directive concerning motor insurance. [6490]

Mrs. Roche: In its recent Communication, "Financial Services: Enhancing Consumer Confidence", the European Commission has indicated its intention to bring forward, by autumn 1997, proposals for a fourth directive on motor liability insurance to address the problems faced by persons who have suffered injury or loss in a road accident while visiting another member State. In the course of drawing up its proposals for this directive, the Commission has been holding discussions with member State representatives. The Government is participating in these informal discussions but will wish to consider its position further when the Commission presents a formal proposal to the Council of Ministers.

ECGD

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will place in the Library a copy of the consultation document which was the basis of the Export Credits Guarantee Department's consultation exercise with its customers about its future policy on the disclosure of information. [6428]

Mrs. Roche: No consultation document as such was produced for this exercise, but ECGD wrote to its major customers on 29 October 1996 regarding its policy on disclosure of business information. I will arrange for a copy of this letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Aid and Trade Provision

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received from business about the advantages of retaining the aid and trade provision. [6882]

Mrs. Roche: I have received a number of representations from business about the advantages of retaining the Aid and Trade Provision scheme.

Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the role of the Minister for Trade and Competitiveness in Europe in respect of competition issues relating to the oil, chemical, petrochemical and biotechnology industries. [7423]

Mrs. Beckett: None. Competition issues affecting these and all other industries are determined by the Under-Secretary for Competition and Consumer Affairs and myself, as appropriate.

Hawk Aircraft Contract (Indonesia)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if an export licence (a) has been granted or (b) is expected to be granted, in respect of the 1996 contract with Indonesia for an additional 16 British Aerospace Hawk aircraft. [5889]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 9 July 1997]: Export licences were granted in November 1996 to British Aerospace for 16 Hawk aircraft and equipment for Indonesia. These covered a contract signed in 1996, and represent the second phase of Hawk sales to Indonesia agreed in principle in 1993. They cover the 16 aircraft subject to the second of the contracts referred to in the then Minister for Defence Procurement's answer on 5 February 1997, Official Report, column 621, to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridge (Mrs. Campbell).

My predecessor had been wrongly advised when, in announcing the grant of these licences on 21 November 1996, Official Report, column 676, he referred to them as covering the second consignment of Hawk aircraft in respect of the 1993 contract. Licences for 24 aircraft under the 1993 contract had already been granted as announced by the then Minister for Trade on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1081.

The error arose from a mistaken interpretation on the part of officials that the 1993 contract covered both the original order of aircraft and equipment licensed in 1995, and the second phase to follow. This second phase had, however, separate contractual arrangements.

Thus, export licences have been issued on two occasions, first, covering 24 aircraft and equipment (announced 19 December 1995) and secondly covering 16 aircraft and equipment (announced 21 November 1996).

Procedures are being reviewed with a view to avoiding a repetition of this regrettable error.

Ministers (Shareholdings)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in what circumstances a Minister in her Department with company shareholdings would be prevented from entering into collective ministerial discussions on those companies. [5629]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 1 July 1997]: In all circumstances, except where shares are in a blind trust.

Telecommunications

Mr. Burstow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to legislate to give OFTEL the power to require BT and other telecom providers to make available (i) textphones and (ii) similar items of equipment to their customers. [6452]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 9 July 1997]: My Department has no plans at present to introduce legislation to give OFTEL such powers. There is a competitive market developing for provision of such equipment with features that would benefit those people with special needs. I also understand that the Typetalk service is currently the subject of discussions between the Director-General for Telecommunications, BT and Typetalk which are likely to result in a significant improvement in service. My officials will continue to maintain their close contacts with the UK organisations representing people with special needs.

Industrial Development Act (Grants)

Mr. Fallon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the grants made under the Industrial Development Act 1982 since her appointment. [7676]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Information on Regional Selective Assistance grants, the principal scheme, is commercially confidential until the first payment has been made. In line with established procedures, details of such grants, over £75,000, are regularly published in Labour Market Trends. Of a total of 212 offers of grant made since 2 May 1997, information can be given on the following case:

Company	Travel to work area	Grant offered
Worton Mile Ltd. (General mechanical engineers)	Wakefield & Dewsbury	£245,000

All other cases have yet to receive a payment. There were also seven Regional Investment Grants, totalling £58,000, in the same period.

Consumers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what her Department is doing to promote the Young Consumer of the Year competition and National Consumer Week. [7780]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Both National Consumer Week and the Young Consumer of the Year competition are organised by the Institute of Trading Standards Administration (ITSA). I have already agreed to take part in a "phone in" on national radio on 25 November as one element of this year's National Consumer Week (24–28 November 1997) and my Department is exploring with ITSA what other useful involvement we could offer.

I understand I am the first Minster for consumer affairs formally to address the finalists. My Department is discussing with ITSA what assistance might be helpful in promoting next year's competition and I urge all hon. Members to encourage their local schools to participate.

Information Society

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her Department's definition of the Information Society. [7776]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 10 July 1997]: The Information Society is a concept encompassing the converging information technology, electronics and communications industries, their products and services and the infrastructure of the connecting networks. It involves the ability electronically to access very large quantities of information and entertainment on demand, to interact with and manipulate large quantities of data, to transact remotely and to communicate while on the move. It is a society where interactions and events are no longer determined by geographical position or physical separation. It will have a major impact on the economic and social fabric of our lives, and should be developed to create opportunities and benefits for all citizens.

Investigations Unit and Insolvency Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much will be spent on reinforcing the work of her Department's Investigations Unit and the Insolvency Service. [7782]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 10 July 1997]: The Comprehensive Spending Review will look at all aspects of public expenditure to ensure that taxpayers' money is being spent so as to fulfil the Government's manifesto commitments. It would not be appropriate to comment on individual areas of expenditure prior to its conclusion. Within the DTI, the Review will include the work of the Insolvency Service and of Investigations and Enforcement Directorate and the resources devoted to these areas.

Disqualified Directors

Mr. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how her Department proposes to name and publicise directors who are disqualified by the courts. [7779]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 10 July 1997]: Following the making of a disqualification order the court concerned must notify the Registrar of Companies so that the details can be entered of the Register of Disqualified Directors. My officials in Companies House and the Insolvency Service are considering what further information relating to disqualified directors could be made available and in what form. When a disqualification order is made a local press release is issued which gives the full names of the directors disqualified, the name, trading style and address of the company (or companies) which failed together with summary of the unfit conduct found by the court.

The Department also issues a quarterly press release to the main media outlets covering disqualification statistics and notable disqualification cases which occurred during the period. This release is also copied to number of accountancy, legal and business journals which follow up particular cases which interest them. I am concerned to ensure that the profile of this area of the Department's activities remains as high as possible and that the public generally are made more aware of the steps which are being taken to deal with directors who abuse the privilege of limited liability.

Consumer Education

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to develop a system of consumer education; and what budget will be allocated to the project. [7786]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 10 July 1997]: A wide range of current activity on consumer education and information is supported by the Government. This ranges from our support for advice and information from the Citizens Advice Service to specific advisory campaigns such as those on fireworks safety. We are placing increasing emphasis on providing consumers with information on their rights under new legislation, such as that on Timeshare, from the point of introduction of the legislation. Consumer education will be subject to review, as will all policy areas, under the comprehensive spending review of my department.

Export Forum

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who are the members of the new Export Forum; how they were appointed; and if she will set out the forum's terms of reference. [7678]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 July 1997]: My Noble Friend the Minister for Trade and my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office announced yesterday the membership of the Export Forum. This is as follows:

Tom Harris DTI (Chairman)

Sir Andrew Burns FCO (Alternate Chairman)

Peter Godwin (British Overseas Trade Board)

Robert Beresford (Overseas Projects Board)

Ken Jackson (Trades Union Congress)

Tony Bastock (Chemical Industries Association)

Glenys Goucher (Chief Executive, Business Link North Derbyshire)

Ron Taylor (British Chambers of Commerce)

Ian Campbell (Institute of Export)

Emmanuel Cotter (North London Business Development Agency)

Richard Brown (Aston Fittings Manufacturing Ltd.)

Dorothy MacKenzie (Dragon International Consulting)

Garry Campkin (CBI)

Ted Dilley (Cable and Wireless)

Hector Munro (British Council)

Roy Leighton (British Invisibles)

Victor Lunn-Rockcliffe (Exports Credit Guarantee Department)

David Orchard (Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food)

John Middleton (Department of Health)

Richard Wood (Department of the Environment)

Dilwyn Griffith (HM Treasury)

Martin Briggs (Government Office for the East Midlands)

Bryony Lodge (Department of National Heritage)

Members were invited to participate in the Forum after wide consultations both within Whitehall and with industry. The membership reflects a broad range of interests and expertise in area of international trade. The Forum's terms of reference are to consider:

1. The effectiveness with which official support is provided for:

   (i) trade fairs;

   (ii) trade missions;

   (iii) sales leads;

   (iv) export marketing research;

   (v) UK firms bidding for overseas projects;

   (vi) other export promotion activities.

2. The current arrangements for interdepartmental consultation.

3. The current arrangements for consultation with business.

4. The interface between the Overseas Trade Services and Business Links.

5. The present system for establishing market and sectoral priorities.

6. The marketing and branding of official export promotion services.

To reach conclusions and recommendations by the autumn, without prejudice to the outcome of the President's comprehensive review of DTI's expenditure.

Small Shops

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps her Department is taking to prevent small shops' business being eroded by shops with charitable status which sell new goods. [7778]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 July 1997]: I refer the hon. Member to the comments I made about charity shops, made during the debate on small retail shops on 2 July, Official Report, column 229.

Export Promotion

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list all of her Department's staff posted abroad concerned with export promotion. [7683]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 10 July 19[illegible]]: The following DTI staff are on loan to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to serve in commercial sections overseas:

Name	Posting
Malcolm Day	Hong Kong
Stuart Pyle	Moscow
Richard Higgins	Toronto
Susan Bishop	Peking
Michael Hurley	Kuwait
Stuart Gill	Chicago
Steven Smith	Ho Chi Minh City
Steven Truswell	Moscow
Andrew Harrison	Harare
Simon Carter	New York
Deborah Clarke	Taipei
Roger Newell	New Delhi
Peter Stephenson	Lagos
Bernard Wilson	Amman
Paul Grey	Hong Kong
Sylvia Parnell	Ljubljana
Harold Formstone	Helsinki

In addition, 8 staff are currently on training attachments to commercial sections overseas.

Science and Technology Budget

Mr. Lansley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the comprehensive spending review of the science and technology budget will (a) commence and (b) be completed. [7587]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 10 July 1997]: The Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) will review all aspects of public expenditure including that on Science. The CSR will see that taxpayers' money is being spent effectively in order to fulfil the Government's manifesto commitments. It is already underway and will take 12 months to complete.

Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the activities undertaken by the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths), to promote tourism in the United Kingdom. [7406]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 July 1997]: My hon. Friend has met representatives of the outbound travel industry who employ over 35,000 people in the UK and contribute over £1 billion to the British economy.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what engagements the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths) has fulfilled outside the United Kingdom. [7407]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 July 1997]: Since taking up post on 5 May 1997 my hon. Friend has undertaken the following engagements:

visit to Antwerp for the purpose of a speaking engagement at the ITSA conference on 24 June and various functions recognised by my Department; visit to Athens for the purpose of a speaking engagement at the IT conference on 28 June and various meetings to promote British trade in Greece by 20 UK companies on 25, 26 and 27 June.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the engagements for the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths), outside the United Kingdom during the next three months. [7404]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 July 1997]: None.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which Minister will be responsible for recommending a course of action to her on the MMC investigation into the travel and tourism industry; and what is the current role of the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths), in the inquiry. [7405]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 July 1997]: My hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, South (Mr. Griffiths), has made it clear that he will stand aside from consideration of the MMC report into tour operators and travel agents. The report is not expected until November.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 297

SESSION 1997–98

30th June—11th July 1997

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
